THE AMERICAN
$8.00 Typewriter.

This is a well-made, practical machine, writing capitals, small letters, figures, and punctuation marks (71 in all) on full width paper, just like a $100 instrument. It is the first of its kind ever offered at a popular price for which the above claim can be truthfully made. It is not a toy, but a typewriter built for and capable of REAL WORK. While not as rapid as the large machines sometimes become in expert hands, it is still at least as rapid as the pen and has the advantage of such simplicity that it can be understood and mastered almost at a glance. We cordially commend it to helpful parents and teachers everywhere.

Writes capitals, small letters, figures and marks—71 in all.
Writes just like a $100 machine.
No Shift Keys. No Ribbon. Prints from the type direct.
Prints on flat surface.
Writing always in sight.
Corrections and insertions easily made.
Takes any width of paper or envelope up to 8½ inches.
Easy to understand learned in 5 minutes
Weighs only four pounds—most portable.
Compact, takes up but little room.
Built solid and simple; can't get out of order.
Capital and lower case keyboard alike—easily mastered.
More "margin play" for the small letters which do most of the work.
Takes good letter-press copies.

Packed securely in handsome case and expressed to any address on receipt of price, $8.00, in registered letter, money order or certified check. We guarantee every machine, and are glad to answer all inquiries for further information as to this machine and also the "Yost."

THE OLD ROMAN SENATE.

Its Origin, Growth and Process of Gravitation to the Eternal City.

We read in many of our histories of Rome that Romulus founded the senate and gave to it its original functions. This would be a good capstone to his glory, but unfortunately for him the senate was a primitive institution, common to all the Latins, and reached back to a period long anterior to the separation of the stocks.

In the comparatively early history of the Latin race there was a natural division into tribes or tribal families—not independent social units, but integral parts of a political community held together by a mutual observance of law, legal redress, and united action in offense and defense. A fixed local center was essential, at which the people could assemble to make laws and to defend themselves against a common foe.

The situation most favorable for this purpose would be some elevated position, which was called "capitolium," from "caput," the head; hence our word capitol. From this eminence the cognate tribes could be summoned by signals, usually the lowering of a flag. This custom of keeping a flag waving while no danger was near continued for several centuries at Rome, until it was considered a guarantee of peace and harmony, and all felt secure as long as the flag floated from the Janiculum hill. It is interesting to note in this connection that a flag may be seen above our houses of congress as long as these bodies are in session.

At this point, in the earlier days, a large encampment would be formed, and as the sessions became more frequent the camp would take on permanency and finally become a city—the chief city in the nation, the capital. As the population increased and industrial avocations grew it was deemed best to have a fixed time for assembling, and so the eighth day was set as the regular time for meeting for intercourse, sacrifices and the transaction of business.

By and by the cantons became interdependent, and questions of common weal arose, resulting in a league or confederation of clans. As this time the council met first with one canton, then with another, having in each case as a presiding officer the chief of the clan within whose territory lay the meeting place. This wandering finally led to confusion, and by common consent a central point, Mount Alba, became the sole meeting place, and thus Rome was the capital.—Peterson's Magazine.

The Giant of the Land Crabs.

The titan of the land crab family is Birgus latro, commonly called the "purse crab," a resident of the islands of the Indian and South Pacific oceans. Mature adults are frightful looking creatures, full 2 feet in length and from 8 to 14 inches across the back, capable of rearing back and pinching a man hip high when acting in defense, which they are not slow to do if molested. The pinchers are of course on the first pair of legs, which are large and powerful; the second and third pairs are armed with but single claws, while the fourth pair—which are much smaller than either the second or third and not one-tenth as strong as the "pincher carriers"—are provided with a pair of weak little nippers. A fifth pair of legs, but so small as to simply be useless rudiments, are attached to the body near the abdomen.

Although not identical with the cocoanut crab, described in "Notes for the Curious" on Dec. 24, 1892, its habits are similar to those of that curious species of the crustacea. Like the real cocoanut crab, it climbs the cocoanut tree and cuts off the nuts with its powerful pinchers. When a sufficient number have been secured he slowly and carefully descends to the ground, pulls the husks from the nuts and, after striking them over a stone or root, devours the meat at leisure.—St. Louis Republic.

