Trust.

I know not if or dark or bright
Shall be my lot:
If that wherein my hopes delight
Be best or not.

It may be mine to drag for years
Toil's heavy chain;
Or day and night my meat be tears
On bed of pain.

Dear faces may surround my hearth
With smiles and glee;
Or I may dwell alone, and mirth
Be strange to me.

My bark is wafted to the strand
By breath divine:
And on the helm there rests a hand
Other than mine.

One who has known in storms what sail
I have on board;
Above the raving of the gale,
I hear my Lord.

He holds me when the billows smite,—
I shall not fall.
If sharp, 'tis short; if long, 'tis light,—
He tempers all.

Safe to the land, safe to the land,—
The end is this;
And then with him go hand in hand
Far into bliss.

She was Artless and She was Kind.

He was a married man, blessed—or the opposite, as the reader may determine—with an extremely jealous wife. One evening not long ago he seized a chance opportunity to do escort to a charming miss of sweet sixteen, whose blue eyes and dark drooping lashes exercised a glamour over every man who happened to come within range of their charm. At last her home was reached, and as they paused at the gate the maiden turned her lovely orbs full upon him and said:

'I'm so grateful for your kindness, sir!'

'Don't mention it, I beg of you,' he ejaculated, gallantly.

Very likely the unsophisticated maiden misunderstood the motive of his remark, for she quickly answered, in a reassuring tone:

'Oh, I certainly won't sir, as long as I live, if you don't wish me to?'

Work.

We are all of us workers in one way or another, but how many of us are possessed with an earnest desire that the work we put forth from our hands shall be a thorough, honest, faithful performance that shall fulfill its purpose and withstand the ravages of time? The great difference in labor is, not in what is done—not in the kind of work we perform, but in the spirit we put into it. From the cleansing of a room to the purification of a government, from the clearing of a forest to the chiseling of a statue, from the humblest work of the hands to the nobelest work of heart and brain, it is the determination to make it of the best quality that places it in the front rank. The work that is performed only for the sake of what it will bring, not for what it is to carry forth, is like cloth of shoddy, which may please the eye, but will not wear. It is cheap, flimsy stuff, woven with no nobler purpose that to hold together long enough to be bound and paid for.

A Peculiar Case.

Dr. Fordyce was a man of convivial habits and much addicted to the bottle. He was one evening called away from a drinking bout to see a lady of title, who was supposed to have been taken suddenly ill. Arrived at the apartment of his patient, the doctor seated himself by her side, and having listened to a recital of a train of symptoms which appeared rather anomalous, he proceeded to examine her pulse. He tried to reckon the number of beats, but the more he endeavored to do this the more his brain whirled, and the less was his self-control, Conscious of the cause of his dilemma, and in a moment of irritation, he blurted out, "Drunk, by Jove!" The lady heard the remark, but remained silent, and the doctor, prescribing a mild remedy, took his leave. Early next morning he was aroused by a somewhat imperative message from his patient of the evening before to attend her immediately, and at once concluded that the object of this summons was to inveigh against him for the state in which he had visited her on the previous occasion, or perhaps for having prescribed too potent a medicine. Ill at ease from the thoughts, he entered the room prepared for a severe reprimand. The patient began, however, by thanking him for his attention, and said that she had been struck by his discernment on the previous evening, confessing that she was sometimes addicted to indulge in strong drink, and concluded by saying that the object of this early message was to obtain his promise of inviolable secrecy as to the condition in which he found her. "You may depend on me." said Dr. Fordyce, whose face had never changed since the commencement of the patient's story, "I will be as silent as the grave."

MRS. SOPHIA POTTER'S

Bone Rheumatic Liniment

IT is a fact worth knowing that Mrs. Sophia Potter's Bone Rheumatic Liniment cannot be excelled for removing pain and soreness. It is no worthless trash, as some may suppose, simply because they have been imposed upon by others but is positively the "King of Pain." Sore throat cannot stand before its power.

All we ask is a trial that you may be convinced of the truth of our statement. Our experience is that one bottle tried also sells many more.
