On July 20 before the beautifully decorated altar, in the sanctuary of St. Patrick's Church, Fort Augustus, marriage vows were exchanged between Anna Jacqueline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. MacDonald, Glentinnan and Louis Joseph, son of Mr. James MacDonald and the late Mrs. MacDonald of Tracadie.

Rev. Dr. L. P. Callaghan of Indian River performed the ceremony and celebrated the nuptial mass. Present in the sanctuary were: Rev. T. P. Butler, P.P., Rev. Kenneth MacMillan, Tracadie, Rev. R. F. MacDonald, Seven Mile Bay and Rev. A. F. MacDonald, St. Dunstan's University.

The processional and recessional marches from the "Suite Nuptiale" by Caron were played by Miss Katherine MacDonald and the soloist was Miss Etta MacDonald, both sisters of the bride.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother John, wore an imported, hand-made gown of white nylon net over satin with a bouffant skirt which fell into a long full train. The fitted high-necked bodice which was buttoned down the back and the over skirt were trimmed with rows of white velvet. Her embroidered shoulder length veil fell from a pearl trimmed coronet tira. She carried a cascade of American Beauty roses.

The bride's attendants were three sisters, Elinor, maid of honour and Donalda and Genevieve bridesmaids. They wore identical waltz-length dresses of rose taffeta with matching picture hats and mitts and carried nosegays of assorted "mums".

The groom was supported by his brother Reginald and the guests were ushered by John and Dunstan MacDonald, brother and cousin of the bride respectively.

Following the ceremony, the immediate families and the clergy breakfasted at Villa Waters. The master of ceremonies for the occasion was Rev. R. F. MacDonald and the toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. T. P. Butler.

In the evening a reception was held at the bride's home at which one hundred guests were present. The table was decorated with white roses and lighted tapers and was centered with the wedding cake which was topped by a miniature bride and groom. Tea was poured by Mrs. J. J. Duffy the bride's grand aunt and Mrs. Charles MacLellan, the bride's aunt assisted by Miss Florence MacIntyre, R.N. Assisting in serving were: Mrs. Camillus Gillis, Mrs. J. D. MacDonald and Mrs. Donald A. MacDonald.

Music for the occasion was furnished by the MacKinnon orchestra.

The couple will reside in Newton Upper Falls, Mass.

Exchanged Vows at Port Hill

Pictured above are Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Ramsay. The bride is the former Mary Esther Birch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Birch of Northam, R.R. and the groom is Hazen Watson Ramsay, formerly of Lot 16, but now residing in Dartmouth, N.S. From left to right: Best man, Mr. Edmund Birch; groom and bride; bridesmaid, Miss Edith Adams; ushers, Mr. Eric Ramsay, Mr. Henry Birch; flower girl, Miss Linda MacLean, niece of the bride.—(Edwin Heckbert Studio).

A pretty wedding was solemnized in St. James' Church, Port Hill, on July 28, when Mary Esther Birch and Hazen Watson Ramsay were united in marriage by Rev. J. R. McMahon, Rural Dean of P. E. I., assisted by Rev. M. J. Findlay, Rector of Port Hill.

The church was beautifully decorated with summer flowers and the guests pews were marked by white ribbons and sweetpeas.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a ballerina-length gown of white nylon net over white satin with chantilly lace bolero. Her finger-length veil of nylon tulle was held in place by a pearl and sequin studded tiara. She carried a bouquet of red roses and streamers.

Her bridesmaid, Miss Edith Adams, was gowned in pink nylon net over taffeta with a pink coronet headpiece and carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

The tiny flower girl, Miss Linda MacLean, niece of the bride, who carried a basket of sweet peas and babies' breath, wore pink net over brocaded taffeta.

The groom was attended by Mr. Edmund Birch, while Mr. Eric Ramsay and Mr. Henry Birch ushered the guests to their seats.

Mrs. Percy L. Birch wore a gown of maize nylon sheer with white accessories and a corsage of pink roses, while Mrs. E. H. Ramsay chose a navy-blue ensemble with a corsage of red roses.

The choir sang the hymns, "O Perfect Love" and the "Deus Misereatur." During the signing of the register Mrs. William Birch sang "The Lord's Prayer."

