Summer's Lull In Steel Ends

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The summer lull in American steel production has been broken with a rise in output during each of the last two weeks, Steel magazine reports.

The weekly journal of metal-working estimates last week's production at 2,540,000 net tons, compared with the preceding week's 2,454,000 tons and 2,413,000 tons in the week-ended July 30.

The magazine says prospects for more gains are good and the volume of orders filled by mills will be increasing.

"On top of present good demand from many steel-consuming industries will be a resurgence in buying by the automobile industry," Steel says. "It expects to see production records in September and October."

"In the last four months of this year, steel shipments to automakers will be higher than they were in the corresponding period of 1965."

The magazine says customer reaction to recent price increases on light, flat-rolled products was barely noticeable.

"Most of them looked upon the revisions as inevitable. The loudest objections came from government administrative heads in Washington."
