

LUCY WHEELER.

Concluded.

The girls hand clasped tightly the little boy's by her side. The rose-balance between them would have told you at once that they were brother and sister; but his life could not have covered more than a third of hers.

The little fellow's eyes were full of tears, and the bright curls that crept out from under his hat were damp with moisture.

A few minutes later she opened the broad back gate and went to the kitchen door. Farmer Keep's housekeeper—an old woman, with yellow nightcap and check apron tied over her linsey wool skirt—answered her knock.

Do you want any help, or do you know anyone around here who does? timidly asked the girl.

The lady peered at her with dim eyes. No, said she. There ain't but four on us—Farmer Keep and the two hired men, and me. It's harvest time just now, though, and I reckon you'd find a place in the village.

Thank you, Bennie here, my little brother is tired, for he walked from the depot. Can you let us come in and rest awhile.

Sartin you can. The sight of the child touched the heart of the woman and they went into a large kitchen, and sat down in the flag-bottomed chairs, while with a glowing cheek the girl cast about in her for the best manner in which to present her petition for food.

Before she had decided the master of the house entered the kitchen, for it was nearly dinner time. He was a large muscular, broad-chested, sunburned man, with a hard gloomy expression on his face, where fifty years were now beginning to write their history.

He stood still with surprise, gazing on the new occupants of the kitchen; and the boy drew close to his sister, and the girl threw up a timid frightened glance into the gloomy face.

You don't know of anybody round here that wants a little help, do ye farmers? asked the woman. Here's a little girl that wants a place and she walked from the depot. I told her she might come in and rest a bit before she went up into the village to try her luck.

No, shortly answered the farmer. Dinner ready? And the rich man turned away without one gentle word or kind look for the homeless children whom God had brought to his door.

Lucy, Lucy, don't stay here; I'm afraid. And the little boy's lip curled and quivered as he turned his face from the farmer's.

Lucy, Lucy, how those trembling tones went down, down, into the man's heart! How the dead days of his youth burst out of their graves and rushed through his memory at that low broken, 'Lucy, Lucy!' He turned and looked at the girl; not sourly, as before, but but with a kind and eager questioning interest.

What's your name? Lucy Wheeler, sir.

He staggered back and caught hold of the nearest chair. And what was your mother's? Lucy Reid. She used to live at Meadow Brook. So I come here to get work. She told me to brfore she died.

At that moment the angels looked down and saw the seed that had lain for two score years in the heart of Joseph Keep spring up and the flowers blossom in the wilderness.

Farmer Keep sat down and took the child in his arms. He tried to speak but instead great sobs came and heaved his strong chest. The trio in the kitchen gazed at him in mute astonishment.

Lucy's children, Lucy's children! he murmured at last, in a voice whose tenderness was like that of a mother. God sent you to me. For her sake this shall be your home. For her sake I will be a father to you.

Five years after Cora wrote to me: We are having fine times now, dear Cousin Jennie, and mamma wants to know if you do not need to renew your rosy cheeks among the dews of Meadow Brook. Uncle Charlie is with us and if you were also, our happiness would be complete.

Lucy Wheeler—you remember her—has the place in my heart next to yours. Her disposition is as lovely as her face, and that is saying a great deal, for its sweet beauty does one good to behold it. Farmer Keep seems to idolize her and Bennie. He is a charming man now; he goes to church every Sunday. He spares no pains or expense in Lucy's education, and she will be an accomplished woman. She is here very often, and I have suspicions that Uncle Charlie—but no matter, I will not trust this to pen and paper.

But now, Jennie, what a lesson has all this taught me! How has it deepened my faith in God and humanity. Now my heart yearns over the wretched sining outcast, I remember always that there is a flower in the wilderness.

CATARRH. Constitutional Catarrh Remedy CURES CATARRH.

Hear what a Reverend Gentleman says of the Constitutional Remedy. T. J. B. HARDING, Esq., Brockville, Ont.:—DEAR SIR—It is now two years since your "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" was introduced to me. I have waited this long to see if the cure would remain permanent before doing this, my duty, to you, as at first the happy effects seemed to me to be "too good to be true."

I was afflicted in my head for years before I suspected it to be Catarrh. In reading in your Circular I saw my case described in many particulars. The inward "drop" from the head had become very disagreeable, and a choking sensation often preventing me from lying long. I would feel like smothering and be compelled to sit up in the bed. My health and spirits were seriously affected. When your agent came to Walkertown in August, 1876, I secured three bottles. Before I had used a quarter of the contents of one bottle I found decided relief, and when I had used two bottles and a third I quit taking it, feeling quite cured of that ailment, and have not used any since, until of late I have taken some for a cold in my head. A sense of duty to sufferers from that loathsome disease, Catarrh, prompts me to send you this Certificate, unsolicited, with leave to make what use of it you may see proper. Yours truly,

W. TINDALL, Methodist Minister. Port Elgin, Ont., Aug. 24, 1878.
