

Trinity To Honor Late Mr. Henry Smith

and the building finished in November 1864. At the turn of the century, in 1900, the Reverend George M. Young, who is to be one of the special preachers on Sunday, was the Minister of the Church. He was assisted by the Reverend E. Slackford and a number of local preachers, who went to the outlying districts. The stewards were Henry Smith, Recording Steward, and Messrs. E. Moore, G. H. Hazard, Dr. Harry Johnson, E. T. Higgs, A. C. Duchemin and James Paton.

Among other of the church officials in the years 1903-04 were Richard Heertz, W. A. Weeks, B. Balderston, R. C. Goff, W. W. Johnson, Benjamin Seller, R. M. Johnson, L. L. Beer and P. S. Moore. The Trustees were Messrs. L. L. Beer, W. A. Weeks, Richard Heertz, F. S. Moore, James Paton, L. M. Poole, W. W. Stanley, Mark Wright, Henry Smith, and G. H. Hazard. W. W. Stanley was the Sunday School Superintendent, and E. T. Higgs was superintendent at Kensington Hall.

Just before the turn of the last century, Thomas Dawson, grandfather of Henry Smith, came to this island from Coot Hill, Ireland. He and Benjamin Chapell, who was then living in Charlottetown, began to hold Cottage prayer meetings and preaching for those who wished to attend.

In 1807 the Reverend James Bulplitt was sent to the Colony by the London Missionary Society. He was the first Methodist minister to be stationed on the island, and because he had, previous to this time, five years' work in Newfoundland, he was eminently fitted for the work to which he was assigned.

At first Mr. Bulplitt preached in the old Court House, as the chapel was not opened for six years. It must have been with the utmost in sacrifice that this building was finally completed because Charlottetown was then but a mere village, and those early settlers were only beginning to establish their own homes.

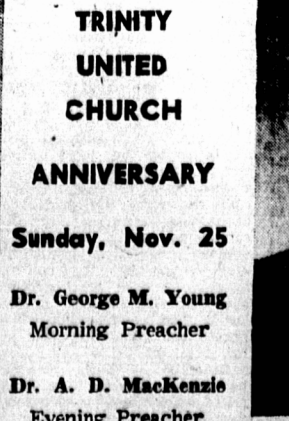

Some years later, in 1817, the Wesleyan Methodist Sunday School was begun by the Reverend J. B. Strong, with a membership of 20 including the superintendent and teachers.

First Chapel Built In 1810 the first tiny chapel was built on land "conveyed to the Wesleyan Society by Benjamin Evans." This 40 x 30 foot chapel with a dwelling for the preacher, was on Richmond Street between Queen and Pownall—just below the present Royal Bank.

The names of DesBrisay, Mabe, Robinson, Avar and Murphy, to which this land was deeded, all figured prominently in the life of the community and many of them have descendants still living here. The Apothecaries Hall (now the Hughes Drug Co.) is still associated with the DesBrisay name and St. Avar's with the Avars who lived in that district.

This first Chapel was used for twenty years and from a mere handful, the congregation expanded so rapidly that on November 18, 1833, the land for a new church was purchased. This is where the Heertz Memorial Hall now stands. This land was conveyed to Isaac Smith, Robert Longworth, William Tanton, John Boyver, Christopher Cross, Henry Smith, John Tremman, Thomas Dawson and Charles Welsh as Trustees of the Society. This second chapel, which was opened July 9, 1835, was 42 x 55 feet with a gallery on three sides and would seat about 600 people. Two years later it was enlarged by 30 feet and again a large wing was added until there was accommodation for more than 1,000. This building was in use for 15 years.

Revival Meetings At this time, under the ministry of the Reverend Frederick Smallwood, 300 new members were added to the church and the spiritual life greatly stimulated by a series of revival meetings. In September 1862, the trustees bought the land where the present church now stands. The corner stone was laid May 26th, 1863.

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

Many accounts of wild children—for example, that of Valentine and Orson—are doubtless fabulous. But the following cases are well authenticated.

First, I shall tell you a few highlights of the life of Peter the Wild Boy who was found at the beginning of the last century in a German forest, to whom the above name was afterward given. Peter, about 16, was leading the life of a beast when discovered. He walked on all fours, ate grass, and climbed trees with the agility of a monkey.

King George I directed that the wild boy be given every care, but as he was unable to speak, it was not possible to learn how he came to be left in the forest. In 1726, Peter escaped to the woods and had to be brought in by a posse.

Early in the following year (1726), George I returned to England, and the boy was brought over also. The public papers had a lot to say about Peter and his conduct and appearance.

All attempts to teach the boy to speak proved futile, and it was several years before he really began to adjust himself to civilization.

He died at Broadway Farm, England, in February, 1786, at the supposed age of seventy-three.

Our second wild child, a girl, was found near the river Marne, in France. In a few months her fame spread to Chalons and then to Paris. De Choiseul went to see her and had her transported to a convent, where she was given the name of Mademoiselle Leblanc.

Confinement brought about ill health and she was removed to Paris and a fund raised for her support. Towards the latter portion of her existence, few traces of the savage state she was found in, remained, or if they existed poor health prevented her from manifesting them. She died at Paris in the year 1780, 49 years after her capture by Monsieur de Soigny, and in about the 62nd year of her life.

