

Britain Is Seeking Support For World Credit Expansion

By HAROLD MORRISON
LONDON (CP)—Britain, one of the Western world's biggest borrowers, now is desperately seeking support for any kind of expansion of world credit that as a chance of success.

James Callaghan, chancellor of the exchequer, will make his pitch for Commonwealth support when he meets other Commonwealth finance ministers in Montreal Sept. 21-22, in preparation for an International Monetary Fund conference in Washington Sept. 26-30.

Britain, in debt to the fund and other lenders to the tune of $30,000,000,000, has been preaching for an expansion of world liquidity or credit in a number of forums, but without luck. France has been one of the major opponents.

Callaghan told a meeting of Welsh unionists last Friday that he expects Britain to go into surplus in its international payments next year and the United States will switch into the same position when the Viet Nam war ends.

"And some of those people who are reading lectures to the U.S. drumming into them that they must get into surplus, will be surprised and hurt at the consequences when they do," Callaghan said.

SAYS READY TO MOVE
The British government, he added, has declared to other countries "that it is ready to support any rational plan to increase liquidity throughout the world that seems likely to command general support."

Without specifically referring to France, he said there are some countries which won't go along with pleas for liquidity expansion. It may, therefore, be necessary to move ahead without them and hope they will come in later.

Callaghan gave no details of how he would like to see credit expanded. France and West Germany have maintained there is sufficient credit if the countries which show a heavy deficit in their international transactions put their houses in order, a reference to Britain and the U.S., both of which are running aggravating deficits.

Both have instituted measures to restrict their exports of dollars and sterling, thereby tending to reduce the available flow of credit from these sources.

In addition a number of countries including France, which earn big surpluses in international trade, have been using dollar surpluses to buy dwindling stocks of American gold, causing increasing concern in Washington.

Callaghan suggested that instead of hoarding their surpluses and using them for destruction of the existing system of reserve currencies, these countries should make the surpluses available in the form of credit available for expanding trade.

But there are some countries, he said, that seem intent on amassing and holding onto reserves irrespective of the consequences to the trade of the world. International politics is a dominant factor.

"It seemed to him that in the next few years, there will be a sharp change—the debtors of the 1960s will become the creditors of the 1970s.

The need for expanding world credit was serious and urgent, he said. Britain and the U.S. have been pressing ahead with "contingency planning." It was his profound hope "that we shall not be overtaken by events."

Nobel Prize Winner Urges Sperm Bank Establishment

By ROBERT GOLDENSTEIN
CHICAGO (AP)—A Nobel prize-winning geneticist has urged the establishment of carefully selected sperm banks that would show promise of breeding more persons in future generations with the qualities of creativeness and brotherly love.

Dr. Hermann J. Muller of Indiana University, honored for his discoveries of the hereditary effects of radiation, said genetic progress along these lines "will no longer occur automatically."

He said at the third International Congress of Human Genetics: "In genetic progress we cannot wait until we have refined genetic surgery, or wait for better knowledge of the genes concerned in the attributes we are aiming for, even though all that knowledge and skill should meanwhile be actively sought."

Muller said the quality of the human race has improved from the beginning because of natural selection in the evolutionary process. But recently "success in saving nearly everyone for survival and probably most of them are reproduction—must have gravely undermined all genetic progress."

ARE TWO NEEDS
The worst aspect of a "genetic crisis" lay in the urgent need for:

1. A greater capacity on the part of people in general to extend genuine warm heartedness—brotherly love—to all sectors of humanity in a world-wide community.
2. To have general intelligence of a creative kind deepened and broadened.

"A start must be made now in germinal choice," he added, "his choice would afford couples the chance to have 'one or more children derived on the father's side from germinal material of their choosing, out of well documented stores which have been deep frozen for decades after the decease of those who donated it."

Physical techniques already were available for conducting such an enterprise on a small scale.

"What is called for is support by a socially-oriented group of geneticists, including some in appropriate medical specialties, together with diverse humanistically-minded persons of competence, and the beginning of the gathering and maintenance of germinal repositories."

SPOKE TOO SOON
LONDON (CP)—Police on the outskirts of London stopped a car flashing a sign reading "Stolen." The driver turned out to be the owner, who had forgotten to switch off his anti-theft device.

CRIME TAKES IT EASY
LONDON (CP)—A gang broke into a West End store on Saturday night and slept in four show beds before departing with more than $30,000 in clothes and linen.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. JAY BECKER

East dealer. North-South vulnerable.

WEST: ♠ K 10 7, ♥ K 9 3, ♦ 5 4 3, ♣ A J 8 5
EAST: ♠ Q J 3, ♥ Q 5, ♦ 10 8 7 6 4, ♣ A K 6 5

SOUTH: ♠ A 6 4, ♥ A J 3, ♦ 8, ♣ K Q 10 9 7 2

The bidding:
East 1♥, South 2♣, West Pass, North 3♣.

Opening lead — Jack of diamonds.

Let's say you have a 50 per cent chance of making a particular contract provided you play the hand in a certain way. Then, if you are a careful operator, you should look for some other way of playing the hand so as to increase your chance of success to 75 per cent, or even 100 per cent, if this is possible.

The opportunity to apply this principle occurs time and time again, and undoubtedly is one of the best weapons in declarer's bag of tricks. If he cannot attain the 100 per cent chance he would like to have, declarer should look for the next best thing to it.

For example, if you're South in this hand, you see that you must lose a diamond, probably a spade, and possibly a heart. The thing to do is to minimize the chance of losing the heart trick, since you don't want to rely on a heart finesse — which would ordinarily have a only about a 50 per cent chance of succeeding.

Therefore, upon ruffing a diamond at trick two, you should prepare for an endplay situation. You enter dummy with a trump and ruff the last diamond, after which you draw another round of trumps and play the A-K and another spade.

You don't know at this point which opponent will win the spade, but you hope it is West. If he wins the spade, you are sure of making the contract whether he returns a heart or gives you a ruff and discard.

In the actual hand, it turns out that East takes the spade, which is not ideal but better than a kick in the shins when he returns a heart, you of course play low, which luckily traps the queen and puts you on Easy Street.

In this way you make the contract. If you had not relied on the endplay, you might have gone down by taking the heart finesse and losing the trick to the doubton queen.

Quints Mark 3rd Birthday

ABERDEEN, S.D. (AP)—The Fischer quintuplets, whose birth made this city of 25,000 and their shy parents a centre of attention, will celebrate their third birthday Wednesday—out of the public's eye.

A birthday party is planned, but Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Fischer have been careful not to make the quints the centre of attention. Even Aberdeen residents infrequently see the only living quintuplets in the United States. They get an occasional glance when the Fischer drive by in their station wagon.

Fischer, an 85-a-week shipping clerk before the quints were born, now operates a farm on the southwest edge of Aberdeen and somewhat isolated about a half-mile from a main highway.
