THE GLOBE AND PROTECTION.

WHEN the late George Brown was denouncing the policy of protection it probably never occurred to him that at some future time his paper would be endorsing the very ideas which he condemned. But this is actually what has transpired. In a recent issue of the Toronto Globe we read the following:

"There was a time when Canada was conceived to be a country producing fish, timber, hay, potatoes, barley and horses, for which it was anxious to find customers. That conception is now out of date. Of course Canada still produces these things and is ready to sell them to people who want them. But she has outgrown the idea that her prosperity depends upon getting rid of a surplus of these articles.

"The new conception of Canada is a country producing not only grains and fruits and forest products, but mineral wealth of almost every kind and in great abundance. The new national policy does not mean the exclusion of foreign manufactures so much as the intelligent use of the natural resources of Canada. The central idea is that every product of the soil, of the mine, of the forest, is to be worked up in Canada into the most profitable form—the forests of spruce not merely into pulp but into paper; the forest of pine not merely into lumber but into packing cases, furniture and woodenware; lead ore and nickel into every manufactured article in which these metals are used.

"The Dingley tariff bears evidence of intense anxiety on the part of our neighbors to obtain these Canadian products in the raw and to have them worked up on the American side into highly finished products. Our policy is exactly the opposite of this.

—Commissioner Larke has reported to the trade department that Queensland, Australia, will send fifteen thousand tons of sugar to Canada this year. Canadian cottons, furniture and paints are gaining a good footing in Australia.

—Last fiscal year, says the Halifax Herald, Mr. Fielding added more than $2,000,000 beyond the average amount to the capital expenditures or the public debt, and then turned round and declared he had a million and a half surplus on current account. Wonderful feat in finance surely!

—The dread has taken hold of some United States public men that there may be more fighting in Cuba before the Spanish troops are got out of the island. If there is, the United States soldiers who are expected to do it, are likely to insist on seeing the quartermaster's supplies ashore before they tackle the enemy. Fighting without supplies may be done on a pinch, but it is not healthy, and not to be looked to as a permanency.

—France seems to be very bitter over Russia's disarmament proposal. She did not make an alliance with Russia for the purpose of a universal peace, but for the purpose of a prospective war in which she might count on Russia's moral or material support. The peace proposal upsets all the French calculations and hopes based on the alliance. Moreover, it was made without any consultation with France. But the bitterest thing in the whole cup must be the revelation to France of how ready Russia is to ignore French interests and aspirations, and to pursue her own selfish course.

AN OBJECTION ANSWERED.

In an article entitled "A Crank's answers to a fool's question," Louis J. Beauchamp says:

"But prohibition don't prohibit!"
"Why?"
"The law is violated."
"Go to! Get thee to a henery and pay for brains. We are living this side of the millennium, brother, and just now God's prohibitory laws don't prohibit, that is if violations of laws do prove."
"Thou shalt not kill," said God; yet there is a murder in this country, every fifty minutes.

"Thou shalt not steal," said God, but there is a theft of over $100 in value every ten minutes in this country and a petty theft every three minutes.

According to your argument, God's prohibitory laws are a failure, and they should be wiped off His statutes and the church should issue high license to kill and steal. I say brother, wouldst you take out a license and go gunning yourself occasionally. The prohibition law, however, does prohibit everybody but criminals and outlaws from violating it. And from the beginning that class have had to be educated by the penalties attached to the laws rather than by the laws themselves.

The men who are violating our prohibition law in deep, dark dens where God's sunlight never enters, are being slowly but surely unearthened, as we draw nearer to our country's moral millennium, and when they are given six months in jail on dried apples for breakfast, warm water for dinner and a "swell out" for supper, they are no longer like your brother. They are thoroughly convinced that prohibition does prohibit. If prohibition does not prohibit it can only be proven on the same line of reason which would argue that christianity does not christianize, because poor little Bob Ingersoll, the dear soul, is not yet a Methodist preacher.

The law educates. If Moses had told his God that the prohibitory laws of the ten commandments were "too far up" for the people, the children of Israel would have had a new leader in about fifteen minutes. God, however, gave Moses the laws to bring the people up to those laws. Help us to get a prohibitory law and we will get the people right. The law will educate the good class, and the criminal class will be educated by the penalties attached to the law. Those who argue that the law could not be enforced argue for their own lawlessness and are pronouncing themselves criminals before they have been guilty of any crime. We know it is hard to keep the rumseller within the boundary of any law. Even the Liquor Regulation Act of this city is broad enough, goodness knows, and yet even the trifling restrictions of that infantile law are violated every day by the rum crowd. Of course this class will violate a prohibitory law just as they do every other law, but we shall have some chance to protect ourselves if we have a law to fall back upon. Now, we have nothing, and cannot close these dens if we tried. But then, with a law to help us, we can at least drive the darkened traffic with the disgrace and hellish secrecy where it belongs.

Let us get prohibition, and the rum crowd will soon be taught by a bitter experience that prohibition will prohibit. W.

FROM PORTO RICO.

Depredations by Islanders, Evacuation Details Being Arranged.

SAN JUAN, de Porto Rico, Sept 16—More depredations are reported to have occurred in the neighborhood of Utuado. Several Spanish haciendas and Cafetals have been burned and two Spanish planters killed. These outrages are attributed to the lower classes of the natives, actuated by a spirit of revenge and a lawless gang of brigands which have been operating near Ciales. The Spanish planters fear for their lives and are extremely anxious that the Americans should obtain control in order to afford them protection, as the United States is powerless to preserve order in places within the Spanish lines.

Upon petition of practically all of the residents of Utuado, General Henry, has displaced the old Alcalde and appointed Senor Ramirai Martins, who has inaugurated an American regime and has held an election for all municipal officers, including policemen. Utuado is the first town in the island to possess officers chosen by the popular will.

The steamer Juan Forgas, arrived here from Barcelona with provisions for the Spanish troops, but as there is a supply for two months still here, the steamer proceeded to Havana, where she will discharge. After the details of the evacuation have been arranged the movable property and military equipment which the Spaniards may properly remove, if they desire to do so, will be inventoried separately. The commission may arrange to purchase such equipment it desires to retain. This will include field guns and possibly certain movable fixtures in the public buildings and a vast quantity of Cardiff coal which was shipped here for Admiral Cervera's fleet. Two hundred and fifty members of the 6th Massachusetts regiment are sick and the men are anxious to return to their homes.
