PHASING

Of the federal government's $45,000,000 contribution, about $25,000,000 would be spent on rehabilitation and operation of the mines and about $20,000,000 for development of new industry.

The prime minister said operating losses in the first year alone were expected to be about $25,000,000, but the mining program would progressively reduce these annual losses and, therefore, the federal funds required.

From the annual savings in subsidies, money would become available to augment the economic development fund.

Mine Union Boss Gives Approval

SYDNEY (CP)—The boss of District 26, United Mine Workers of America greeted with approval Thursday the federal provision in a 1967 announcement on coal and said "they'll never phase out the coal industry."

William (Doll) Marsh said in an interview his union is particularly "happy" with the $25,000,000 which the federal government says it will pour annually into a new crown corporation set up to take control of the coal-mining interests of Dominion Steel and Coal Corp.

He wasn't yet familiar with the "fine print" of statements made simultaneously Thursday by Prime Minister Pearson in Ottawa and Premier Stanfield in Halifax "but we are pleased over what we do know, especially the $25,000,000 for the coal industry. We've been looking for that for a long, long time."

"We are pleased over the fact the government has had the good, honest, common sense not to do away with the coal industry as Dr. Donald recommended."

Preparations Being Made For Huge Bonfire Here

The heat that fused the colonies of British North America was sparked in Charlottetown back on a September day in 1864 and it resulted in a country destined to become one of the great nations of the world.

When those statesmen of a long gone era "just sat down in Charlottetown" they laid the foundation for the land they were to build and which was to grow with the years which also saw it grow to greatness.

Charlottetown became known as the "Birthplace of Confederation" and the city in 1964 staged one of the greatest celebrations in its history to commemorate the first meeting.

CANADA READY
Canada officially became a nation in 1867 and is ready now to truly celebrate nationally as it stands poised on the threshold of its 100th anniversary.

Here in the heart of the city where it all began so long ago the representative of Her Majesty The Queen will light the Centennial Flame outside the ancient building which houses the famous Confederation Centre. That flame is expected to spread from one end of the land to another as it starts on New Year's Eve.

SPREADS WORD
Charlottetown itself will help to spread the word with what may well be the most tremendous bonfire ever lighted in the City. It should send flames towering into the sky to tell everyone that a great nation is celebrating the anniversary of its birth.

Mayor Walter J. Cox will be waiting in Victoria Park at seven o'clock on New Year's Eve when a great torch which will be lighted from Centennial Flame and carried to the Park is handed to him. He will touch the torch to the great pile in front of him and start the blaze which will be seen for miles.

City employees are starting to gather all the Christmas Trees left over after the holiday and pile them out in the park. Service clubs and service stations and private vendors all had a great number of trees left unsold and these will be heaped along with all others picked up and added to by a supply of others which are available.

Since the bonfires will be lighted long before the traditional New Year's Eve parties and dances are scheduled to start, it is expected a tremendous crowd of people will jam the park to have a part in the beginning of Canada's birthday party.

Three Island Cows Are Listed In Magazine

A couple of Jersey enthusiasts from the Cross Roads area are featured predominantly in the current issue of the Canadian Jersey Breeder. They are Paul Coody and his neighbour E.A. Myers.

The breed magazine notes that Miss Coody "was a lovely and capable princess" who made friends wherever she went in the big Coliseum where the cattle

How To Handle A Personal Crisis

Why does a critical turning point in life send one person into a tailspin? And make another one change for the better? Why does a self-assured housewife suffer a breakdown, while a disorderly, childish young woman turns out to be a splendid mother? A reliable worker may go to pieces at his job. A rebellious teen-ager may become a civilized young man. Why? In January Reader's Digest learn the new information psychiatrists have discovered in studying personal crises.
