The Art of Dunning.

As some dealers will persist in giving credit, it is important that they should know how to "dun" with success. The following rules have been laid down by a business man of experience to the reporter of a N. Y. morning paper; and they will repay careful study:—

- (1) Never give the idea that you call because you happened to be in the neighborhood.
- (2) Never plead that you are in absolute need of the money.
- (3) Never explain why you want the money further than some general phrase, as "to meet outstanding bills." The debtor is usually an expert in showing a man how he can get along without money. He will wrest you in argument, and if you lose your temper it is an excuse to him why he should not pay.
- (4) Always be civil, however businesslike and importunate you may deem it necessary to be.
- (5) Never think you have done wrong because a debtor gets angry. His anger, under civil treatment, shows that he does not intend to pay. This you might as well know early as late.
- (6) Show quite as firm a resolution to get the money on your tenth call as on any previous one, or else it would have been better if you had not made it.
- (7) Never leave a debtor without his setting a time when he thinks he can pay, and never fail to be on hand at the time set.
- (8) As between yourself and an employee, let the most businesslike of the two make the dun.
- (9) Suggest instalments. Shame the debtor into making an arrangement to pay something every week or every month.
If not $10, then $5, or $3, or $1. It will convince him that you have set to work in earnest to get the money.
- (10) If a debtor gets angry a good effect may be produced by saying you intend to place the bill in the hands of a lawyer, particularly if you mention a lawyer whom he hates or who has a reputation for harassing debtors. Professional debtors, however, become careless about legal processes.
- (11) Drop into a debtor's favorite haunts.
It will make him very uneasy, especially if you don't hesitate to ask him politely but plumply, for your money on occasion.
This may often happen after he has displayed a roll of bills.

Food for Fowls.

A little corn fed daily is good, as it keeps fowls warm and healthy, and as is the case with butchers' scraps, will make them lay some eggs, but the latter will not be of the finest flavor. The best egg-producing food is claimed by some to be five parts of bran with one of middlings, which in the morning should be wet with scalding water, or far better, with skim-milk, say about four quarts of the mixture, taking pains to have it rather dry, though all damp. If the fowls don't incline to eat at first, sprinkle a little Indian meal over the top. Be careful not to mix more than they will consume during the day, and at night give them their shelled corn or wheat screenings well scattered, so that all will get some. Perhaps the milk, scraps of meat, bread, etc., often fed to a pig, would be more profitably employed in egg production. Hens should not be kept longer than three years. Onions, chopped fine and mixed with Indian meal, have a beneficial effect. Meat is an essential food for poultry, especially in winter, when they cannot get worms that may be picked up in summer. The habit of giving much food in a short space of time is a bad one. In their natural condition the process of picking up their food is a very slow one.

Cross Breeding.

For many years past, in the mountain districts of Cumberland, Westmoreland, and northern Lancashire, where the Mountain sheep-runs are very extensive, the Leicester rams have been used for crossing; but during the past few years Shropshire rams have come into use, and the farmers claim that, by their use, they can get earlier maturity and heavier weights on the lambs. Whether the change from Leicester to Shropshire ultimately proves beneficial, there can be no doubt in one thing, that the Shropshire, at present, flatters much favor, and at all the northern district agricultural shows special classes for this breed of sheep have been provided. English farmers say: If wanted for fattening lambs, use the Shropshire ram; if wanted for keeping lambs, use the Leicester.

The following pretty little story is told of President Garfield's school days: There was a spelling match in the little log cabin school house where James went to school. The teacher told her scholars that if they whispered she would send them home. During the spelling James whispered to the boy next him how to spell a word. His teacher saw him and said, "James, you know the rule.
You must go home." James took up his hat and left. Pretty soon he came back and took his place in the class. "Why, how is this?
I told you to go home." "I know it," said James; "and I went home."

CORRESPONDENCE.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions or statements of our correspondents.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Will your correspondent "Jack," of Uigg, or any other of your readers who was present at Mr. Murdoch's lecture, kindly mention which of Rob Dunn's songs was said to have been so praised by Professor Blackie, of Edinburgh?

Though a warm admirer of the Bard of Lord Rosy's Country, I fear the remark in question, viz:
"There was more wit and wisdom in that one song than in all Greek literature," like some others of Mr. Murdoch's reported utterances, will require to be taken with a considerable pinch of salt. Professor Blackie is perhaps as good a Gaelic scholar as he is an undoubted authority on Greek; but though he is no less well known for the eccentricity, vigour, and—well, rash-ness of his assertions, I do not think he is capable of such unqualified "bosh" as Mr.
Murdoch would make out.

Rob Dunn's poems, like the language in which they are written, may safely rest on their own merits without hyperbolic praise. We may consider with Mr. Skene Scotland's "dialect of the common Gaelic tongue not undeserving of the attention of philologists;" but we will require stronger evidence than that of the late Lauchlin Mc-Lean, or Mr. John Murdoch either, before we believe that it was spoken in Paradise, or the Garden of Eden was situated in the Island of Mull!

I do not call in question the taste of these Charlottetown gentlemen in establishing a branch of an association which has just been proclaimed illegal; but it would be interesting to know by whose authority Mr.
John Murdoch, of the Inverness Highlander, advocates the principles and organizes branches of the Irish Land League. Does he, in short, represent any person but himself? That he does this, to some extent, at least, and can look after No. 1 and "the lawbooks" may be inferred from "Jack," of Uigg's statement, that "quite a few subscribers for the Highlander."

turers—whether in kilts or coronets.

Farmer Gruff and his Boys.

Old farmer Gruff was one morning tugging away with all his might and main at a barrel of apples which he was endeavoring to get up the cellar stairs, and calling at the top of his lungs for one of his boys to lend him a helping hand, but in vain. When he had, after an indefinite amount of swearing and puffing, accomplished his task, and just when they were not needed, of course the boys made their appearance. Where have you been, and what have you been about, I'd like to know, that you could not hear me call? inquired the father in an angry tone, and addressing the eldest. "Out in the shop settin' the saw," replied the youth. "And you, Dick?" "Out in the barn settin' the hen." "And you, sir?"
"Up in granny's room settin' the clock."
"And you, young man?" "Up in the garret settin' the trap." And now, master Fred, where were you and what were you settin'?" asked the old farmer of his youngest progeny, the asperity of his temper being somewhat softened by this amusing category of answers, "come let's hear." "On the door step, settin' still," replied the young hopeful seriously.