Sixty Letters a Day.

A correspondent is kind enough to send us the following letter from the late Sir Andrew Clark, written to a patient on Feb. 15, 1890. It shows what an overwhelmingly busy man he always was: 'Dear Mr. ——, I regret exceedingly that you have suffered so much inconvenience at my hands, and have had such trouble to get an answer to your letters.' This is how it has happened; and from this you will see how terrible a burden letters become to a man occupied as I am. I receive over 60 letters a day, and even on easy days it is all but impossible to keep head with them. But sometimes it is quite impossible, and letters must give way to seeing patients. Until yesterday I had a country consultation every day. No letter was answered on those days, and the number rose to over 300. On returning I had these letters on one hand and unseen patients on the other. In such a conflict patients must conquer and letters must succumb. The mere reading of these letters, sometimes badly written and often crossed, is no small labor, and I am toiling at it now. Here is a prescription for the tonic referred to, with my renewed apologies."—Pall Mall Budget.

Egyptian Poses.

The first thing that a western observer remarks in the pose of Egyptian drawings of the human figure is that it is an impossible combination according to our ideas. We see the face in profile, the eye full length, the chest in front view and the legs sidewise. But before we condemn this as contrary to nature it is well, as Professor W. M. Flinders Petrie suggests, to see what the attitude of a modern Egyptian is and how far our notions are correct.

To avoid all ideas of posing for the subject, he selects the figure of a boy from a large group that was photographed without any special aim by a Cairo dealer. In the kneeling figure are seen the profile of the face, the eye full, the chest in front view and the legs sidewise. Everything that we have heard condemned as unnatural and impossible in the ancient sculpture is seen in the modern native, without any constraint, when simply taking an easy position.—Popular Science Monthly.

Corrected the General.

The story comes from Washington of a senator's wife who entertained at dinner General Blank. As all the world knows, General Blank prides himself even more upon his knowledge of dining than upon his skill in warfare. Imagine his emotions, therefore, when at a certain point in the elaborate menu his hostess leaned forward and sweetly called out to him, "General, I know you will forgive me for telling you, but you're using the wrong fork!"

A Hint to Housekeepers.

It is a bad plan in putting paper on pantry shelves to use newspapers with love stories in them. Send your daughter there for butter, and you will find her half an hour later perched on a flour barrel and almost standing on her head trying to read a story.—Atchison Globe.

HER MATRIMONIAL EFFORTS.

They Were Varied and Interesting and Mom Became Boss at Last.

A southern lady of an inquiring turn of mind asked her old colored mammy whether she considered marriage a failure.

"Well, chile," replied Mom Lucy, assuming a judicial air, "dat depen's on de kine of man you gits. I has had 'sperience with fo' husban's, and I tel's you, Honey, dey ain't no countin on de men folks. In co'tin time dey is sweet and soft as de bes' m'lasses, but come time you's mawried laike as not dey'll correc' you wid de flatiron.

"My fust was a peart, laikely young buck, mighty souple in de j'ints w'en dey was dancin to de quarters, but wuk time he plum crippled up with de rheumatiz or some oder miz'ry. W'en he tuk sick sho' 'nuff, he daid befo' he sho' hisself dat he warn't playin 'possum. Cato was de nex' one. He was de masterfullest, ondaciousest critter, dey warn't no foolishness 'bout him. He cud wuk in de day an dance all de night, an w'en he drored de bow 'cross de fiddle he cud mek de boys an gals dance de night fro', or set 'em wail en an moanin with de mo'nin tunes. But Lord! Mistis! he was dat jallous dat he 'spec' me to be def an dumb an blin to all de worl but hissel; dat's huccome de disagreemen's with de Baptis' preacher. Cato one got kill, 'cause de preacher was a quickes' with him razzer.

"Den I mawrie de preacher, an I nebber sorry but one't, an dat was fus, las' an all de time. To see dat man a-stan'in up in de church, a-trompin up an down a-rost'um, his han's outstretch', de tears a-droppin f'om his eyes; his voice a-wailin de words a-fallin f'om his mouf laik honey f'om de honeycomb, you'd t'ink I raidy for his hebenly crown. But he lis'way de sweetness with his sto' clothes an de pickaninnies'd a heap ruther dat de bibil cotch 'em dan dere paw. Bimeby e cotch de feber, an I 'clar to goodness Mistis, dat de preacher's fune'al was a joyfulles' occasion sence we'uns' mawridge.

