Another advantage, the watch can be WOUND

PARNELL'S LAND MEASURE.

The Chamberlain section will not vote on the bill. Mr. Chamberlain, who has gone to the country, says he will take no part in the debate. He adheres to his determination to do nothing to embarrass the Government in dealing with Ireland. Lord Randolph Churchill will offer Mr. Parnell facilities for the second reading of his bill on the 16th inst., on condition that the Parnellites offer no objections prior to the passing of the whole of the estimates.
The Government, insisting upon the consideration of Mr. Parnell's bill before the estimate. The probable issue will be that Mr. Parnell will accept Lord Randolph's offer, knowing that the defeat of his bill is certain. Mr. Parnell has sent a draft of his measure to Mr. Gladstone.

JUSTIN MCCARTHY.

A farewell visit was given to Mr. Justin McCarthy prior to his departure for America. Mr. Parnell presided. In his speech Mr. Parnell said that the Americans would welcome Mr. McCarthy as the foremost Irishman of the age, and a most truthful exponent of the Irish question. Great Britain's first duty, he said, was to give effect to principles on which her own greatness is based, namely, rule of the people by the people and for the people, and also if she pleased to guarantee fair play to the Protestant community in Ireland though doubled. There were many who feared that the Protestants would not have had fair play. A majority of the Liberal party had supported the Irish bill and he hoped with weapons of legality and moderation to enable Ireland to take the position for which God had destined for her. Mr. Mc-Carthy, in reply, said he was not going to America on a political mission, but merely to pay a friendly visit, as he was extremely fond of America.

Another "Islander Abroad"

A little too much wine and a hawking after taking his dulcinea out for a drive, brought grief to a young man of Prince Edward Island yesterday afternoon. They were evidently bound on seeing the fashions and stopped their horse on the head of King Street. They had stayed there about half an hour, when the horse evidently concluded that if the driver couldn't or wouldn't think that he would, and he proceeded to walk along Charlotte street towards Union.
Most energetic "whoas" failed to dissuade the horse from his purpose, and the only indication he gave of having heard the remarks of the driver, was that he wagged his ears and straightened out his tail over the dashboard in a sort of how-is-that-for-high kind of a style. The whip was then brought into requisition and the horse, who had evidently concluded to make the stranger see the city, whether he would or no, and at the same time give a color of dash to the proceedings gathered himself up and went down Union street on a most eccentric run.
At the junction of Union street he espied Dr. Berryman driving towards him and made a daring attempt to deposit the occupants of the carriage into Dr. Berryman's He failed by an inch but succeeded in depositing Dr. Berryman's wagon in a prone position in the gutter. He then ran down Brussels street, the two holding the reins over him. He had gone some few hundred yards when it began to rain heavily, and standing for an instant to take in the situation he perceived the door of a house in a yard open. The alley was narrow but he took all the chances and went down with a will leaving the wagon and the strangers in the street. He reached the door and after examining the premises decided that no sufficient accommodations were provided for him there and returned back to his stable. The stranger arrived at the stable about an hour afterwards, and the way in which the horse shuffled in the stall indicated that he at least knew who had been driving him.—St. John Telegraph.

No Bride and no Wedding.

A WEDDING THAT ST. LUKE'S DID NOT WIT-NESS BECAUSE THE LADY FLEED.

From St. Luke's cathedral on Thursday morning there departed a disappointed and disgusted bridal party—or at least that portion of it that was there to depart. One very essential section of the group was absent—the bride that was to be failed to appear. The groom and his best man were on the scene, a few friends were in waiting to witness the quiet ceremony, and Rev.
Mr. King was present prepared to tie the knot. The hour appointed for the ceremony, 7.30 o'clock, came and went without the bride's appearance, a half hour more passed away, and then the impatient groom started in search of the recalcitrant lady. Soon afterwards he returned with the news that his intended mother-in-law had unexpectedly died at her home in an adjoining county and that his love had hastened to see the scene of death by the steamer City of St. John. Two hours afterwards the disappointed man took a team and started for his residence on the western shore. Subsequently developments show that the explanation given of the bride's sudden departure was not in accordance with the facts. It seems that the young lady, a belle from a western town and only about twenty years of age, was sent to England by her friends several months ago, it is said to get her out of the way of her lover, who is a doctor enjoying a good practice in the same neighborhood, but considerably addicted to liquor. Separation, however, did not alter their feelings or intentions, and the lady, disbelieving the stories of the doctor's habits and determined to marry him, left London for Halifax three weeks ago, arriving here on Wednesday by the steamer Milanese. But her reception was of a character not calculated to encourage an affectionate fiancée. Her admirer, who had arrived in the city several days before, succeeded in getting started on a "time," and when the steamer reached her wharf a drunken man was there to greet the lady.
Her disgust and abhorrence were undisguised and she resolved to change her plans, but to deceive the doctor until she could proceed homeward. Her scheme succeeded so admirably that a clergyman is mines a handsome fee, a lover's hopes were crushed, and a sumptuous wedding breakfast was spoiled. The young lady concerned is connected with a family of the highest social standing in the province.— Halifax Chronicle.

Protecting Her Fisheries.

The schr. Herbert M. Rogers arrived at Gloucester, Mass., from Greenland on the night of the 10th inst., with 100,000 lbs. of fitted halibut, this being the first arrival of the season from the Greenland coast.
Capt. Vele reports having encountered much heavy ice. Upon attempting to put in at Danish ports he was driven away and threatened with seizure, as the authorities claimed the treaty between Denmark and the United States forbade American fishermen trading with natives and fishing in Danish waters. A man-of-war was patrolling the coast to keep fishermen out. The Rogers went as far north as latitude 68, but found few fish. On the homeward trip he called at points on the Straits of Belle-isle, and was told no mackerel had been seen there this season. He saw nothing of the schr. Seth Stockbridge, which sailed from Gloucester June 1st for Greenland, and it is feared, as nothing has been heard from her, that she has been jammed in the ice and lost.

It is said that Mrs. Grant not only receives the larger part of the profits from the sale of the General's Memoirs, but has also the privilege of examining the whole of the publisher's accounts whenever she pleases. Her share of the proceeds already amounts to $630,000. Mrs. Grant will probably not die a pauper.

At the opening of the British Trades Union Congress, at Hull, recently, the retiring president said that the depression in trade was caused by the few working excessive hours, while the many were idle.
He proposed reducing the hours constituing a day's work as a remedy for the evil.

Dr. Sir Andrew Clarke declares that there is not an unsound spot in all Mr.
Gladstone's physical being, and that the great statesman will probably live at least fifteen years longer, if he does not work more than three men usually do when the three men are very busy men.

Daniel Dunn, of the Interior Department, Ottawa, got leave of absence on the 30th ult. He went to Gaspogoue, there hired a boat to go out on the river, since he has not been heard of. It is supposed he drowned. The boat has been found with both oars gone.
