DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS ALWAYS CURE

AFTER TEN YEARS SUFFERING

Two Box Cure

MILVERTON, 28TH JULY, 1895.

Gentlemen,—For the last ten years I had been troubled with kidney disease, being so bad at intervals that I could not lie in bed at night nor stoop to the ground.

I had tried all the remedies I could find without effect, but heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and procured a box.

I am most happy to say it for my own sake as well as for others that I am perfectly cured after using four boxes.

we can sell you Dodd's Kidney Pills a the following prices, viz.:—50c. per box six boxes for $2.50. To the trade—$4.00 per dozen, or three dozen at $3.75 per dozen. Sent by mail to any address paid.

conditions

In some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil is rapid. For this reason we put up a 50c. size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children.

In other conditions gain must be slow, sometimes almost imperceptible, health can't be built up in a day. For this Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment, food rather than medicine, food prepared for tired and weak digestions.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST—SUPPER.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided for our breakfast and supper a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame." Civil Service Gazette

THE EAVES-DROPPER.

It all came about through listening at the parlor door. Eaves-dropping is always a reprehensive proceeding, and when indulged in by a person who has good grounds for believing that that person's own self forms the topic of conversation likely to be over-heard, the practice becomes altogether unpardonable. Without desiring in the least to justify the breach of good manners committed when I, Emma Summerford, applied my ear to the keyhole of our best room door on a certain important occasion that happened quite recently, I am constrained to think, nevertheless, that there was some little excuse for my behavior.

You see, it was like this. Harry Butterfield, the son of Colonel Butterfield, of the British army, was desperately in love with me, and I hope I am not overstepping the bounds of maidenly modesty by admitting that I was very fond of him in return.

Harry and I first met at a dance given by a mutual friend, and as, in the manner of the story-books, we fell in love with each other at the start, we were not slow in finding out how to strike an acquaintanceship. Harry was an only son, and I a sole surviving daughter, so that we had something in common outside the affection that drew us together.

Harry lived with his father, a military officer, retired on halfpay, at Kensington, and I resided with mine in a little villa at Clapham; but although the distance thus separating our two abodes was great, Harry generally managed to spend three or four evenings a week on the Surrey side of the Thames.

My papa had formerly been in business in the Barbican, but having "made his pile," he sold off his horses, with the exception of a favorite gray mare, and bought the aforesaid villa, which henceforth became our home.

Harry was connected with a riding-school at Knightsbridge, and consequently knew something about horses, so on the evenings he visited us he used to spend part of the time conversing with my papa about matters equine, while the remainder (considerably the larger portion) he passed in my company discoursing of love.

One evening, after working himself up to the requisite pitch of passion, Harry made me a proposal of marriage. Although I had long seen it coming, of course, I pretended, in a woman's regular way, that his offer had quite taken me by surprise, and notwithstanding the fact that I was dying to say "yes," I assured him that I could not possibly give him an answer for at least a week. As I expected, he was so pressing, however, that I consented without further delay, and fell into his arms in the usual manner, while he whispered vows of eternal constancy, and so on. It was all very delightful, I can assure you, and when it came to a protracted ending, and Harry had taken his leave in the way common to lovers, I retired to rest the happiest girl in Clapham.

Harry had told me before going that he had some little business to transact with my father in the morning, and said he would seize the opportunity thus afforded of getting papa's consent to our marriage. When, therefore, the bell rang early the next day, and Harry was admitted and shown into the parlor, where papa was reading the auction news in the morning paper, of course I knew what his errand was.

It is a trying time for a woman when a lover is pleading for her hand to a possibly obdurate parent. Not that I thought my papa, with his well-known regard for my welfare, would offer any insuperable objection to our union, but, being an only child, I knew it would cost him a pang to part with me, and I was also well aware that he would never give his consent until assured of Harry's competency to maintain a wife.

I was therefore naturally anxious as to the result of the interview, and when it began to get unduly prolonged I was quite on thorns. My solicitude at length became so great that I left the housekeeper's room, where I had been vainly endeavoring to fix my attention on some preserves that required tying down, and stole on tip-toe along the passage leading to the parlor where my father and Harry were engaged.

