Labor Party Wins Control Of Greater London Council

By FRASER WIGHTON

LONDON (Reuters)—The Labor party has won control of the giant new Greater London council in an election regarded here as a preview for the parliamentary general election to be held this fall.

Labor candidates took 64 of the council's 100 seats, leaving the Conservatives trailing with 36.

The voting, which took place Thursday, appeared to spell doom for the small Liberal party, which fielded 86 candidates. Not one was elected.

Observers figured the swing away from the nationally-ruling Conservatives in London at about six per cent—enough, if projected to a national scale, to put a Labor government in office with a powerful majority in the House of Commons.

Standings in the 630 - seat House of Commons: Conservatives 359, Labor 257, Liberals 7, Independent 1, vacant 6.

NO COMMUNISTS ELECTED

The British Communist party ran 36 candidates here Thursday. None was elected. However, although the Communists list a party membership of 34,281, voters cast 85,938 votes for Communist candidates.

The Greater London council elections were the climax of a four-day vote in which Britons throughout the country elected local county councillors.

Labor not only swamped the Greater London council but picked up considerable added strength elsewhere in the nation.

Following four days of voting in 34 of the 52 council areas outside London, Labor picked up 61 seats while "anti-socialists" dropped 47 and Independents lost 13. Voting in the balance of the 52 council areas was taking place Friday and today.

Political observers said Labor might be well on the way to recovering from the nearly 200 council seats lost by the party in 1961.

The Labor party's biggest victories outside London so far were its recapture of the Lancashire council in the north of England and of the smaller but still large Staffordshire council in the industrial Midlands.

Cabinet Face-Lifting Is Urged On Sir Alec

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — Sir Alec Douglas-Home is under pressure to give his cabinet a face-lift for the forthcoming general election campaign, it was reported here.

The Tory prime minister was said, however, to be resisting demands — particularly from younger elements of the party —for drastic changes in the cabinet largely inherited from former prime minister Harold Macmillan.

The labor party made impressive gains in local elections in London and elsewhere last week while Douglas-Home announced the long-awaited general election will be delayed until autumn.

Labor Leader Harold Wilson in a Northampton speech Saturday spoke scornfully of Douglas-Home's decision and of the Tory party for its unfeigned relief at being blessed with a general whose one quality is his ability to run away.

Anxious Conservatives, meanwhile, were hopeful the budget scheduled to be brought down Tuesday by Reginald Maudling, chancellor of the exchequer, will improve the party's popularity.

INCREASES POSSIBLE

They were not optimistic for tax cuts — indeed, some increases are possible—but rather looked to the 46-year-old chancellor for long-term proposals that will underline Tory economic wisdom and stability.

Douglas-Home, although suffering from a cold, was expected to attend a cabinet briefing on the budget today.

Despite restlessness among younger ministers, the cabinet Douglas-Home appointed last October had an average age of only a few months over 51—younger than Labor's shadow cabinet.

It is considered highly unlikely Sir Alec would undertake anything like the purge inflicted by Macmillan on his colleagues in July, 1962, when he sacked seven ministers. But if any of the older men now would like to retire, he would probably be ready to give bright young men a chance.

Backbenchers were dismayed by reports of disagreement between ministers, notably Foreign Secretary R. A. Butler and Commonwealth Secretary Duncan Sandys.

The Conservative Sunday Telegraph says increasing adverse comment is heard about the negative attitude of Butler, who was Sir Alec's chief opponent for the prime ministership.

The newspaper says Butler has received sympathy at losing the top job but many feel that he could do more to help the government or, alternatively, that he might take the opportunity of a pre-election cabinet reconstruction as a suitable moment to retire.

PRINCE TRIES DAD'S GAME

WINDSOR (AP) — Prince Charles, heir to the British throne, took another stride during the weekend in the sports footsteps of his father, Prince Philip, by playing polo.

The Prince of Wales, who will be 16 in November, played against his dad.

And furthermore, he played on Sunday. This is something for which Philip has been criticized by church groups opposed to Sunday sports.

Sunday's match was in Windsor Great Park. They also had a practice game at this park Saturday watched by Queen Elizabeth, Princess Anne and the Queen Mother.

After the match Prince Charles drove his father's sports car, with Philip as passenger, back through the park to the castle. Charles can drive inside the park, which is the private property of the queen, without breaking the law for driving under age.

Millionaire Aids Rescue

PORT OF SPAIN (Reuters) A Canadian millionaire helped rescue an elderly man calling for help while bathing off Trinidad's north coast Sunday.

The Canadian, 48 - year - old Kenneth R. Patrick of Montreal, and another bather swam to the man in trouble after hearing his call for help. Others on the beach launched a rowing boat.

The two rescuers supported the elderly swimmer until the boat arrived. Once ashore, he recovered after treatment by a nurse.

Patrick is president of Marigot Investments Limited of St. Lucia, in one of the Windward Islands, which is planning a multi-million-dollar resort project near Trinidad.

Opening lead—king of spades.

A player cannot really rate himself a good card player until he has at least mastered the basic elements of an endplay. There are many hands where declarer can create an endplay situation and save a vital trick which he might otherwise lose if he were to place his hopes on a successful finesse instead.

For example, take a case like this one. West cashes the A-K of spades and continues with the jack, which declarer ruffs.

South sees he is in danger of losing two club tricks and going down if he takes the club finesse and it loses. So to avoid this danger he draws two rounds of trumps, cashes the A-K of diamonds, enters his hand with a trump and leads the jack of diamonds.

When West covers with the queen, declarer lets him win the trick, discarding a club from dummy. This play knocks West out of the box. He must return a club to the A-Q or else yield a ruff and discard. Either way, declarer makes four hearts.

When the actual South in this deal played the hand, he went down one. It was not because he was ignorant of endplays; on the contrary, he was thoroughly versed in them. But he fell into a trap laid by West, and it is hard to criticize him for it.

South played the hand as described, except that when he led the jack of diamonds, West played the ten on it. South naturally assumed that East had the queen—it was hard to believe that West would not cover the jack if he had the Q-10—so he ruffed the diamond in dummy and led a low club.

If East had followed low South would still have made the hand by winning the seven, but East was sufficiently alert to put up the nine. So, as a result of the brilliant defense, South lost two club tricks and went down one.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
