Find Wreckage Of Missing U. S. Jet

VANCOUVER, (CP)—The body of a U. S. Air Force F-80D Sabre jet pilot was found by a skier on nearby Mount Rainier Saturday, 12 hours after his plane crashed into snow at the 2,500-foot level. The body of Lt. Lamar J. Barlow, 25, of Tacoma, Wash., was found in the wreckage of the plane which became lost in rain-shrouded skies with useless instruments.

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur. Horace Greeley was not artist when it came to longhand. One day he wrote an article titled: "William H. Seward." His print was great on seeing it in surprise: "Richard the Third." At another time he wrote: "Three men in buckram," but the puzzled compositor set it up: "Three men in a buckram."

Another writer titled his brain child: "Is there no balm in Gilead?" which came out thus: "Is there no balm in Gildford?" Of course the printer had to take the blame.

A Bridgeport, Conn., woman has a cat which has adopted a couple of baby gray squirrels, and is nursing them with her own milk. The squirrels were captured before their eyes were open, and mamma cat was as blind as her nurslings, as to the deception practiced on her.

Believe it or not, but there are many leaved clovers. Some have five, six and seven, and a few have been found with eight leaves. What is commonly called a four leaved clover is not properly so. The ordinary clover leaf is regarded as a single leaf, the blade of which is split into three parts, and it is no more strange than if it were divided into an unusual number of parts than that parsley should curl up, or that certain trees, as the beech, for example, should have cut-leaved or skeleton-leaved varieties.

Our forefathers were great believers in moon-signs. They believed among other things, that if carrots were sown in the full of the moon, they would have to be hoed frequently to get a full crop. Pork killed in the wane of the moon shrunk in the pan. Indeed, in the opinion of our pioneer farmers, their crop failures to not observing the moon.

Michael Eison and Sarah Lawrence were married by Rev. John Spratt, Ship Harbor, N. S., after a courtship of 16 years. The groom was 104 and his bride, 41.

It used to cost 50 cents to get a bag of sprouts from Halifax to Toronto. But strange to say a bag of flour traversed the same route for only 20 cents. Why? I don't know.

Nova Scotia's oldest citizen Malcolm MacDonald, died at the age of 112 years. Attending his funeral was his 91-year-old son, Neil.

Canada's "blue laws" prohibit publication of Sunday Newspapers in all but two provinces.

Here's an amusing item sent to this column by an old resident of Summerside. In pioneer days George Banks, who owned a farm just out of the town, had a steep which could jump the highest fence Banks ever erected. Fully in despair, Banks thought of his near-sighted grandmother, got down her spectacles and put them on the animal. The rouse worked. Everytime the steer edged up to the fence and jumped, it came down in the same field. Thus the bad habit was broken. The spectacles were returned to their owner and then the story ends.

The athletic history of the Garden of the Gulf dates back to 1863, when the Caledonian Society held its first games. The records chalked on the eventful day, some of which still stand, testify to the high class performances and the general success of the gathering.

It is interesting to note that these games have been annual events ever since, and to the Caledonian Society goes the credit of having natural athletes in this province.

To Summerside belongs the honor of holding the first amateur gathering, August 10, 1896. The Western town had its hero in the person of Frank Cannon, whom Prince County folk considered invincible, while Charlottetown put its faith in Lorne Unsworth.

On the 14th day of August, 1896, at the electric light sports of the Wanderers of Halifax, seven of the 14 cups offered went to Islanders, Lorne Unsworth, C. J. MacMillan. The former captured four prizes in the bicycle events. All were handicaps, and the Island boys started from scratch.

Some day we shall be brought to realize that the world at large and our own community is much the same. The difference is one of quantity rather than quality. That is all.

Anxious to Disprove Medical Theory

In view of an unprecedented state order that every dog and cat in Chicago be vaccinated, at a cost of $1,000,000, following outbreak of deadly rabies diseases in the city, former dancing star Irene Castle has offered to let herself be bitten by a mad dog to demonstrate the "folly" of the order.

The international stage favorite of past decades, now Mrs. George Enzinger of nearby Deerfield, Ill., and an ardent animal lover, said inoculation would paralyze the hind legs of dogs. "No one can prove that a person bitten by a rabid dog ever died as a result," Miss Castle, seen above, said. "I'll put up $5,000 that I don't get rabies." The city's estimated 350,000 pet dogs and 250,000 cats were ordered inoculated after the rabies outbreak reached a peak that saw two rabid dogs bite persons in 16 hours. One attack resulted in a fatality.

Skillicorn - MacEachern Wedding

The chapel of Donland's United Church, Toronto, Ont., was the scene of a quiet, pretty wedding on January 16, when Rev. Irving G. Perkins united in marriage Gillian Mary Brecon (dill), youngest daughter of Mrs. Angus MacEachern, Charlottetown, and Roy H. Skillicorn, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Skillicorn, Belleville, Ont.

