SEPTEMBER 21, 1898.

UNITED STATES STATISTICS.

Henry Clews, in his last financial circular, gives an interesting comparison of the imports and exports of the United States for the first eight months of the year. The figures given, it is pointed out, show the extent to which that country has strengthened its financial position in consequence of its commercial relations with other countries. Here are the figures for 1898 and 1897:

Merchandise	1898	1897
Imports.....	$426,412,038	$546,325,777
Exports.....	778,674,025	641,697,330
Excess of exports.....	$352,261,987	$95,371,553
Gold—
Imports.....	$102,087,831	$11,887,654
Exports.....	9,679,113	32,542,659
Excess of imports.....	$92,408,718
Excess of exports.....	$20,655,005
Silver—
Imports.....	$19,813,563	$20,796,633
Exports.....	35,281,397	38,024,196
Excess of exports.....	$14,467,834	$17,227,563

These figures show that the exports of merchandise have exceeded the imports by $352,000,000, while for the same months of 1897 the excess was $95,400,000. It is further pointed out that the creditor balance of this year has been set off by net gold imports amounting to $92,400,000, leaving a net creditor balance, on the commercial account, of $259,800,000, or at the rate of $346,400,000 per annum.

With a view to indicating the money strength of the United States Government, a short statement is presented, showing the official count of cash in the Treasury at the close of business on Sept 13th, 1898. Here it is:

Gold coin and bullion.....	$239,379,230
Silver dollars and bullion.....	8,233,833
United States notes.....	50,622,126
Other assets in excess of demand liabilities.....	18,081,793
Available cash balance, including gold reserve.....	$316,316,982

Commenting upon these figures Mr. Clews remarks that it has rarely if ever, been the good fortune of a government to close a costly war with $316,000,000 of cash, and 75 per cent. of it in gold, in its treasury.

AN AMERICAN OPINION.

HARPER'S WEEKLY expresses the opinion that General Kitchener's victory over the Khalifa is righteous vengeance long deferred, and says that whether it means permanent occupancy of Egypt or not, the United States will sympathize with England in whatever conclusion she reaches. The Weekly thinks that under existing conditions, and in view of what England has already done in Egypt, the longer she remains in Egypt the better for the Egyptians, the better for Europe, and much the better for Africa. Sir Herbert Kitchener, it adds, has shown himself to be one of the great soldiers of the time, and the English troops who fought under him have made their usual exhibition of splendid bravery. An interesting and important thing in connection with the battle was the good work done by the Egyptian troops. This shows what white leadership can do for the Egyptian peasant. In a word, says Harper's in conclusion, to paraphrase what an English naval attach said at San Juan this has been a great year for the Anglo-Saxon race.

—One of the many notable results of the Spanish-American war that has received attention is the generation of a good feeling between the black and white soldiers, a feeling that was recently referred to by Col. Roosevelt in a farewell address to the negro cavalrymen. The New York Times points out that "to a degree which one would have seemed impossible racial prejudices have been swept aside by cordial recognition on the part of the white soldiers that the black ones were men as capable as themselves of energetic heroism." There is a parallel to this in the Sudan, where the Egyptian soldiers have acquitted themselves so well.

OBITUARY.

Once more has death's cold hand snatched from our midst one whom we all loved so well; through the valley of death he has passed, and we are left alone to mourn. Only a few short days ago Daniel B. Ready, son of Mr. Patrick Ready, Irishtown, was the picture of robust health and manly vigor; to day his body lies in the cold grave and his soul has gone to enjoy the reward of a well-spent life. About six weeks ago he fell sick with heart disease, and, for a time, his recovery seemed doubtful; but, with careful treatment, he was soon out of danger, and in a few days appeared to be enjoying his usual good health. But the fond hope which this short respite raised was soon to be shattered. A relapse more violent than the first attack reduced him to a most precarious condition, and despite all that the best medical skill and the most attentive nursing could accomplish, he sank lower and lower, until on Sept. 16th, he passed peacefully away, at the early age of thirty-three years, fortified by the strengthening sacraments of the Holy Catholic Church. His sudden and untimely death has left vacant a place that even time cannot fill. He was an exemplary young man, one who makes this world better for his having lived in it. Every movement that tended to the social, civil or moral good, always found in him an able and ardent supporter. Active, energetic and untiring in his efforts, he made his influence felt in every cause he espoused. But now he has passed away, and his heart broken parents two brothers, and two sisters are left to mourn an irreparable loss. His funeral took place on Sunday morning to St. Mary's Cemetery, Indian River. The procession numbered one hundred and sixty carriages, and was headed by the members of Emerald Branch B. I. S., of which society the deceased was a member. What greater evidence can we have of the esteem in which he was held. The last sad rites were pronounced by Rev. Mgr. Gillis, and amidst the sob and tears of hundreds of sorrowful friends his mortal remains were committed to earth, to await a glorious immortality.

—It is gratifying to observe the moral spasm experienced by the Globe on the subject of south Ontario, remarks the Mail and Empire. The organ is down on corruptionists of the smaller size. We are opposed to them all—big and little. At the same time there is reason to know that Mr. Charles Calder participated in no corrupt practices. Had he done so he would have been disqualified, and with perfect justice. If Mr. Dryden could have brought about his disqualification he would not have scopped in his pursuit of him. Mr. Calder renounced his seat immediately that he heard the evidence. It was a manly thing to do. His withdrawal condemns the bribery; but it does not negative the demand of South Ontario for reform. The electorate, we are sure, will return again the gentleman who in the legislature was the ablest and the best member the country has had.
