

Seven Legs, Two-Tails, a Double Mouth and Two Spines.

Fletcher M. Noe, the young taxidermist of this city, has just completed the mounting of a most curious and wonderful monstrosity. It is a lamb which was born on the farm of John Vancorder in Van Buren township, Grant county, and by him presented to Mr. Higbee of Marion, Ind. Though born alive, it only lived a short time. It has seven legs, two tails, and a double mouth. From the head to six inches back of the neck it is perfectly natural, except the double mouth, but from that point the body divides, each half forming a complete body, with two legs, and a tail. The hind legs, although perfect in shape, all turn in different directions. On the middle of the back, just in front of where the bodies branch, is the seventh leg, the lower part of which is very slender, but beyond the first joint it branches and forms two large, well-developed feet. The bones in this leg were so arranged as to make the feet stand several inches above the back. The mouth is also a curious malformation, the bones in the lower jaw being placed in such a manner as to keep the jaws apart two inches. To the end of the lower jaw is attached another jaw of solid bone, which has a well developed row of teeth growing from each side. This bone is placed in such a manner as to close up the mouth. Mr. Noe made a careful dissection of the body, which revealed the fact that from the neck back the creature had two perfect backbones, and that each of the bones in the various legs were naturally fastened to it. It had also two sets of intestines and two lungs, but only one heart.—Indianapolis Journal.

A report comes from Australia of the discovery of a method of applying electricity which gives results more wonderful than the telephone. By the new process vibrations of light can be conveyed as easily as vibrations of sound; so that two people can not only converse with each other, though separated many miles, but can also see each other. At a trial of this wonderful instrument in Melbourne, some few months ago, as the spectators sat in a dark room, they saw projected on a dish of white metal the race course of a neighboring town, with its crowds of active beings moving about. Each minute detail was delineated with fidelity; and looking at it through opera glasses, it seemed difficult to avoid the conclusion that they were gazing through the window at a scene only a few yards, instead of miles away. Incredible as this story seems, it is yet no more wonderful than the telephone, or any other similar inventions, which, when first introduced, were sufficiently startling, but to which we have now grown accustomed.

Emerson's testimony does not agree with that of Carlyle's most intimate friends, that the wife of the Chelsea sage lived a miserable life with her husband. An entry in his diary after he had stayed repeatedly with the Carlyles for days together runs as follows: "Carlyle and his wife lived on beautiful terms. Their ways are very engaging, and in her bookcase all his books are inscribed to her, as they came year to year, each with some significant lines." The correspondence of both these great men which has been published, contains many hints that the "miserable life theory" was not in all respects true. Carlyle was "grey ill to live with" to people who did not appreciate him, but Mrs. Carlyle was as thoroughly engaged in his work, in his "truth-seeking and truth speaking," in his "prophesying" as Carlyle was himself, and she urged him on in his course of sacrificing the material interests of both so that his work might not be sacrificed.

The Great French Remedy, Dr. LeDuc's Periodical Pills.

For the cure of Leucorrhoea or White's Excessive of Menstruation, Green Sticks, Falling of the Womb, Catarrh of the Uterus or Vagina, Hysteria, Pain in the Back or Piles, or for the purpose of invigorating and giving tone to the Generative Organs, two pills should be taken twice daily, or in very acute conditions, one pill three times a day. To effect cures in chronic cases it will be necessary to continue the use of the remedy for some months. A reasonable trial will create sufficient confidence in the remedy to insure its being taken until a permanent cure is effected.