The bride wore a grey suit, winter-white hat, and black accessories, with a corsage of roses. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Prizell, of Charlottetown.

They will reside in Toronto, where the groom is a constable with the Canadian National Railway.

Among those entertaining for the bride previous to her leaving for Toronto were Mrs. Amy Hemphill and Mrs. Norman MacKay. A presentation was also made the bride from her fellow-operators at the Island Telephone Company.

A Country Garden

Continued from page 2. the Marigold, Anthems and Maritima. I dislike the lupine seeds until they are hulled as they are very hard; when the seeds do appear they are usually shiny black. All the seeds are the essence of summer.

Sorling seeds in chilly weather. Calls up visions. I remember how, from flat flakes drab and dry, Zinnias salute the sky; How each black crumb, once alert, Swirled a Morning-glory skirt. Sweet-peas frilly pastel bonnets. Fit in balls compact as sonnets. Pin-point Poppy seeds hold things. Butterflies might choose for wings. Slim brown splinters tightly rolled. Guard a mint of Marigold. Or those dainty Cosmos lasses, Resting from their dancing classes. Miniatures of Mignonette. Tell of fragrance gone, and yet By a miracle sublime. Hoarded here for blossoming.

The Fragrant Path in chapter eleven we read about Night Scented Flowers. . . . To nearly all persons, however employed, the coming of evening brings leisure, an hour or two at least that may be freely spent. To the flower-lover this is the time above all others to enjoy the garden. The day is full of activities and distracting contacts and, though some of these may centre in the garden, they are excluded from the mind to the exclusion of much that is delightful. But when the gentle dusk creeps in and wisps of cool air come out of the shadows, the eyes are counted today, but they are happy ones and tranquillizing. The busy man or woman, tired at night and with frayed nerves, will find in the peace and sweetness of the garden relaxation and refreshment undreamed by those who seek peace in some other pursuit. But it must be in a fragrant garden. Without the fragrance the magic is not there. Colour disappears from the border with the coming of dusk, and only white flowers, or those of pale colouring stand out and happily most of these pale blooms have sweetness to offer as well. In this garden among night-scented plants is Sweet Rocket, Hesperis, named for the evening star. Once it was very popular in gardens and known as the favortie of Marie Antoinette, that tragic queen who appears to have loved the simplest flowers.

Nowadays the Sweet Rocket must look after itself, and has taken to the fields and roadsides but it is worthy of a place in the garden and when it seeds itself so freely. Dame's Violet and Queen's Gilliflower were old names for the Sweet Rocket and it was a very popular plant in old gardens; the mauve variety seems to complement the peonies and Iris when blooming at the same season. It is worth growing for the delicious evening scent pervading the garden all around.

Then, with the falling of dusk, The scent of Mignonette and Musk Will all the air enshroud, And the new moon will slip its Of sailing silver cloud.

IN MEMORIAM

FULTON ANDREW SMITH. The death occurred at his home in New Perth, on Wednesday, December 2, of Fulton A. Smith, in his 73rd year.

Although in failing health for some time, he was able to be about as usual and his sudden passing came as a great shock to all. He was the youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Smith of New Perth, and resided on the old homestead throughout his entire life.

He is survived by his wife the former Pearl MacKinnon, two sons Newton and Elliott, and one daughter Mildred. Mrs. Allister Currie also of New Perth; also a sister Agnes, Mrs. John E. Winslow, Gurney Cove, who came home from Toronto to attend her brother's funeral.

Two brothers Alexander and John, and two sisters (Mary), Mrs. A. S. Morson, Upton, and (Janet), Mrs. Henry Burdett, Strathcona, predeceased him by several years.

The largely attended funeral was held on December 5, from his late residence, and was conducted by Rev. M. Carl Currie who spoke very fittingly, bringing a message of comfort to the bereaved family. The hymns sung during the service were "The Lord Is My Shepherd," and "Abide with Me." Interment took place in Montague Community Cemetery.

Pallbearers were: Messrs. William Walsh, William Minchin, John Anderson, James Cain, Alexander Hamilton, and John Power.

Dorothy Dix's Column

Continued from page 2. at a service club, attended by boys from a nearby camp. I became quite friendly with one of the boys and knew he was expecting a transfer. When I went to the club last week, I was told he had left two days previously. Should I write to him, as I have his address, but he doesn't have mine. He had promised to call before he left, but did not.

SALLY ANSWER: Sure, write to the boy. What can you lose but a 3-cent stamp. Since you have been around service men for so long, you should appreciate the fact that their orders frequently come through on short notice, and that in general confusion it's quite possible he had no time to call you. Give the lad the benefit of the doubt, and write, wishing him Godspeed.
