LIBERAL MEETING LAST NIGHT

Addresses by Hon Messrs. Fielding, Paterson and Davies.
When eight o'clock arrived last night the rink was a little better than three parts full; but after the band came and the speech-making commenced the people began to come in and it was not long before the building was very well filled. At no time, however, were all the seats occupied and at no time was the crowd as great as at the Tupper-Foster demonstration last week. There was, of course, a large proportion of Liberal-Conservatives and ladies in the audience, and the test of order was maintained.

The arrangements for the speakers and the audience were the same as at the Tupper meeting, but, as was expected, the mottoes were changed. The building was well lighted and very nicely decorated. Hon. Benj. Rogers, president of the Liberal Association, presided, and seated on the speakers stand with him were Sir Louis Davies, Hon. William Paterson, Hon. W. S. Fielding and members of the press. On the platform in the vicinity of the speakers were Lady Davies, Mrs. McIntyre, wife of the Lieut.-Governor, Premier Fairquharson and wife and Miss Fairquharson, Attorney-General McKinnon, Mayor Warburton, J. H. Bell, M. P., Arthur Peters, M. L. A., L. L. Beer, Geo. Forbes, M. L. A., Hon. Peter Sinclair, Speaker Cumiskey, Hon. Peter McNair, Anthony McLaughlin, M. L. A., Dr. Douglas, M. L. A., Daniel Davies, J. Hughes, George B. Aitken, Charles Palmer, Q. C., W. A. Weeks, R. T. Holman, Matthew Smith, Rev. D. B. McLeod, Dr. Johnson, Rev. D. McLean, Richard Jenkins, Neil McLeod, Walter Matheson, J. E. B. McCready, J. J. Davies and others.

When the ministers made their appearance they were cheered, and the cheering was renewed as each came forward to speak. Hon. Mr. Fielding was the first speaker, and his remarks were, in the main, an effort at correcting what had been said from the same platform a few nights previously by Sir Charles Tupper and Mr. Foster. He claimed that the blessings of good government were not enjoyed during the eighteen years that the Liberal-Conservatives were in power, and argued that the progress made during their regime was not satisfactory. The Conservatives were denounced for expending $33,000,000 a year because they did not have it to spend. He denied that the Liberals ever promised to reduce the debt, and claimed that the Conservatives had increased the debt $3 to the Liberals $1, and asserted that this year the surplus would be in the vicinity of $5,000,000. Mr. Fielding spoke at some length regarding the different classes of accounts, the Crew's Nest deal, the Yukon policy, the Intercolonial railway and the school question.

defending the course pursued by the Government in connection with these matters. He also took up the government's trade policy, and claimed that material reductions had been made in the interest of the consumers. He denied that the Liberals ever promised free trade in the sense that it was understood in these provinces by the sea. The government could regulate the duty, but they could not regulate the price; there were hundreds of articles today that are dearer than they were in 1896. He denied that he ever characterized the policy of mutual preference as "arrant humbug," but said it was arrant humbug on the part of Sir Charles to say he could get it, because it could not be obtained. During the course of Mr. Fielding's remarks he grew impatient over the rumors of the election, which, he intimated, might take place some of these days. But then again it may not be held till next August.

Hon. Mr. Paterson spoke after Mr. Fielding, beginning his remarks about 10:40. He began by impressing upon the people a sense of their duty, which he pointed out, was to insist upon good government. The platform of the Liberal Convention at Ottawa was the platform of the Liberal party and they stood by it; by it they should be judged. The Liberales, he said, never advocated free trade; they advocated a lowering of the duties. This they had done. The government could not help it if goods are dearer today. No government can force the people to buy, but they can control the duties on the goods they buy. In this regard the Liberals had made a reduction equal to 18 1/2 per cent of the taxes. They had made a trade treaty and he thought it had greatly increased. They had turned to the Mother Country for a market for Canadian goods after seeing the disposition on the part of the United States to raise their tariff and thus restrict the importation of Canadian goods. They had given Great Britain a preference in our market and now $3 would buy as much British goods as $2 would of the goods of other nations. Then Mr. Paterson spoke at length of what had been done in the matter of canal deepening and extension, postage, cold storage, etc. claiming credit for the Liberal party for all these. He also criticized the statements of Mr. Foster regarding the expenditure etc. He admitted that the Liberals spent millions more than the Conservatives, but claimed that they had lowered the taxes by millions. He, like Mr. Fielding, closed his remarks with an appeal for the return of Sir Louis Davies and the other Liberal candidates.

Sir Louis Davies was the last speaker, and occupied about half an hour. He criticized some of the statements of Sir Charles and Mr. Foster, paying especial attention to what Sir Charles had said regarding his visit to England in connection with the denouncing of the Belgian German treaty, outlining what he had done on that occasion and admitting that success had not attended his efforts, giving Hon. Mr. Fielding the credit for the action that had been taken by the Motherland. He defied anyone to place a finger upon one act of his during the 28 years of his political life that should cause his loss of the confidence of the people. He was proud to be associated with such men as Bifton, Fielding and Paterson. Sir Louis also spoke briefly in defence of the Government's Yukon policy and other matters. He asked for a renewal of the people's confidence, and besought the return of the other Liberal candidates as well.

The meeting closed with cheers for the Ministers, Premier Laurier and the Queen.

DEVIL'S AUCTION.—Yale's Devil's Auction was greeted by a light house on Monday evening, but those who were there witnessed a fine performance. This great spectacular extravaganza has been somewhat remodelled since its last appearance here. Although the same thread of plot holds it together and many of the incidents are the same, the ballads, costumes and specialties are new. The scenic effects are pleasing and some are extremely beautiful. In all the dance new costumes have been introduced. A very striking set of dances has been introduced at the beginning of the third act. This was entitled as the Dance of the Elements and certainly was the finest thing on a good programme. A good ballet was also introduced in this act. The specialties are good. The tumbling acrobats are very clever and their acts are brisk and funny. Irene and Zizi, the girl contortionist and her dog, made a hit. The sisters Clements, Annie Lloyd and Richard T. Brown each had a turn at providing amusement for the audience. The performance closed with a great scenic production.—Exchange.

The Devil's Auction will be the attraction at the Opera House during Exhibition week.
