MR. AND MRS. RALPH LEARD

Orwell Hd. United Church Setting For Summer Wedding

Orwell Head United Church was the scene of a summer wedding when Linda Elaine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Musick, Kinross, became the bride of Ralph George Leard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Birt Leard, Lorne Valley. The double-ring ceremony was conducted by Rev. Graham Fraser.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. W. J. Mutch, and Lloyd Martin sang "The Wedding Prayer" and, during the signing of the register, "On Perfect Love". Decorations in the church were summer flowers, and pews were marked with satin bows and orange blossoms.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a bell-shaped gown of peau de soie with a lace train. Her bouffant veil of nylon tulle was held in place with fabric roses centered with pearls. She carried a bouquet of red sweetheart roses and white feathered carnations.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Merrill Oatway, sister of the groom, wore a street length dress of yellow embroidered satin with matching shoes and head-dress and carried a mixed bouquet of flowers tinted in pastel shades. The bridesmaids Evelyn and Lila Musick, sisters of the bride, wore dresses alike in style to that of the matron of honor, in pink and blue, with matching shoes and head-dresses, and bouquets of mixed flowers.

The groom was attended by his brother, Gordon Leard. Edwin Musick, brother of the bride and Frank Bain ushered.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Musick wore a two piece turquoise linen suit with white accessories and a corsage of white and pink carnations. The groom's mother wore a pink sheath dress with matching accessories and a corsage of white and pink carnations.

Following the service a reception was held at Hillside Inn, Montague for 70 guests. The bride's sisters, Brenda and Marlene circulated the guest book. The blessing was given and the toast to the bride proposed, by Harold MacLeod of Kinross. Presiding at the tea table was Mrs. Ada Battas, aunt of the bride, and Anp MacLeod and Leah MacPherson assisted in serving.

The bride chose for her travelling costume a three piece knitted suit of sky blue, with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations. Following a honeymoon touring the Maritimes, the couple have taken up residence at 21 Young St., Charlottetown. The groom is employed with F. R. McLaine Ltd., and the bride is on the staff of the Limestone and MacArthur Nursing home.

Shorthand Can Lead To More Than Steno Job

NEW YORK — A letter dictated to beginning shorthand students: Keep stars in your eyes when practising those symbols, no matter how much like drudgery the chore seems. Shorthand can lead to something more than being an office stenographer.

The really adept at shorthand who pass demanding qualifying tests can earn up to $14,000 a year in some parts of the U. S.

Leonard W. Ehlers, a shorthand reporter for 26 years, and outgoing president of the National Shorthand Reporters' Association, outlined in an interview some of the opportunities.

"Any qualified person can get a job at the drop of a hat," he said. "There are shortages in almost every state."

The function of the shorthand reporter is to record word for word everything that is said at a trial, hearing or meeting.

The reporter then furnishes an accurate transcript — a type-written or printed record of what was said.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Wooden spoons are much more satisfactory for beating and stirring than metal ones.

If you have used the white of an egg in a recipe, refrigerate the yolk in a cup of cold water. It will keep for several days.

For lighter, fluffier pancakes from a mix, separate the eggs and beat the whites stiff before folding into the pancake batter.

"Frost" a gingerbread by sifting confectioners' sugar through a paper doily laid on the top. Lift the doily carefully.

A piece of gum camphor inside the piano will keep moths away from the felt.

Never thin varnish with turpentine. It destroys its glossy properties. Instead, set the varnish in a pan of warm water. Don't set on the stove.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Islanders Are Forlorn As Vacationers Depart

Again the farmers went to the sawing. We watched the little trucks move back along the fields, climbing the gentle incline of valley, to reach presently the heaps of sticks close by the woodland, from whence in the springtime past, the harvest of logs and fuel-wood was gathered. We recalled that one who lives close by a shore, whence blow salty winds and strong to torment the trees set out with high hopes, recently looking out over our vista which includes many a tree and grove and sheltering woodland, remarked a bit wistfully, "I love trees! I think I've twinkled, 'I should like to have my house set down in the midst of a wood!'"

The woodlands are enjoyable now — possibly not so freshly attractive as in spring, when the floors are adorned with dainty flowerings and the unfolding fronds of ferns. However the mosses underfoot are soft, the lichens a study in so many shapes and shades and we talk on dappled paths of filtered sunlight. Blossoms are still there.

and interesting fruitings as well. While to those who enjoy them, the silent woody places are truly "lovesome spots" there is no denying that folks who have shore farms are also fortunate. The very winds that blow in with salt breaths, the varying moods the colors and the sounds of the "lone sea" also have their charm.

Quiet now our mornings are in the wake of the summer holidays, which takes a pair of lads off to class. Now Alex is in the Principal's room, with, as it happens a new teacher. Peter, is in the new addition where the same young mother as last year presides. Setting a first precedent in our school, and we suspect in a rare happening Island over, our teachers, both youthful matrons are sisters, from a distant community.

Children were among visitors to this farm today: a fair-haired pair, girl and boy, happy hearted youngsters, and accordingly most likeable. Born of two inheritances they are, in a nice mixture, one parent being rooted in Island ancestry, the mother, a girlish lady is from a sunny southern State. Summer guests, this little family, which includes also a baby-boy, are enjoying their holiday at the far famed resort that is Cavendish, and in his native city with parents and kin. So quiet, and to us, rather forlorn our Island will be when presently the calls to home will return our vacationists across the miles to it again.