Following the ceremony a reception for 80 guests was held at the Birch Hill Tourist Home, where Mrs. Harold Milligan and Mrs. Eldred Simmons seated the guests. The bridal table was decorated with cut flowers and was centered with a three-tier wedding cake.

Rev. Mr. McMahon, acting as master of ceremonies, proposed the toast to the bride, which was responded to by the groom. During the reception a congratulatory telegram was read from Miss Elaine Monkley.

Mrs. Leith W. MacLean was in charge of the guest book.

Later the young couple left for a honeymoon trip through the Maritime Provinces before taking up residence in Dartmouth, N. S., where the groom is employed as an electrician. For travelling the bride was attired in a powder blue suit with navy and white accessories and wore a corsage of cream roses.

PROBLEM PATIENTS

Although most persons who consult a physician are thoughtful, serious people in need of help and willing to follow the doctor's advice, there are, unfortunately, "problem cases," whom we will all recognize, whom it is difficult for the physician to help.

There is, for example, the gabby patient who would talk on forever, if allowed to. Sometimes it is necessary for the receptionist to come in and tell the physician his next patient is waiting. One physician says that he suggests to such patients that they come back for another appointment to discuss their condition. Most patients do not want to pay for another visit just to talk.

The "shopper" who changes from one physician to another is also a trying type. Sometimes this patient conceals symptoms in an attempt to get a diagnosis which will contradict one received from another physician. Shoppers should be firmly urged to return to their own doctors.

Then there is the patient, usually a man who boasts that he disregards the doctor's orders. The physician must convince such a patient that his orders have merit and are to the patient's best interests. Sometimes it is necessary to state firmly, "I will no longer be responsible for your condition if you don't follow my orders."

Children may prove difficult. Some are troublesome only because they are frightened. The physician then will be as gentle and sympathetic as possible. On the other hand, there is the obstreperous child who will not swallow the bait of, "Let's see how brave you can be." Some doctors will inquire what the child plans to do after he leaves the doctor's office and then say, "Well, there isn't going to be time for that movie (or baseball game) if you don't get this over with." This method usually produces results. When a child persists in being difficult, the physician can consult with the mother as to whether she wishes him to proceed. In some cases it is better to have her wait outside as her presence may bolster the child's stubbornness. Most physicians find that children do not complain half as much as expected when they find that the procedure is to be done in spite of their opposition.

When a patient has a grievance, the doctor must listen patiently even though the complaint seems ridiculous or unjustified. He must try to explain misunderstandings, if possible. If the patient still cannot be appeased, the physician should suggest that the patient put his complaint in writing and submit it to the mediation committee of the local medical society for hearing.

ELLEN'S DIARY

by an Island Farmer's Wife

Because Rob must obtain there a required "extra" of machine, we made an excursion to a distant Island today with him and the youngsters. James came also, not altogether content. "If this damp should happen to clear giving sun and wind, there'll be hay to save," he said.

"If there 's a chance of saving hay," Rob promised, "you and I'll be in the field to save it." And "Do come Gran'daddy," the children begged. In the armchair, he stopped to unlace his boots, then paused in the act. "There's another thing," he nodded, "if your Grandmother gets into one of those stores we'll not be able to get her out of town, blue sky or not."

"Then she'll have to make a promise," Jamie chuckled . . . They enjoy coming shopping with us, not so much for any favors of buying we bestow but that we let them loiter along the store-ways, feasting their eyes on the display, as we once did the shown content of a peddlar's pack to learn much therefrom.

"Yes," Gage dimpled, "make her promise—that's the best way."

"Pie-crust promises are no good," we laughed, "they're made only to be broken."

Presently in the gray of the morning we were off. Our machine had been recently serviced, our driver was experienced and good. On such outings it pleases us to travel at a moderate rate of speed the better to see and enjoy the scenes along which we pass . . . How lovely they were today: the summer-full hay and grain-lands, the meadows with their pasturing herds and flocks; blossoming potato fields, beautiful farm-homes, modest and more imposing, content amid their groves and trees. Snug cottages where hearth-fires would be warm and friendly, well kept lawns and gardens.