The door was just ajar, and without really thinking that I was indulging in an unladylike action, I bent my head forward and listened. Harry was talking.

"She enjoys pretty good health, I suppose?" he asked, inquiringly.

"Capital," was my father's answer. "Never had an hour's illness since the day she was born."

It was kind of papa to say this, but of course his statement was not literally correct. Everybody has illness at some time or other in their lives, and I was no exception to the rule. As a child, I had had whooping-cough, measles, and the croup, among other infantile complaints, to say nothing of headache and tic-doloureux since I had grown up. But I suppose it was because I always made a practice of keeping my ailments as much as possible to myself that papa—who would not wilfully deceive, bless him!—thought I had never been ill. As I say, it was kind of him, and I quite appreciated his motive. I was just about tripping away on thus discovering that the interview had not ended, when Harry again spoke.

"Is her appetite good?"

It was certainly a strange question, and I could not see that it was at all a necessary one, but I confess I do not understand men's ways. Papa answered my lover's query by saying that I took my meals regularly, and seemed to enjoy them, which I must admit was a fact. Curiosity now made me stay for Harry's next inquiry.

"Has she any temper?" he asked, almost directly.

It was preposterous! Temper! I soon should have, if inquiries such as these were persisted in. In fact, it was only papa's answer, "not the slightest!" uttered in his most assuring manner, that prevented my developing something of the kind at once. As it was, the blissful frame of mind in which I had been wrapped since the previous evening was, as the meteorologists say, decidedly inclined to give way. Although feeling that I had heard enough, I thought that, as I had listened to so much, I might as well hear a little more. I had not to wait long.

"I really must say," Harry went on, "that there are one or two points about her of which I don't altogether approve."

I had quite developed a temper now, which even papa's response could not assuage.

"Well," returned my parent, "of course, I don't pretend that she's perfection but, take her altogether, she won't be easy to beat. All the same, I should like to hear what you consider her faults!"

Yes, indeed, and so should I! Wild horses would not make me go away from the door now!

"Well," said Harry, commencing his criticism with a deliberation that made my flesh crawl, "she is passable about the head and face, I admit, but her neck seems to be unduly long, and her shoulders have the appearance of being a trifle too broad!"

Could it be possible that the man giving utterance to this opinion was the same who had held me in his arms previously, and asserted that I was the most beautiful creature on God's earth?

"Broad shoulders are by no means a drawback, Master Harry," he said, "for they enable her to accomplish a great amount of work."

Yes, it was true. A lot of labor did fall to my share, and had done ever since my poor mother's death three years previously. But I went at it cheerfully, and without complaint. Work, even to the point of exhaustion, became a pleasure when performed for an appreciative father, but it never could be so when done on behalf of an unsympathetic husband. (Husband! Thank heaven, Harry Butterfield was not that yet!)

"And then, you know," went on my lover—save the mark—"her figure is somewhat disproportionate, and she is decidedly fat!"

It was a gross libel! Although not in the least addicted to tight lacing, I could assert with absolute accuracy that my last new blouse was only eighteen inches round the waist, and I was quite comfortable in it! To call me stout under such circumstances was a cruel untruth. I felt that my love was fast giving way to an altogether different emotion, and it would need but little more to turn the scale entirely. Strangely enough, it was my father who applied the last straw.

"Look here," papa said, after a momentary pause, "I'm sure you only need to get used to her to appreciate her value. Take her for a month on trial; and if, at the end of that time, you don't like her, let her come back again!"

This was more than I could stand. The idea was monstrous, and how my father could suggest such a thing quite passed my comprehension. Its effect upon me was magical. Throwing propriety, good manners, and everything else to the winds, I rushed into the room.

"It shall not be!" I exclaimed, passionately; "I will never be a party to such a shameful transaction!" and then, deeming that the occasion eminently warranted the proceeding, I threw up my arms and went off into a fit of hysterics, winding up with a dead faint.

When I came round I was lying on the sofa, with Harry bending anxiously over me. Papa had gone for a doctor.

