Kensington United Church Scene Of June Ceremony

Baskets of spring flowers decorated the chancel of the Kensington United Church for the marriage of Betty Mary Palmer, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Palmer, Kensington, and Ralph Leslie Woodside, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Elton Woodside, Clinton.

The bride's paternal grandmother, Mrs. Ward Jelley was dressed in a three-piece suit of blue and white with a blue hat and a corsage of rose carnations.

A reception for seventy guests was held at the Murray Christian Education Center, Kensington, with members of the U.W. catering.

The bride's table featured lighted tapers and a three tiered wedding cake surrounded with a wreath of pansies and decorated with a miniature bride and groom beneath an arch of lily of the valley. Bows of pansies centered the guest tables.

The toast to the bride was proposed by the best man and the groom responded. Rev. Gordon MacBeth also spoke briefly extending good wishes.

Mrs. Bertram Palmer sister-in-law of the bride circled the guest book.

After leaving on a brief honeymoon, the bride donned a light blue two-piece costume of boucle with white accessories and pinned on a yellow corsage.

The groom has obtained his diploma in electrical engineering from St. Dunstan's University and plans to continue his education at Nova Scotia Technical College, Halifax.

The bride graduated this year in beauty culture at the Provincial Vocational School, Charlottetown.

Out-of-the-province guests attending the wedding were Mrs. and Mrs. Alfred Palmer and Mrs. and Mrs. Richard Smith of Fredericton, N. B. and Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Woodside of St. John's, N. S. Photo by R. A. MacKinnon.

Queen Of N. Z. Maoris Is Fifth Of Reigning Line

By EVELYN FALCONER WELLINGTON (Reuters) — After five kings the Maori people of New Zealand have a queen for the first time.

She is Queen Te Atia-Rangi-Kaahu (Soaring Bird of the Dawn) who at the age of 33 is married to a successful dairy farmer and is the mother of six children.

Her accession is the highest and most influential position among her people is expected to contribute to closer co-operation between Maoris and Europeans in New Zealand and greater social and cultural progress among the Maoris themselves.

There is need for wise strong leadership for the Maoris, especially among the younger generation. Maori youths are expected from Queen Te Atia who succeeded her father, King Koroki, the fifth Maori king, on his death last May 24.

ATTENDED FUNCTIONS.

In recent years, Queen Te Atia, as Princess Piki, represented her father on many occasions when poor health forced him to curtail public appearances.

Princess Piki escorted the Queen and Prince Philip to the Maori matae or meeting place, at Turangawaewae, Ngaurua, in 1954 when the royal visitors paid an unscheduled visit to the area—a gesture greatly appreciated by the Maoris.

Now, as Queen Te Atia, she has shown signs of inheriting her father's wisdom and judgment. She is known to favor his policies, particularly for the removal of old grievances.

She received her education at public and Anglican church schools. She speaks both Maori and English.

Administrative Job Found Fascinating By Can. Girl

By MARIAN ARGUE

OTTAWA (CP) — If you're around the Canadian Embassy in Paris next fall, you may run into Michele Lapierre. Besides showing Parisians what a pretty Canadian girl looks like, she'll be doing such things as promoting Expo and arranging cultural exchanges.

The fair-haired 22-year-old is an administrative officer with the external affairs department. After two years in Ottawa she uses words like fascinating, stimulating and exciting to describe her job. The 3-year Paris posting is frosting on the cake, "fantastic," she says excitedly.

A small, slim girl with big blue eyes and freckles, Michele wanted to be a teacher when she came to Ottawa in 1964. But her friend was applying to the government and external affairs had been a high school ambition, so she went for an interview.

"After four weeks in the department I was hooked."

She has worked in the information protocol, government hospitality and cultural exchange sections and met such people as the Shah of Iran and the late Indian prime minister Shree, while helping arrange their visits to Canada.

Right now language training takes up most of her time. She isn't a student — she speaks English, French and Spanish already. Her job is arranging times for external affairs personnel taking courses in everything from Chinese to Swahili.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Weeding Is The Order Of The Day On Farms

"Now where are your men this morning? The place seems deserted!" a caller offered with a smile to the mother of the house across the lane. Not deserted, only quiet. We noticed this when Sample's inquiring bark before this had echoed hollowly about. And where was the family at this time?

