

ORANGES, LEMONS GROW AT MONTAGUE

A lemon and an orange tree have been successfully grown in the space of a year and a half. Bearing very large fruit, the lemon tree enables Mrs. Cameron to make three pies from one lemon. These trees were started from cutting as was a fig tree which produced four figs last season. An ardent lover of flowers and shrubs, these are just a few of the many colorful plants in Mrs. Cameron's home.

Crime Wave Is Alarming To "Yard" Plan Campaign

By JOHN DUDMAN LONDON (Reuters) — Scotland Yard, troubled by a sharp rise in the London crime rate, disclosed Monday it has set up a permanent panel of five experts to study new crime-fighting methods. The experts, from various Yard departments, were ordered to inquire into and make recommendations on methods "for reducing crime in the metropolitan police district by preventing or detecting." All kinds of crime increased in this metropolis during 1957, and the Yard has announced it needs 3,500 police recruits and 80 more dogs. Some 16,500 men and women—bobbies, policewomen and detectives—police an area including the county of London, Middlesex County and suburban areas stretching into surrounding Essex, Kent and Surrey. A square-mile island in the heart of this area—the City of London—has its own, separate police force, the original bobbies or Peeler established more than a century ago by reformer Robert Peel. METRO FORCE HQ Scotland Yard, a cluster of buildings near Parliament on the Thames, is head office of the metropolitan force and may be called in for help by municipal or county forces. The Yard may arm its detectives with guns, though Britons still don't like the idea of an armed police force. Bobbies on the beat depend only on nightsticks, unfringed dignity and a long-standing respect. But the crime graph for 1957

Clear Georgetown United Church Hall Of All Debt

Georgetown Pastoral Charge of the United Church held its annual meeting. After the annual meetings were held in the outside appointments of Sturgeon and Milltown Cross the previous week. A well attended meeting was held in Georgetown on Monday January 20th and all who attended were of the impression that 1957 was one of the most successful years in St. David's United Church. The reports of various organizations were given and all showed progress both in the interest of the members and in the financial returns. W. A. ACHIEVEMENT The Women's Association report was one of the highlights of the year, and they joined with the congregation in congratulating themselves in reporting that the new hall built four years ago was completely free of debt and the hall which as proven so useful has been entirely paid for by the efforts of the congregation, without aid from any Extension Fund of the Church. The Missionary and Maintenance Fund has considerably exceeded the groups of previous years. THE MEN The Men's Association has been quite active and though its efforts, paved walks were built both to the hall and church. A new roof has been on the church, with fire-proof shingles and both the hall and church has been freshly trimmed with paint. Cemetery has been greatly improved and

Soviet Big Brother Role In Albania Is Seen Growing

By SIDNEY W. ILAND TIRANA, Albania (Reuters) — Twice every day, for 30 minutes, the voice of Moscow booms out from countless loudspeakers rigged up in streets and squares all over Albania. Throughout the country, the people hear Albanian-language broadcasts straight from Moscow radio. It is a small example of the extent to which Russia has assumed the role here of the "big brother," the well-wishing friend, ally and protector. The Albanians, most backward, most remote of the Soviet-bloc lands in Europe, are a bitter people, resentful and fearful, suspicious of the outside world. LOOK JUST ONE WAY Culturally and ideologically, young Albanians have ears and eyes only for Moscow — and it is the Moscow of Stalin that attracts them most. Despite Stalin's official "dethronement" after his death, busts and statues and portraits of him are everywhere. Movies show Soviet pictures, the ballet dancers are trained in Moscow. If the West has anything to offer Albania in culture, music or literature, few Albanians seem to know about it. Albanian officials say that, apart from military advisers, there are no Soviet troops or bases in Albania.

But everywhere in Tirana there are Russians — engineers, technicians, experts and officers. The Russians seem to be much respected and to the Albanians they are emissaries of modern culture. Albanian policemen are dressed in drab Soviet uniforms and Albanian frontier guards and internal security troops are indistinguishable from the parent bodies of the Soviet Union. EVEN LOOK ALIKE And Albanian soldiers so resemble Soviet soldiers that you can tell them apart only when they speak. Four weeks ago, an American jet trainer plane came down on an Albanian airfield. The pilot said he had lost his way and landed because he was running out of fuel. But he was held for 19 days, and the Albanians still think he was a spy. The incident illustrates the state of "spy nerves" in Albania. Not only Communist officials but the people themselves seem to see agents or saboteurs behind every bush. Despite this, for the first time in 14 years of deep isolation, Albanian officials seem anxious for their country to gain wider recognition in the world outside. At present, only Italy, France and Yugoslavia maintain diplomatic missions in Tirana apart from the Soviet Bloc.

Nfld. To Implement Phase Two Of Health Plan Feb. 1

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Both sides of the House applauded when Health Minister McGrath would implement phase two of a health plan Feb. 1 for children under 16. Phase one, which started Jan. 1, 1957, provided free hospital accommodation and the latest step gives free medical and surgical benefits. Dr. McGrath said under the plan's second phase "no parent will have any expenses to face when any Newfoundland child enters hospital unless . . . semi-private or private accommodation is requested." Even then, there will be no medical or surgical bill. "Only the difference between ward rates."

