RCAF Faces Big Reduction In Aircraft For Transport

By DAVE McINTOSH Canadian Press Staff Writer OTTAWA (CP) — The RCAF, now battling to retain fighter planes, Thursday was faced with the prospect of a big reduction in numbers of its transport aircraft.

Only two days after Prime Minister Diefenbaker had again indicated that the government is unlikely to purchase the super-nuclear Arrow jet interceptor for the RCAF, the Air Transport Board Wednesday "very strongly" urged the government to divert to Canadian "commercial" air carriers "a much greater portion" of transport work now being done by the air force.

WEEK AT SDU DUE MONDAY

It has become necessary this week to delay publication of the regular weekly department, "The Week At SDU," which usually appears on Saturdays. The columns which ordinarily would have appeared today is now scheduled for Monday.

Transport Minister Hees told the Commons this particular recommendation will require further careful examination and that he will consult Defence Minister Peakes about it. APPEAR UNPERTURBED On the surface, at least, the RCAF appeared unperturbed about the board's recommendation. Senior officers said they haven't yet had an opportunity to study implications for the RCAF in the report. However, one officer said that

MacLeod and Greene MONTAGUE "MacLeod and Greene" a well known Montague machinery firm, was established in 1946 by Mr. Frank Greene and Mr. Lester MacLeod of Montague following their release from the R.C.A.F.

Starting small, the firm began in the plumbing business and sales and service of Esso and Fairbanks burners. Within the year new lines were added which included International Harvester and Beatty Bros. products, electric and acetylene welding and well drilling. Mr. MacLeod states that the firm's success can be attributed to their ability to supply service for the equipment sold. This service consists of six to eight well trained men, machinery and parts to do a complete motor overhaul of diesel and other machines, all done with speed and efficiency which is most essential to the farmer. The I. H. B. 250 diesel tractor, which is well known for its performance, efficiency and economy; the outstanding performance of the I. H. combine; the sturdy, low-built I. H. trucks with motor car comfort, are all expertly serviced by MacLeod and Greene. They also handle Fairbanks fridges, Finley ranges, washers heating equipment, tires and a complete De Laval line.