The women, the farmwives and cooks? We had seen a new come from a spell of weeding in the new garden to the rear of the buildings. The other was taken up with her ordinary round — dishes to wash and rooms to tidy. Just the little duties of the day which engage us, and we find that we do these in a leisurely fashion now that the summer is here. We take time to enjoy the sun-spilled yards and fields, to watch a little wander from up the creek wader in its own stillness, to hear the ripple of tune a goldfinch spills in the oak, and the fussing of a robin when a cat presumes to intrude into her precinct.

The farmers were at the weeding. It was likely, dinner would be delayed because there was a certain goal set today.

"We're going to try to end it by dinner time," James said at parting. "And to do that we have a busy morning ahead."

This evening we brought a bit of mending to the light on the veranda, where James was seated.

"I surely a lovely evening Ellen — this. And a grand time of year!" he offered. "What do I smell? It's not the lilacs, they are gone now. Oh, I know," he smiled, "it's the roses! Smell good, don't they?"

And the evening set its shadows. Touched the far hilltops. Filled the low of the valley. Spread a dusky blanket over the fields. And another day of summer was past and over. We had loved.

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good-night.

The king movement was established by the Maori people of the Waikato province in 1858, when Chief Te Wherohero was installed as King Potatau.

It was the direct result of disillusionment among the Maoris following the Maori wars and British confiscation of their lands.

Pattern Sizes Are Determined By Measuring

When in doubt about size of a pattern, always refer to the measurement chart on the cover or catalog or back of pattern envelope.

Check the back waist length by typing a string tightly around the waist. Then measure from the prominent bone at the back of the neck to the string.

If necessary, lengthen or shorten the difference between this measurement and the back waist length given on the back of the envelope.

ROSE PETAL JAM

Pick petals, discard heads. Put sugar in water and boil gently for half hour. Pour half syrup over petals. Mix with rosen spoon till petals are set then pour in rest of syrup and boil for another half hour. Stir steadily. This jam is delicate, so every pot or spoon must be immaculately clean. Metal spoons must not be used. As petals boil then must be pressed down as they are light and rise. When they become transparent and tender, add citric acid crystals and boil another 10 minutes. Place in fancy jars, small and seal with paraffin.

FEARS AFRICAN ERUPTION

PARIS (Reuters) — U.S. Senator Robert Kennedy says in a magazine interview published here Saturday that he would not be surprised if a new Viet Nam erupts on the African continent in the coming years.

He was quoted by the weekly "Jeune Afrique" as saying: "There exists in Africa an explosive situation of which the Americans seem for the moment to be unaware, although it is not excluded that we may be obliged to intervene there if things suddenly get worse."

Her job could be the career path to an ambassadorship. The other route, for experts in economics or politics, is through the foreign service officer ranks.

"We have one woman ambassador, Margaret Meagher in Austria, and three other women who could be. But what if they don't get married? Women have to travel alone."

It's pretty hard for them to be lonely though. They're much too busy. Michele once worked 21 1/2-hour days arranging an official visit.

And then there are the parties that are almost part of the job. Michele says she has rarely met a boring person at all the diplomatic cocktail parties, state dinners or official receptions she has been to.

Adults Guiltiest Of Littering, Poll Indicates

NEW YORK (AP) — Littering is a habit that apparently grows with age.

A cross-section of professional and volunteer litter fighters was asked by Keep America Beautiful, the national anti-litter organization, whether children litter more than adults.

The answer was no. Fifty-eight per cent of the participating litter fighters from all 50 states, said children litter less than adults. Thirty-two per cent voted in favor of adults, while 10 per cent were undecided.

The reasons given for favoring children were varied, but among favorite themes were: educational programs in schools and youth organizations make children aware of the litter problem before they develop the habit; adults, who travel more and are out longer hours, have more opportunities to litter; and grown-ups make daily use of more items with a litter potential.

One respondent, siding with the young folks, said: "Children follow the example of their parents and senior relatives. Therefore, the question of littering is not a responsibility that can be placed on a child."