"Thank heaven, you are recovering!" said Harry, as I opened my eyes.

"Would that I had died!" I groaned.

"Pray do not talk like that, Emmy," said Harry. "How can you give utterance to such a wicked wish?"

"There is nothing to live for," I murmured, mournfully.

"Nothing? No one?" asked Harry, looking into my eyes.

"Nothing; no one!" I answered, repeating his words.

"You are ill, Emmy," he said, "or you would not talk in this strange way."

"I am not ill," rising from the sofa to prove the truth of my statement. "Look at me for a moment, Harry Butterfield," I continued, facing my lover fearlessly, "let me hear first-hand what you think of me. Am I passable about the head and face? Is my neck unduly long and do you consider my shoulders broad, and my figure fat, eh? Answer me to my face, sir, for I know that is your opinion of me!"

"Emmy, you talk in riddles, which I cannot understand."

"Is not your opinion of me what I have just stated?"

"Certainly not, my dearest."

"Did you not give expression to those sentiments when talking of me to my papa a little while ago?"

"I certainly used those or similar terms, but not in connection with you, my pretty," said Harry, smiling.

"Of whom were you speaking then?" I asked, a faint light beginning to break in upon me.

"Why, the gray mare, to be sure, which I think of purchasing for our use when we are married!"

I fell into Harry's arms, as I saw my stupid mistake, laughing and crying by turns. As soon as I was able, I told him all about my eaves-dropping, what I had heard and the construction put upon it. Then I gave over crying, and we both laughed together, and were thus employed when papa and the doctor came. The latter did not think I required physicking when he examined my tongue, so we all went in to lunch, and Harry took occasion to inform me that papa had given his consent to our union, and all the financial part of the business was settled to his entire satisfaction.

Thus my little comedy of errors came to a happy ending after all, and when, a few weeks later, Harry and I were united in the bonds of matrimony, it was by my express wish that the gray mare was used to drive us to church.

THE ONLY HELP.

A Victim of Bright's Disease for Many Years—Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

NEEPAWA (Special) June 29.—Mrs. T. H McKee formerly of Listewel, came here as a last resort. Had suffered ten years with Bright's disease. Reported to be past help and dying, her reappearance on the street in apparent good health, was a pleasant surprise. The explanation given was that her little boy had insisted that she should use Dodd's Kidney Pills and prophesied that they would cure her. She says:—"From the first few doses I began to feel better, and after taking four and a half boxes, I say it with heart felt gratitude, I am perfectly cured" Dodd's Kidney Pills is the only medicine in the world that has ever cured a case of Bright's Disease at such a stage.

Bad Blood Between Them

The ever-slaving farmers' wife, her delicate sister in the city, suffer more than they care to tell. The dark rings round the eyes, headaches, dizziness, palpitation or rheumatic twinges, betoken a run-down system. The blood is poor, and is a bar to enjoyment of life. Scott's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, strengthens and vitalizes the system, and speedily restores the bloom of youth to the cheeks. It cures when all others fail.

Rubbing It In.

Never use a liniment for rheumatism, says a high medical authority. Don't rub it in—drive it out. Take something that removes the acid poison from the blood—take something that will improve your digestion, and build up the body to the perfection of robust health. That "something is Scott's Sarsaparilla, a remedy that obtains the best results in the shortest time. $1, of all druggists.

Don't Wait for the Sick Room.

The experience of physicians and the public proves that taking Scott's Emulsion produces an immediate increase in flesh: it is therefore of the highest value in Wasting Diseases and Consti

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ar.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

"She hasn't complained."

"No; she's very patient. But she often sends me to the shops for things, and they are a good way off, and I know she gets cross waiting when she's in a hurry."

"Not often, I fancy."

"Oh, she's nearly always in a hurry. She gets everything all ready for baking, and finds at the last minute she hasn't any baking-powder; or she gets a pudding all mixed, and finds she hasn't any nutmeg or something; and then she's in an awful stew, 'cause the oven is all ready, and maybe company coming, and I can't run a very long distance, you know, and I feel awfully sorry for poor mamma."