Dr. McGrath said "as far as I can ascertain, Newfoundland was the first province to provide free hospital entry for its children and we shall now be the first province, perhaps in a long time, to provide free medical and surgical treatment." He said free hospital care for all citizens is likely to be instituted as a result of federal-provincial agreements July 1, 1958. "Certainly we are prepared, and most of the preliminary work is done." AHEAD OF OTHERS "However, even on this excellent contribution to social welfare is in full swing, we shall be ahead of other provinces in our provision of free surgical, medical and specialist treatment for our children." Dr. McGrath said his department realized that hospital accommodation throughout the province was "inadequate" and money must be made available to remedy this situation. "The prospects however for the immediate future are most encouraging."

INTERPRETING THE NEWS

Fresh Fireworks Can Be Expected Over U. K. Budget

By ALAN HARVEY Canadian Press Staff Writer LONDON (CP) — The issues in Britain's "resignations crisis" now seem fairly clear. Two main points emerge from Tuesday night's speech by Peter Thorneycroft explaining why he resigned as chancellor of the exchequer. One is that fresh fireworks can be expected within the next few weeks. These will come when the government tables supplementary estimates totalling some £200,000,000 ($560,000,000) covering extra expenditure in 1957-58. The other is that defence outlays played as big a part in the financial dispute as did social services. In trying to prune government expenditure, Thorneycroft obviously fought two losing battles—the first against Defence Minister Duncan Sandys, the second on the issue of such welfare services as family allowances. UNTOUCHABLE ITEM Originally, the point at issue in the resignation of Thorneycroft and his two chief treasury officials, Enoch Powell and Nigel Birch, was said to be a mere matter of £50,000,000. The figure covered certain special services. Thorneycroft was portrayed as intent on slashing an item which some regard as politically untouchable, while a majority in the cabinet favored a more flexible policy. From Thorneycroft's speech, and hints dropped by political commentators, it seems apparent that the motivating factors in three-ply resignations were broader than first suggested. Some insiders suggest that the first deadlock occurred over defence, with Sandys threatening to resign if his estimates were pared down. When a similar impasse developed on social services, Thorneycroft and his treasury aides felt they were isolated in the cabinet, and that they could no longer pursue the tough financial policies they inaugurated last September. The next round in the "resignations crisis" will occur next month. Publication of the supplementary estimates will disclose extra sums to cover higher payments, compensation for Egyptian refugees and deficiency payments to farmers. These supplementary estimates

Consider Aid To Caribbean

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is giving urgent consideration to means of economic assistance for the new Caribbean federation, Prime Minister Diefenbaker told the Commons Thursday. He said appropriate forms of practical assistance for the near future are being studied, along with the question of long-term aid to the former British colonies. He expected to have an announcement shortly. Immigration Minister Davie Fulton also informed the House that the government has been giving attention to immigration policy as it affects the West Indies area and probably will be discussing this with federation officials in the near future. Mr. Diefenbaker drew attention to the current visit to Canada of a trade mission from Jamaica, which he described as one of the most important units in the new federation. He said he plans to meet the mission to discuss "detailed ways in which the commercial ties between this important island in the Caribbean and ourselves can be strengthened."

Americans Invest Heavily In Canada, N. Y. Report Shows

By FORBES RHUDE Canadian Press Business Editor In a little more than three years United States investors have invested $318,801,357 in other countries, principally Canada, through eight companies formed for that purpose.

This is stated in a release issued from New York on behalf of the Committee of Canadian Investment Companies. The companies are set up with an eye on both the Canadian and American tax laws.

All are Canadian, in that they are formed in Canada as Canadian companies, but have non-Canadian ownership. They are: Canada General Fund Ltd., Canadian International Growth Fund Ltd., Keystone Fund of Canada Ltd., New York Capital Fund of Canada Ltd., Scudder Fund of Canada Ltd., all members of the committee; and Investors Group Canadian Fund Ltd., Axe Templeton Growth Fund of Canada Ltd., and United Funds Canada Ltd.

They are of the mutual-fund type. Investors put their money into shares of the companies; the companies invest the money in various securities; and thus, through ownership in the companies, investors get an interest in a wide list of undertakings. 25 MILLION ELSEWHERE Of the total investment of $318,801,357 at Dec. 1, about $25,000,000 was in countries other than Canada.

In the U.S. there has been some pressure for change of the American tax law as it applies to these companies, but, in the words of a Toronto representative of one of the companies, "the group has made representations which so far have been favorably received."

The current 24-page release seems to be directed chiefly at American readership — presumably as an answer to adverse tax representations — and sets out the value of this type of investment. "One of the major benefits of this form of portfolio investment," the release says, "is that by its very nature it automatically tends to eliminate tensions and misunderstanding between the U.S. and other nations."

The release notes concern in Canada over the implications of direct U.S. investment (such as by parent companies in their subsidiaries).

BECOME PARTNERS "This concern does not arise when portfolio investment companies buy shares in Canadian and other free-world companies — because the investment companies become partners of Canadians in their own enterprises, rather than owing outright to the exclusion of Canadians. "The Canadian investment companies limit sharply the per-
