

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

MAY 29, 1893.

The Prohibition Plebiscite.

THE Patriot of Saturday contains an editorial under the above caption in the course of which the great importance of every person voting on the occasion is strongly urged.

Bad Times in the United States.

Business is rather quiet throughout Canada at the present time, our condition will certainly not suffer by a comparison with the state of affairs in the United States.

Notes and Comments.

Sir Charles Russell's speech before the Behring Sea tribunal is somewhat lengthy, but judging by the way it is stirring up the United States' counsel it must be as good as it is long.

On account of the rush of customers to the Diamond Bookstore on Saturday evening, the auction sale had to be called off, but will be resumed tomorrow (Tuesday).

Cleanings.

American society has been much disturbed by the fact that the invitation cards issued for the marriage of the Earl of Craven to Miss Martin, lately celebrated, were "printed in London."

A week or two ago there was a scene in a New York court somewhat similar to that when Solomon ordered a baby to be bisected and one of the segments given to each of two rival claimants.

On another occasion a New York Justice had a case before him in which a young lady claimed an engagement ring from a young man. The young man held that he had the right to it on two grounds: (1) Because the ring was merely the symbol of an engagement which the girl herself had broken off; (2) because when dismissing her she had thrown the ring at his head.

The North American Review is considered one of the ablest magazines on this side of the Atlantic. What does it mean in a late number by stating that "Night Thoughts" were written by "the famous Abbe Blaise Pascal, a Jesuit."

It would seem that the Yankee publisher has not yet been able to reconcile himself to the principle of meum and tuum laid down by the law of industrial copyright.

We hear a great deal about Egypt now, and the reasons for its occupation by the English, and how long that occupation will probably continue; this, however, is heavy reading; but I am sure the readers of THE EXAMINER will be glad to have their attention called to a charming book lately written by Miss Ellen Chennell.

The impression left by Miss Chennell's brightly written narrative is that the mental calibre of the upper classes in Egypt is much underrated by foreigners. Instead of the mere Oriental craft, which are popularly associated with the educated Egyptian, one finds a breadth of mind and a capacity to assimilate and apply western ideas which is undreamt of by the average Englishman.

MONT. McDONALD, the well known St. John's barrister, was obliged to seek a change of climate for the cure of acute bronchitis. He took Hwker's Tolu and was cured by two bottles. He considers it a remarkable remedy, and strongly recommends its use to all so afflicted.

USE SKODA'S DISCOVERY, the great blood and nerve remedy.

The Behring Sea Court.

SIR CHARLES RUSSELL CONTINUES HIS EXAMINATION OF AMERICAN PRECEDENTS.

In the Behring Sea arbitration to-day, Sir Charles Russell continued his examination of American precedents in respect to the right of seizure. He explained that the occupation of Pensacola and the bombardment of Greytown were justifiable as retaliatory and did not imply a claim of jurisdiction.

Referring to the alleged assertion of exclusive claim by Britain on the banks of Newfoundland, he showed that England's exceptional rights were acquired by treaty with France and Spain, and were not applied to other nations. The claim was never asserted after American independence and was specially disavowed by Lord Bathurst in 1815.

This view, Sir Charles Russell said, was endorsed by the American counsel before the Halifax Commission in 1877 and was sustained by the report of the congressional committee of 1886. Sir Charles then discussed the reference to the enforcement of penalties in violation of British quarantine laws outside territorial limits. He explained that such penalties were only enforceable after the offenders had entered the territorial waters, and that, therefore, there was no analogy between this enforcement and the Behring Sea seizure.

He then took up the question of the right of search, and showed that search of slave vessels was to ascertain whether they were flying fraudulently a wrong flag. He quoted Lord Stowell and Judge Story, who agreed that no authority existed for the interruption or seizure of the vessels of friendly nations. Also Lord Malmesbury, who officially acknowledged that reparation was due to vessels which were interrupted when the suspicion of fraud was proved to be unfounded. He quoted American Secretary Case, who in 1859 strongly denied the right of interruption or seizure of foreign vessels except in time of war.

Referring to the analogy claimed by Phelps in respect to distant lighthouses, he showed this protection rested on territorial not property right. He analyzed the American argument on the analogy of the laws of other nations for protecting seal life. As to the Falkland Island regulations, Sir Charles showed that they were only applicable within territorial limits and were never enforced beyond.

Every reference made by British counsel to the report of Commissioner Elliott called forth vehement protests from the Americans, Carter stigmatising the late United States' expert as absolutely untrustworthy.

Personal.

The Fredericton Reporter says: "A call from the Gibson Baptist Church to Rev. Mr. Davidson, of Prince Edward Island, has been accepted by that gentleman."

COLUMBIAS. I BEG leave to inform the people of Charlottetown and all creation generally that I am Sole Agent for the above Bicycles, and that this celebrated wheel can only be obtained through me as far as this Island is concerned. I am continually receiving letters and postal cards—sent to the Pope Manufacturing Co. and returned by them to me—from persons here, asking for catalogues and rates. One young man—a youth of 18 summers—signed himself "Brigadier Colonel," and another wanted a special reduction as he was "an orphan with a large family." It will be a shorter and easier way for brigadier colonels, orphans and other unfortunates to come to me direct for information, and thereby save their postage stamps. Please remember that there is only one price for Columbias the world over, and that the purchase of a cheaply constructed Bicycle is a most expensive experiment. R. M. YOUNG, Agent for P. E.
