THE EDITOR'S TROUBLES.—When an editor makes a mistake in his paper all the world sees it and calls him a liar. Now a private citizen makes a mistake nobody knows it except a few friends, and they come around and ask the editor to keep it out of the paper. When the private citizen dies the editor is asked to write of all his good qualities and leave out the bad. When the editor dies, the private citizen says: "Now the old liar will get his deserts."

A FATAL ERROR.—The infant son of George Grant, of Bristol, P. Q., lost his life at that place a few nights ago. It appears that the little one was suffering with a cough, and Mr. Grant got up with the intention of giving it a spoonful of syrup of squills. Unfortunately he put his hand on the wrong bottle—one of carbolic acid, and administered a dose. The little sufferer lingered for several hours until a relapse came in death.

TO-NIGHT.—Don't forget the concert in the Lyceum to-night. The programme appears in another column, and speaks for itself. The interior of the Lyceum has been most artistically decorated for the occasion. There are rows of spruces along each side, and over the top of the stage across the front of the gallery and squalls. Unfortunately he put his hand on the wrong bottle—one of carbolic acid, and administered a dose. The little sufferer lingered for several hours until a relapse came in death.

ST. JOSEPH'S SOCIETY.—At the regular annual meeting of St. Joseph's Literary Society, held in their hall at Kelly's Cross on Dec. 29th, ult., the following officers were elected for the current year: President—John Bradley, (re-elected.) Bradley, John Kelly, and James Gorman.

LADY TO REST.—The mortal part of the late Charles Cairns was interred in the People's Cemetery yesterday afternoon. The funeral procession was one of the largest seen here for some time. The funeral was conducted by the Masonic fraternity, and both city lodges were largely represented. The pall-bearers were W. W. Stanley, Walter P. Donell, H. J. Worth, E. R. Brown, Duncan McLean, and George E. Hughes. Services were held at the house and grave of the late Donald McLeod, for many years keeper of the Dominion Building, took place this afternoon and was largely attended. Interment is at Marshfield.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. Daniel, in the presence of the immediate friends of the bride and groom. Miss Amelia J. Palmer was bridesmaid, and Mr. Albert Haslam, groomsmen. Miss Maud Rogerson presided at the organ, and rendered the wedding march in a splendid manner. The EXAMINER wishes Mr. and Mrs. Haslam every happiness in life. Mr. Fred. DeC. Davies, the popular young druggist, and Miss Jean Young, daughter of Robert Young, Esq., were united in marriage at St. John's yesterday. The happy young couple are expected home tonight. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A LETTER FROM MR. HEARTZ.

SIR.—There appeared a letter in the DAILY EXAMINER of the 2nd December, over the signature of "Pure Soil." Why this person was ashamed of his proper name is more than I can say. I do not pretend to be able to give his proper name it looks like as if he was either ashamed of his name or ashamed of the thing that he was advocating. If the latter was the case I am ashamed of him likewise. To think that he would try to understate the cost of the sewers and try to make you believe that the cost would not be so very great, and to keep people in the dark; one of the largest costs in connection with the whole affair is hid, and that is the cost of the connections that connect the houses to the main sewer. "Pure Soil" has said that from you with all his experience in figures. Why did he hide that from you? It could not be his want of knowledge, for he is full of figures, and if he did not know he should find out before he attempted to give his figures of the cost. And you can see that the figures he gave were really out of the way. According to Mr. Tanton's statement they were fifty-eight thousand dollars too little, and Mr. Tanton seems to be pretty accurate. I do not pretend to be able to give you the cost of those fittings. Nor have I met any one that could. One gentleman of as good a knowledge as the generality of men told me that the most sound, the best, and the most economical way to connect with the main sewer, I hope that the citizens would count the cost before they take such a step as a dreadful and dangerous step for a second-class sewerage. The poor man that has a small property will be crushed. His property will be worth nothing. He will not be able to sell his property any more. We live in it. We live in it. When this comes along, and "Pure Soil" has said it will give the people work—it will give the masons and carpenters and plumbers and laborers all work for a long time. I cannot see a great deal of masons' nor carpenters' work about the affair. Besides, it will not last long, and there is no revenue in the least from it, but a continual sucking your life's blood from you. A gentleman called on me the other day and said to me, "I believe you are right with regard to going up if the sewers go on." He said that he lived in Boston, and if you could see the places that some of the workmen and laborers sheltered in, they would be ashamed to let you think that they lived in such miserable sheds and back houses and garrets. He said the reason was that house rent was so high that they could not pay the high rents that any decent tenement would bring. He said that the sewers and other city expenses were so great there that rents went up. This man was a strong advocate for sewers before this time, and I was not a little surprised at him saying this. I told him he was right—that if the sewers went on rent would certainly go up. He said that he would be as well without them.

I wish to make some remarks on "Pure Soil's" statement. In the commencement of his letter he says: "Reasonable discussion on the financial part is in order, but there can be no discussion in respect to our needs." Sir, I most positively deny this statement of his. This is the very point in question. Does he think to blindfold the people by telling them that they have great need of sewers? Will they believe his nonsense? I think not. Why is it that he did not show the people the great benefits that they would receive for such a dreadful burden on the city. What is our need at present? What is the trouble? Is there more sickness than usual, or are you going to drain our wet land? I think not. Or are you going to clean our yards and remove the stable manure? I think not. And what are you going to give the people for such a cursed tax that you are trying to bind upon the city? I think that it is the need that we should look at first and see that we are suffering badly for want of them. Anything else would be contrary to all business—to buy without seeing the need of an article would be foolish. What do you think of a man coming before the public and stating that there was no need to discuss the need of the sewers? Would you think he was honest? I could not think he was. Why, sir, this is the very thing that we have need to discuss. Convince us of our need of them, and then we will consider whether we will have them or not. Show us that anything can be done, to give us value for such a fearful amount of money, or we cannot consent to have it. My fellow citizens, I come to make my appeal to you, and I ask you to be on your guard and see that you put men in the City Council that will stand firm and carry out the wishes of those whom they represent. This is a critical time for the citizen. There are two parties at present working hard to overturn our city with taxation. The first is our water Commissioners with their second large pipe, and if you do not change these men as soon as possible, they will fix it on upon you. The next is the party that is busy about the sewerage; they try to urge them up in the people before they see the need of them. You may set it down as a rule, if you pay more for gold than it is worth, you are better without it, and if the sewerage cost you more than they are worth on the same rule, you are better without them. But those men that are seeking office will tell you different. Yours truly, CHARLES HEARTZ.
