

MR. AND MRS. CLINTON GRAHAM HALL AND ATTENDANTS

Oshawa Is Setting For Beautiful Summer Wedding

Cedardale United Church, Oshawa, Ontario, was the setting for a wedding at 2.30 p.m. Saturday afternoon, May 25th, when Margaret Jean Coles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Coles of Winslow, Charlottetown, P.E.I. was united in marriage with Clinton Graham Hall of Oshawa, Ontario, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Norman Edward Hall.

The Reverend S.C.H. Atkinson performed the double ring ceremony assisted by Mr. James Young, Mr. J. S. Locke played the nuptial music and Miss Jean Matthews sang "The Wedding Prayer" and "O Perfect Love."

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. James Coles of Hamilton, Ontario, the bride wore a white tulle gown of lotus white French lace and net over satin faille. The basque bodice of lace was fashioned with a scoop neckline enhanced with sequin florets, and the short sleeves were complemented with mittens. A wide band of lace highlighted the hemline of the net skirt, which featured lace appliques.

A coronet of rhinestones held her finger tip veil of tulle illusion, and she carried a cascade of white carnations and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Hollis Cruwys of Oshawa, Ontario, was matron of honor for her sister, and Miss Carol Whinfield of Oshawa was bridesmaid. They wore gowns of white and blue silk organza over net and taffeta. The wedding dinner was served by the Eleanor Hoy Group of Cedardale Church. Pink tulle formed the setting for the three tier wedding cake which centered the canopied table. Vari colored tulips decorated the tables for the guests. Other decorations were baskets of pink and white snapdragons.

For the honeymoon trip to Florida, U.S.A., the bride changed to a beige linen sheath dress topped with a matching duster, a large picture hat of black linen, black and beige accessories and a corsage of yellow and red sweetheart roses. On their return the couple will reside in Whitby, Ontario.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Face Toward Sunshine Shadows Fall Behind

What exceptionally fine playing our pond-orchestra was doing when we returned through it some minutes ago from an excursion away... "And what is it this time, Ellen: W.I.W.A. W.M.S. — or what else is there? Well, what it is" James commented somewhat dourly when we mentioned the outing in prospect, this evening "to my mind it doesn't go very well with the cropping. This, Woman" he said stepping off briskly to the chores, "is no time of year to be taken lightly. No Sir! And we with not a seed in the ground."

And the Blackie-dog, a faithful "ole houn' dawg" if there is one, looked up a bit mournfully from a resting position on the back porch, then chuckled and yawned. And the yawn said: "ain't it the truth, Ellen? Some folks bark are worse than their bites! Now sho' thing, you know that, mostly, James has no bite at all... No seed in the ground? Well now, either there is but the fencing's done — and isn't that pure relief? The young cattle are off — and safe in pasture, the horses too; the calves and the lambs are all come, and doing nicely; the fat cattle go to market one of these days. The manure's all out of the buildings — most of it in heaps in the fields ready to be lifted and spread, and that's no great undertaking nowadays with plenty of men and machines. So I'd say, that everything was in pretty good shape for the time of year. The crop "he winked now, "they got it in other Springs, didn't they! And managed to get every last bit of it harvested and stored. And they will again or I miss my guess. "But there's always a first time" we began.

"Shucks, Woman. It's no good imagining trouble. What was the old saying? Oh Yes! Face toward the sunshine, and the shadows will fall behind you — mighty good philosophy, don't you think? But' he grinned "how's the gardening?"

Did you get that lettuce seed sowed yet?" "Not yet!" we shook our head. "Just asked because I heard you remark to James that you must. A bit of new lettuce, home-grown helps to make one of the nicest sandwiches I know of. The green brightest too... the green brightest most every kind of spread. You'd better stir yo'self. Mrs. for it's true that the Spring is slipping away."

Today with the sunshine setting its soft veil of shimmering haze on the far hills was one to conjure up memories. And what did we see? The smokes rising darkly from the old limekilns which sit on the near side of a snug and remembered harbour back in the years, were an integral part of every farm-child's Spring in the neighborhood and father. In mind, we knelt to "file" a slate-pencil on the grooved and worn doorstep of the school we knew best, lingering to the very deadline of the whim of the "Maister", and then drawing a breath of that pleasantly tangy air, and catching again a sight of that smoke wreathing fields in the distance which indicated the seed-time, we returned with some regret to the set tasks indoors. A nice day this was and kindly, which ends at Alderlea with a grateful "All's well."

MARY HAWORTH

36-Inch Bosom Is Attractive

Dear Mary Haworth: Why is so much emphasis put on large bosoms? In magazine art, the movies, etc., a woman has to have at least a 36-inch bust line to be considered attractive.

Personally, I am thankful to have the normal number of arms and legs; but I am developing a terrific complex because I don't feel physically attractive to my husband.

I am 24 and, since the birth of my children, I am completely flat chested. I keep myself neat and dress becomingly; and my husband says I'm just fine, and what I don't have doesn't matter; but I notice he constantly brings home photogenic magazines, featuring large-busted nudes, and gazes at them longingly.

Is there anything short of surgery that will give a flat-chested matron a rounded bust line? V.V. SALES EXPLOITATION

DEAR V.V.: Why is so much emphasis put on large bosoms? It is my impression that the latter-day cult of the outside bust has its origins in the entertainment industry, stemming from Hollywood principally — and from the burlesque sector earlier. It has been "inspired" and perpetuated for sales promotion purposes, consciously or unconsciously, on the part of its ballyhoosers.

In essence, it suggestively offers modern man a fantasy return to the "magic" consolations of mother's breast. When he was an infant, for a very small lad, of an breast to qualify self-respectfully to breast a nursing, his mother's bosom probably appeared very large indeed to his baby perspective. And so, when he reaches man's estate, the fantasy bosom (refuge from life) has to be ballooned proportionately, to correspond to his infantile (or daydream) concept.

MATTER OF THOUGHT

In other words, modern man's presumably "romantic" admira-

ELEANOR ROSS

Are Your Possessions Covered By Insurance

No matter how well you know your own home and everything in it, you can get an entirely new concept of it by taking a household inventory. One of the things you may discover is that you are worth more than you think.

Today's high costs, which in many respects are very evident, have sneaked up on us in other ways. You are probably well aware that food costs are up, and have revised your table budget accordingly. But have you stopped to consider what inflation may have done to your insurance protection?

INADEQUATE INSURANCE

The fact is that insurance bought, say, 10 years ago probably wouldn't cover the value of your home and its furnishings today and more than a 10-year-old food budget would buy this week's groceries. And if you've added appliances at the rate of most families, insurance that was adequate even a few years ago may not be enough to protect your total worth today.

LET'S EAT

Foreign Dishes Now An American Hobby

By IDA BAILEY ALLEN

Interest in international cookery has become widespread in this country. Women's clubs are studying up on foreign cuisines, cooking classes are learning to prepare dishes popular in other lands.

One group of 14 New York City career girls that I know — none over 21 — spend Friday evening each week dining at a restaurant that features the national foods of some country.

INTERESTING HOBBY

It has been a stimulating and interesting hobby for them. For those who would like to taste-test international foods, an inexpensive nonprofit new book has been published, "Favorite Recipes from the United Nations."

The recipes for 170 authentic dishes from all the countries in the United Nations have been expertly kitchen-tested and edited by the American Home Economics Association. The book is a treasure house of cooking lore and presents eating pleasure.