"Well, Lucy," said her mistress, "I would not have thought you would marry again."

"Laws, honey, dere was two reasons 'fust, I had done got in de habit ob bein' married, and nex', seein de ways I had been bossed by the fust t'ree, it sholy seemed laike it come time fur me to do some bossin my own self, so I lay low t'well come across de quietes', meekes' niggah in de kentry an mawried him, dry so!"—And a few minutes later Mom Lucy could have been heard assuring her long sufering "fourth" that he was "the onariest, wuthlessest niggah on de face of de livin worl."—New York Journal.

Recognized the Keys.

The proprietor of a traveling circus announced that on a certain night a trained elephant would play the Russian hymn on a piano with its trunk. When the evening came, the circus was crowded to the roof with an expectant public. After the usual performances had been gone through four men carried in a cottage piano, which they placed in the center of the arena. Then the intelligent animal was brought in, he walked slowly three times around the ring, and then amid the keenest excitement advanced to the piano.

With a slight movement of his trunk he opened the keyboard, but scarce had he done so when a sudden change came over his appearance. His eye dilated with rage and fear, he lifted his trunk in the air, and then with a wild scream of terror he rushed out of the arena. The proprietor of the circus and the elephant's keeper held a short and hurried consultation, and then they, too, left the ring.

After a few moments the circus proprietor entered again and announced with regret that the performance could not take place. The fact was, he said, that the elephant had recognized in the keyboard of the instrument a portion of the tusks of his long lost mother, who had fallen a prey to the ivory hunters of Africa.—London Million.

The Ticket Told a Tale.

Jenkins had left college. He had lived rather fast, but now he meditated matrimony, and settling down into the respectabilities. As an old aunt died and left him a little money, what was more natural than that he should redeem some of the many articles of clothing which had unfortunately deposited with his uncle in the days of his necessity? By a mishap, however, that esteemed aunt, obliging relative forgot to remove the tickets, and this led to an embarrassing contretemps. Full of kindness and pride in her dear boy, his mother, on his return to the paternal mansion, insisted on unpacking his boxes. In doing so, she first discovered an overcoat with an ominous looking label upon it.

"What a nuisance!" said Jenkins, in answer to her expression of surprise. "They must have forgotten to take off the ticket at that ball at Danceaway's, when I left my overcoat in the anteroom."

Mamma was satisfied, but when, shortly afterward, she found a pair of trousers bearing a similar label, imagine the puzzled surprise with which she exclaimed, "But surely, my darling, you didn't leave these in the anteroom too?"—London Tit-Bits.

A Vaccination Party.

The little daughter of a prominent physician issued invitations for a novel party, perhaps the only one of the kind which has ever been given. The mothers of the children in the families which the doctor attends have been made anxious by reports of the existence of smallpox, so a number of them requested him to vaccinate their children immediately. When he went home and mentioned it to his wife, she proposed they should have a little party and vaccinate their children and the others at the same time. When the invitation reached a house where there are three little brothers, the eldest, wiser than the others, promptly said: "Please, mother send my regrets right away. I don't want to go. I know what vaccinate means, and it hurts." Sugar coating the pill with the name "a party" did not fool him.—Louisville Courier Journal.

The Most Popular Novel.

What is the most popular novel among American readers? A poll of all the principal libraries in the United States, which appears in The Forum, shows that "David Copperfield" leads in popularity every work of fiction. The most popular nine novels in the order of their popularity are as follows: "David Copperfield," "Ivanhoe," "The Scarlet Letter," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Ben-Hur," "Adam Bede," "Vanity Fair," "Jane Eyre," "The Last Days of Pompeii." This is a complete refutation of the notion sometimes expressed, that Dickens and Scott and Thackeray have lost their hold. Our own greatest novelist, Nathaniel Hawthorne, comes high up in the list, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" appears likely to hold its own for all time.
