

CURRENT NOTES.

Silence is the severest criticism. Better bend the neck than bruise the forehead.

A wasp ceases to sting when let alone—and flies go out for want of fuel.

Every day a little helpfulness. We live for the good of others, if our living be in any sense true living.

We do love beauty at first sight; and we do cease to love it if it is not accompanied by amiable qualities.

Excess of grief for the deceased is madness; for it is an injury to the living, and the dead know it not.

He who comes up to his own idea of greatness must always have had a very low standard of it in his own mind.

A good deed is never lost; he who sows courtesies reaps friendship, and he who plants kindness gathers love.

A narrow-minded man can never possess real and true generosity; he can never go beyond mere benevolence.

A good many have tried to be great men and failed, but no one ever tried to be a good man and was unsuccessful.

What we charitably forgive will be recompensed as well as what we charitably give, and with heavier interest.

In life it is difficult to say who do you most mischief—enemies with the worst intentions, or friends with the best.

The more a good idea is developed, the more concise becomes its expression; the better a tree is pruned, the better the fruit becomes.

What seems to us but sad funeral tapers, may be Heaven's distant lamps, destined to illumine our path and show us the way to happiness.

Flirting may be "attentions without intentions," but it cannot be ignored that it is the fields of attention that the flowers of intention spring up.

If you wish to appear agreeable in society you must consent to be taught many things which you know already, and silently observe many things you have never been taught.

Where you are is of no moment, but only what you are doing there. It is not the place that ennobs you, but you the place; and this only by doing that which is great and noble.

A man's personality has a powerful, subtle influence on all with whom he comes in contact. It will readily be seen, therefore, how necessary it is for us to cultivate an agreeable personality.

If you stick your finger into the water and take it out, it is in vain you look for the hole; and equally so it is to suppose, whatever space you occupy, that the world will miss you when you die.

Bavaria has enacted a law, forbidding the marriage of couples who do not possess sufficient means to maintain themselves, or who during the previous three years, have received help from the public funds, or who have not paid their quota of taxes, or regarding whom their reason to suspect that trouble will result to the household from the want of sobriety, economy or love of work. This law gives the sacred ordinance of marriage the blackest kind of a black eye.

Transfusion of blood has been successfully tried in the collapse of cholera by a member of the Paris Faculty of Medicine. The patient, who was moribund when the remedy was tried, recovered from the death coma in a few minutes; and, from the moment of the transfusion, spontaneously and rapidly improved. Human blood was employed in the case; but it is mooted to make experiments with the blood of domestic animals particularly sheep and cattle.