Towards the end of the year 1798, a child who appeared to be about 12 years old, was captured by a trio of hunters as he was climbing a tree to avoid them. This wild French child hated civilization so much that he escaped every time the chance arose.

How he was originally abandoned, nobody ever learned. But from certain scars on his body, it was assumed that he had escaped during those terrible days of the French Revolution. When first taken from the wilds his diet consisted of nuts, acorns, grass. His eyes had that shifty expression seen in savage beasts and he could utter only a guttural and monotonous sound.

In 1799 he was placed in a deaf and dumb institution under the care of competent doctors, where he apparently made some progress in the way of learning the laws of civilized peoples.

The fourth and last case of wild humans which I shall briefly touch upon was that of a youth who was left at the gate of the city of Nuremberg, Germany, so recently as 1828. In the child's pocket was found a note which reads in part: "... the child is already baptized. You must give him an education and a surname ... when he is 17 years old, send him to Nuremberg to the fifth regiment of Light Horse, for there his father also served. He was born April 30, 1812. I am a poor girl and cannot support him. His father is dead."

The authorities could make nothing of the strange note of the half wild child that had been thrust upon them. It was a $84 question whether to treat him as an idiot or an imposter.

An examination of his person at the police station presented new grounds for surprise. The soles of his feet were covered all over with warts. It was evident to those who examined him that he had not been accustomed to doing much walking. On the other hand, the palms of his hands bore the marks of much hard usage, suggesting that at least a part of his time was spent climbing trees.

In time, Caspar was permitted to circulate freely among the families of the prison guards. Later he was taken under the wing of Professor Daumir and was taught to talk. The only information that he could furnish about his early life is that he lived in a cage, where he always sat upon the ground. He never saw the face of his keeper. Each morning when he awoke a loaf of bread and a pitcher of water was beside him.

On the 14th of December, 1833, Caspar was accosted by a stranger who told Caspar to meet him in the park that night and he would receive full information concerning his origin. Both met at the appointed place. Without warning, the stranger plucked a dagger from Caspar's breast and then fled. Caspar lived long enough to relate the circumstances of his assassination. No trace of the murderer could be found, and the double secret has been chalked up by the French police as their amazing mystery No. 1.

Inspiring Address By Missionary

Miss Gena Hunt, missionary on furlough gave an unusually informative and comprehensive message of her activities in India as she addressed an interested gathering in Central Christian Church on Wednesday night. An occasion such as was afforded those who gathered to hear Miss Hunt is rarely possible.

Not only did Miss Hunt have with her a fine collection of Indian curios, the workmanship of which was amazing; but she also had an interesting assortment of Indian dress. Miss Hunt modeled the costumes and showed the value of such types of garments both as to versatility and beauty. Excellent colored films of the mission compound at Kulpar and the work therein engaged were also shown.

Highlighting the evening was the impressive message brought by the speaker, "India," she said, "though having obtained her independence and virtually considered a free country, has not actually reached this aspirated state. Freedom cannot alone be considered a state of authority. Freedom depends upon native conditions of body and mind and spirit."

Special Service At Victoria

There was a service of special significance held in the United Church at Victoria on September 9th, at 7.30 P. M. when a Baptismal Font was dedicated by the Minister the Rev. L. S. Woolfrey, in memory of Mrs. Debbie Brian Clay.

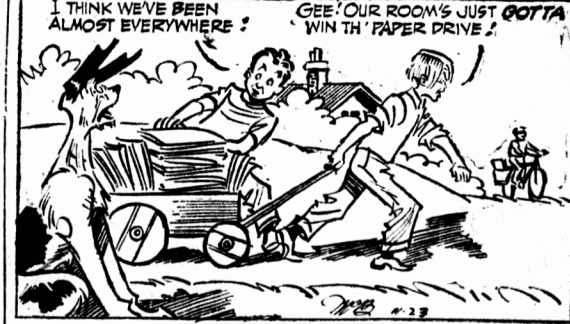

The Font is in beautiful white marble and was presented to the church at Victoria by the daughters of the late Mrs. Debbie Clay. The names of Mrs. Gray's daughters are Mrs. Wm. Faxen, Mrs. Ruth Neary and Mrs. Geo. Goodrich. A contribution towards the purchasing of the Font, was made by the girls of a college where Mrs. Neary is house mother; the girls of the Gamma Phi Beta Sorority of Colorado College of A. and M. at Fort Collins contributed towards the procuring of the beautiful memorial to Mrs. Clay.

The inscription on the Font is as follows: In loving memory of a Mother who has gone but who left with us so sweet a memory that she still lives. Presented by the three daughters of Mrs. Debbie Brian Clay.

PARIS, Nov. 22 — (AP)—West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer arrived in Paris Tuesday for talks with the foreign ministers of France, Britain and the United States.

of Miss Thelma Burns presented a special musical selection. Miss Hunt will complete her Island literary next Tuesday night having spoken in the following places: Charlottetown, Montague, Murray Harbour, Greenmount, Summerside, Fredericton and New Glasgow.
