Khrushchev Prestige Slips As Berlin Crisis Drags On

An AP News Analysis
By PRESTON GROVER

MOSCOW (AP)—The fourth anniversary of Premier Khrushchev's announcement that he would settle the Berlin question in six months finds the issue perhaps even farther from settlement—and Khrushchev under pressure.

Khrushchev, nearing the peak of his power at home and abroad, announced on Nov. 10, 1958, at a Polish-Russian friendship rally in Moscow, that a treaty with the two Germanys should be signed at once. If the West did not agree, he said, then at the end of six months he would invite Communist nations and any others who chose to come to sign a separate treaty with East Germany. He contended the treaty would make West Berlin, encircled by Communist East Germany, a "free, internationalized city."

Time after time the deadline was postponed. Now there is apparently no deadline.

Khrushchev told correspondents at a Kremlin reception last week that, with the Cuban situation growing quiet, the Berlin situation was becoming more acute.

PARTNERS AT ELBOW

But a significant thing developed at the reception. At the premier's elbow as he delivered the formal toasts for the 45th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution stood the other three members of what now is called here the "quadrumvirate"—President Leonid Brezhnev; Frol R. Kozlov, a top party secretary, and Alexei Kosygin, a first deputy premier.

Throughout the anniversary parade in Red Square, these four also were shown together. Anastas Mikoyan, the other first deputy premier, was in Cuba conferring with Premier Castro.

Moreover, in the several meetings with the leaders from other Communist states over the last dozen days, the quadrumvirate has been on hand, with an exception or two.

No one knows for sure what is going on inside the Kremlin.

But from the viewpoint of interested foreigners it appears that the premier's sails have been somewhat trimmed, and that these three associates now share more than before the power that long was largely in the hands of Khrushchev alone.

DOGGED BY SETBACKS

Again, remembering that this is a view from outside the Kremlin, it would appear that setbacks are impairing Khrushchev's position:

1. His agricultural reforms—and he has been the prime mover there—have not brought profitable results. It is the worst element of the Soviet economy.

2. In 1961 he tried to liquidate finally the Stalinist antiparty group headed by V. M. Molotov, but so far as is known, some are still in the party. One of the group, Marshal Voroshilov, has completed the cycle from disgrace last year to a restored place of honor on Lenin's tomb, where he appeared at the revolution day demonstration.

3. The Berlin affair—which Khrushchev is largely credited with initiating.

4. The failure of the Cuban missile manoeuvre.

Western analysts here still marvel at how close the Russians came by the Cuban manoeuvre to a much improved position — even a dangerously dominant position—to demand a settlement on Berlin, which is the major trouble area.

The setback in Cuba is looked upon here—again from outside the Kremlin—as a near disaster for Soviet prestige throughout the world.

Nuclear Arms Stand Given Re-examination By Liberals

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberal party is re-examining its position on Canadian acquisition of nuclear arms and wants the government and Parliament to do so, too.

So far, the Liberals have not come out definitely in favor of Canada declaring itself a non-nuclear power for all time, but this is one of the conclusions that might be reached in the current re-assessment of its position being undertaken by the party's brain trust.

Word of the reconsideration was given last week to a delegation representing the Canadian Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament during its mass lobby of MPs and leaders of all parties. Some of the lobbyists immediately jumped to the conclusion that the Liberals definitely supported a no-nuclear-arms-for-Canada stand.

This, a Liberal party source said Monday, was an improper conclusion, probably fostered by the ban-the-bomb enthusiasm of the lobbyists.

Liberal policy, as stated by Opposition Leader Pearson, has been that acquisition or manufacture of nuclear arms are not necessary for Canada, under either Canadian or American control, but that the overall needs of Canadian security must be watched constantly.

MAY BE NECESSARY

If world developments make the use of nuclear weapons by Canadian forces at home or abroad necessary, then the Liberal party would prefer to have control vested collectively in NATO.

Government policy is that Canada should not acquire nuclear weapons as long as there is any prospect for international agreement on disarmament.

But the government will give no definite pledge against acquiring nuclear arms any time in the future, when they might become necessary for the joint Canadian-American defence of North America. It is on this point that the lobbyists last week were disappointed in their interview with Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The Liberal opposition says a re-examination of Canada's stand on nuclear weapons should be undertaken by a defence policy committee of the Commons. The government has given no definite reply to the opposition request for establishment of such a committee but it believed the government will turn the idea down—as did the previous Liberal government when the Conservatives asked for it 10 years ago.

One Liberal suggestion is that the re-appraisal of Canada's defence policy should embrace the role of NATO itself. The review could even go so far as to produce a recommendation that Canada and NATO renounce nuclear arms.

But so far, the Liberal source said, the party is not willing to put itself foursquare behind such a thesis.

The bidding:

Opening lead—king of clubs.

This hand was played in team match in England. The bidding was exactly the same at both tables— believe it or not —but the play went differently.

At the first table, West led the king of clubs and East signaled by playing the ten. West continued with the ace and another club and East won with the eight and shifted to a spade.

West took the jack with the queen and led a club to East's nine. Another spade lead trapped South's king and the outcome was that declarer lost six spades and five clubs to go down seven— 2,000 points!

At the second table, West woodenly opened his fourth best spade, much to his eventual regret. Declarer took it with the jack and cashed six heart tricks.

On the last heart West had to choose a discard from his holding of

He realized that the discard of a low club would subject him to an endplay, so he discarded the king of clubs in the hope his partner had the queen.

This didn't work out well because, when South now led a low club, West played the seven and the jack in dummy won. It was the eighth trick for South. Declarer now decided not to look a gift horse in the mouth, so he led a diamond to the ace to assure the doubled contract.

West stuck to his guns though, and dropped the king on the ace, this time hoping his partner had the queen of diamonds. West was determined not to be endplayed.

However, this didn't turn out brightly either, because South cashed the queen of diamonds and played the queen of clubs. West, by now down to three cards, had to win with the ace and concede a spade to the king, so he got endplayed after all.

The result was that South made five notrump for a score of 1,150 points, which was nine tricks and 3,150 points better than his namesake at the first table had done.