Babies of plevens we have at Alderlea — a silvery gray pair, hesitant today it seemed, to try out new wings.

"They just sit there on the barn-roof" Alex said.

"They will soon find their wings. By tomorrow, they perhaps will be flying between the barn and near meadow," we promised.

Partly cloudy this day was, with a refreshing evening shower. And now the clouds part. There is promise of moonlight above a dark hilltop. And for this pair there is an old, old stairway, and bed.

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good-night.

MARY HAWORTH

Divorcee Is Badly Hurt, Avoiding Old Friends

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I guess I took to heart what you wrote another woman some weeks ago, about gossip. Maybe it's my image I value. In any case, here's the problem.

In mid-summer 1964, friends of mine, I'll call them Jane and Joe Dokes, of San Francisco, were divorced. Immediately the decree was final, Joe married again and settled some distance away. Their show place house was sold and Jane dropped out of sight.

All this I learned only last spring, piecemeal.

First a mutual friend's letter mentioned that the Dokes' house had been sold. Next, on a trip, mainly business, to California, I stopped by the Dokes' former next door neighbor's, divorcee then off on a cruise.

I explained to her maid, who knew me by sight, that I'd been living in the East and wondered where the Dokes were now. She said, "She's living alone. I don't know where he is." Then she added, "I can give you her number," and did.

I telephoned Jane that night, she quickly said she was tied up and would call me back next day. Unsurprisingly, she didn't. Obviously she was shocked to get my call, and I could almost feel her wondering who I'd pried the number from.

Two days later another Californian, recently widowed, told me of the Dokes' divorce, of Joe's remarriage (a local social splash), and of Jane's going almost off her rocker about the whole thing. Then it seems Jane got a job — a blessing, we agreed, whether or not she needs the money.

I suggested that this friend call Jane and propose dinner and the ballet for the three of us. This she did, but again Jane was "tied up." We consoled ourselves that the rejection was impartial.

Now I'm home and another classmate, Edith, with whom I have kept in touch, writes that she'll be returning soon to California, after 10 years in Idaho. She and Jane were inseparable at school and I know she's been puzzled, if not hurt, at not hearing from Jane in some years.

I'm positive that Jane Dokes is one of the first persons that Edith will try to see in California. And as Jane seems determined to be a hermit, I think the impact of a call from Edith would be eased if Edith has the facts before she calls.

So, would I be wrong in sending her Jane's phone number and the facts, as I've heard them? Or should I just continue to let her and others wonder why they've ture from your detailed letter, here cut in half, you were deliberately as snooty as a bloodhound at work, in collecting your dossier of hearsay facts about Jane's comedown, marital and socially.

And I think your obscurely guilty or vaguely ashamed sense of having stooped, as it were, to worm your way into possession of gossipy information about Jane's misfortune — gossip that she shrinks from facing, obviously — is giving you trouble at present.

Having boned up, to the extent you could, on the inside story of "what happened to Jane", you now feel almost irresistibly impelled to share the fruits of your research with others whose click-clack reactions might echo your own. Hence Edith comes to mind.

At the same time, however, you distrust the ethics of your urge to tell all you know on a subject that Jane herself is keeping under wraps, or trying to. From this inner conflict stems your attempt to coin a face-saver providing peepholes glimpses into Jane's misfortune that she prefers to keep private.

In my judgment, true friends

TIGNISH

The Bible Study Group of St. Simon and St. Jude church Tignish held a farewell party for Rev. Francis Tardiff in the Tignish Convent on Thursday evening prior to his leaving as assistant clergy to take up new duties in the province of Quebec. Mrs. Alcide Boudreau on behalf of the group presented Father Tardiff with a gift. He in turn expressed sincere appreciation to the group present.

Karen Eldershaw returned to her office duties in Toronto, Ont. after a holiday spent with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Eldershaw. Tignish and with her grandmother, Mrs. William MacLeod. Also visiting the Eldershaw home was Jack Little of Toronto.

Carl Richard of Toronto is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Richard, Tignish. Accompanying Carl on his trip to Tignish was his sister Paisy Richard who spent her school vacation with relatives and friends in Toronto.

Abram's Village Altar Society August Meeting

The monthly meeting of the Abram's Village Altar Society was held at the home of Mrs. Arcade J. B. Arsenault. After opening prayer recited in unison, the minutes of last meeting were read, followed by roll call answered by 19 members. The different committees gave their reports. Mrs. Louis Gallant, Mrs. Jacques Gallant and Mrs. Leo J. T. Arsenault will visit the sick next month — A Mass was said in honour of the Blessed Virgin for peace. A report was given on the swimming classes and a committee was named to organize a children's bingo to aid in paying the expenses of the course.

A discussion followed to organize a dinner to be served at the parish hall to a French delegation from Quebec. Questions prepared by Mrs. Arcade and Mrs. Levi Arsenault were both instructive and amusing. Mrs. Camille Arsenault and Mrs. Alyre Maddix will prepare questions for the next meeting which will be held at the home of Mrs. Emmanuelle Gallant. Program will be prepared by Mrs. Jos Richard and Mrs. Camille Arsenault. The meeting was then adjourned, following which the annual meeting was held for the naming of new officers who are
