MARY HAWORTH Sister Ought To Move Out

Dear Mary Haworth: I am desperately in need of a sister. For the last six months, since her husband died, my sister has been living with us. And in this time, a very strained relationship has developed between my husband and me.

Due to a sick pregnancy — I am expecting a child in late December — I am completely unable to cope with the situation. I know that my husband needs more than just the platonic wife companionship that I can give him at this time.

With my sister here — and with very much the same problem of emotional frustration — they just seemed to gravitate to each other. I am sure that my husband loves me, just as I love him. But neither he nor my sister seems able to resist the temptation of proximity.

Please give me some advice as to how to keep my husband's love and save our home. Sincerely, V. B.

JOINS R. C. M. P.
Lee Sudbury, 20 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Sudbury, Kensington, left Saturday, Nov. 29, for Regina, where he will begin his training as an R.C.M.P. Constable. Lee, who attended school in Kensington, spent last winter working in Edmonton, Alberta, and for the past three summers has been an active lifeguard on North Shore beach.

Prior to his departure for the west, Lee was entertained at his home, by friends and relatives. He was presented with an electric razor, and a wallet containing a sum of money. Best wishes for every success in his new career were extended by Mrs. Arthur Stuart on behalf of Lee's many friends.

PEPLUM PICTURE

Like a man's evening falls the back dipping peplum of this daytime dress by Marie Antoinette for the Association of Canadian Couturiers' fall and winter showing in Montreal. Also designed by this couturier, the oatmeal-toned fabric was specially hand loomed in a ribbed weave of knitting yarn of "Orlon" acrylic fibre with a nylon warp.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Farm Children Do Have Loads of Fun Every Day

"Christmas is not far away now!" we overheard Mack, our eight-year-old son, say with his happiest smile this afternoon to Gage. And when all visiting was terminated by the dusk of the short fall day draping its purple cloak about the lined shoulders of the hills, we watched him pull off toward his home. He had ridden to Alderston on their one and only mount of the farm, a conveyance he seems to favor. In his ten years, he needs no stableman to attend him. He can bridle and lead out, and lead back to the animal's back in no time, a skill quite commendable when found in a small fellow in this era of farming which inclines children to be better acquainted with the shifts and gearings of machinery than with the art of horsemanship. Not that Gage can not also manage the tractor well, and given the occasion, the truck too along the fields, but it is his way with the horses that brings a pleased smile to James' face.

The younger farmer was setting out on his tractor on some mission to the other side of the window we watched the little procession go down along the lane until we presently lost it to sight around a bend of way. The tractor led. And on the tractor, seated comfortably toward the back, were Mack and granddaughter, she to see to the safety of the other two afternoon playmates and neighbours, also riding off home — Bona, a lad in his first term at school, and Depie, his sister and junior, a little lady, very young and "new". Gage followed on his steed. Not without an air, which acknowledged that he was doubtless in a preferred seat, and that his progress was being noted with obvious admiration by the small fry in the wagon ahead. What a feeling of the name from his own day, and what an interesting and happy band.

This week returned the elder son of the name from his own working and settled all the farm-ers into their winter round of day.

Mornings now we can hear across the yards the gentle lowing of the cattle — and the muted sound of the feeding. And sometimes from the stable we can catch the impatient nicker of a horse. But never again shall we hear that of the faithful old mare, who now is no more in the fresh. A sad day that. Not exactly, but one threaded with memories, and regrets.

This week moved nearer to the joys of the Christmas season. And "what shall we give this one that loves one" is a query which lingers in mind. Wherever gifts we may give, one suggests "Let us give them in his name."

Let us remember that He has given us the sun, and the moon, and the stars, the earth with its forests, and mountains, and oceans, and all that lives and moves upon them.

He has given us all the good things and everything that blossoms and bears fruit — and all that we quarrel about and all that we have misused.

And to save us from our own foolishness, and from all our sins, He has sent down to earth and gave Himself.

And for a troubled world, in the still doth the star of Bethlehem shed.

A pastor pure and sweet; And still it leads, as once it led To Father, may that holy star Grow every year more bright, And send its glorious beams afar To fill the world with light."

WIFE PRESERVERS

These plates and cup racks coated with plastic based on vinyl resin have storage space, protect silverware, and are easy to clean. They are used with steel or wooden dishes, preventing clutter. The books can be used with the racks, and they are used with steel or wooden dishes. They are particularly useful for small apartments and cottages.

over way you choose to state it. If your husband fancies that his sex powers are so potent that he can't control himself, he ought to read Frank J. Sheed's book "Society and Sanity". Sheed and Ward — with particular reference to Chapter 8: "The Nature of Sex and Marriage."

This authority neatly punctures the foolish notion, commonly held, that promiscuity is proof of great virility. On the contrary, promiscuity is evidence not of potency but only of weakness of control, he says.

SPEAK YOUR MIND
There is no real sex competence where self-control is not shown. Although the phrase "sexual impotence" usually is taken to mean impotence (or incompetence) for the sex act, there is a slackness of the will, when confronted by temptations of sex, that ought to be recognized as the worse weakness, says Sheed.

"There is no competence in being unable to say No," he adds.

Therefore, don't be craven in dealing with the present problem. Don't be afraid to speak your mind and clear the air. For what to say, there is no need to deal in cloudy reproaches or speculative charges that you can't substantiate.

It should be sufficient to simply point out, with firm frankness, that a situation of risky emotional tension is plainly being set up by your husband and your sister, and that for your peace of mind and the welfare of all concerned, a change must be made. Hence, she is to be the shearer.

CONFIDENTIAL TALK

I suggest that you have a confidential talk with her first, and try to win her co-operation in putting a proper barrier between herself and your husband. It is to be hoped that she will do this without making treacherous fuss about it — treacherous to you, I mean. This would be the right remedy, as of now.

If she stalls, then you should begin preparing, by revivifying your husband, asking his help, talking to your pastor, your doctor, etc., generally proving that you won't be discouraged, and that you do mean business in protecting your marriage, M. H.

Very Harvey Houghton counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write to her in care of this newspaper.

HOUSEHOLD HINT

Brighten soiled glazed china (not waxed - coated china) by spreading it on a flat surface and sponging it quickly with lukewarm water. If pressing is necessary, use a towlwarim iron and work on the wrong side of the china, or on the right side with slightly dampened cloth over it.

Many printed coupons and hints, as well as rayon upholstery and slip cover fabrics, may be brightened in the same way.

Paraffin will seal leaky valves. Heat paraffin or wax over an open flame and allow it to drip onto cracks or porous areas.