We especially saw a pasturing pony, a little blue lake which mirrored (by then, for the sun came out to meet us on the way) with the blue sky and white clouds, winsome, painted boats. We saw too an apiary which neighbored the roadside; signs leading off from the highway to Island trails for us unexplored . . . Churches . . . . schools of the country, as are ours, soon to call the classes toegther.

And the sun climbed higher and a nice wind blew. And it was afternoon and quite time to turn our faces toward the duties awaiting at home. In time we came to it—a place where kit-cats played about a stable door; where pigeons cooed on a roof and from the near field the Nell-mare whinnied her welcome. And opening a now-familiar door we were at Home once more. Edgar Guest declares:

"It takes a heap o' livin' in a house to make it home,
A heap o' sun and shadder, an' ye sometimes have t' roam
Afore ye really 'preciate the things ye lef' behind,
An' hunger fer 'em somehow, with 'em allus on yer mind.
It don't make any difference how rich ye get t' be
How much yer chairs an' tables cost, how great yer luxury;
It ain't home t' ye, though it be the palace of a king,
Until somehow yer soul is sort o wrapped round everything.

Until Monday — — — — Diary — — — — Good-night . . . . .

DOROTHY DIX

A Widow at 32

DEAR MISS DIX: My husband passed away two years ago, leaving me with three children, aged 11, 9 and 3. You may think it's a horrible thing for me to say, but his death did not leave me heartbroken. He had not been a good provider. He went out alone three or four nights a week, did not pay any attention to the children—in fact, they have never even asked for him.

My family is constantly telling me, "Whatever you do, don't make a second marriage" Since I am only 32, I feel I would like to marry again sometime, although I haven't gone out with any men since my husband's death. My family also tells me that I never will make friends because I'm the quiet type; I don't drink or smoke. Do you think my future is really as bleak as they picture it?

Annabelle T.

LOOK FOR COMPANIONS

ANSWER: Your family probably feels that since your first marriage was so unhappy, the second might be equally unfortunate. You're an older and wiser woman now, and should have the judgment to profit from past errors, making sure of your ground before marrying again. However, first you will have to meet somebody, so your immediate problem is to make friends. Your quietness, in itself, wouldn't be a drawback to meeting people, and certainly your nonsmoking and nondrinking habits wouldn't keep you from making the right sort of friends. A quiet person can make friends as well as can her extroverted sisters, the difference being that it's a bit harder for the shy one to break the ice.

As compensation, she has the assurance that her friends usually stick, while the more glamorous gals lose 'em as fast as they make 'em. Your children should be a tremendous asset in helping you form new companions. Since you aren't matrimonially minded to any great extent, don't worry about making friends of eligible males, but concentrate on meeting people in general. Don't pay so much attention to your family's gloomy forebodings, but do exercise common sense in the selection of your friends—especially the men, and don't make the same mistake in marriage again.

Household Scrapbook

Finger Prints

Finger prints around door knobs may be removed without danger of making the paint thin by dipping a damp cloth into whiting and rubbing gently over the smeared places. Rinse with clear water.

Medicine

Medicine should not be measured in a spoon, as spoons vary considerably in size. Keep a small, marked measuring-glass on hand for this purpose.

Eyelashes

The eyelashes can be made heavier by rubbing them with pure Vaseline jelly every night upon retiring.

Morning Smile

"And what is the baby's name?" asked the minister softly.

"It's Chauncey William Robert Montgomery Finley," replied the proud father.

The minister turned to his assistant and said, "More water, please."

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. When a woman phones her husband's office and his secretary answers, should she identify herself as Martha Johnson or as Mrs. Johnson?

A. She should say, "This is Mrs. Johnson."

Q. Recently a male guest in my home took a fleeting [illegible] teaspiece on my dinner table and put it into his lapel. What do you think of this?

A. I think it was a very presumptuous and ill-bred act.

Q. Should a doctor be addressed in the salutation of a letter as, "Dear Doctor" or as, "Dear Doctor Brown"?

A. Neither is correct. The word "doctor" should be abbreviated, the proper form being, "Dear Dr. Brown."

CHEESE STRATA

(This makes a satisfying supper dish, economical, yet packed with food value. As with all cheese dishes, slow cooking is a must!)

8 slices day old bread, crusts removed
½ lb. pasteurized cheese
2½ cups milk
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
4 eggs

Place 4 slices of bread in baking dish, fitting in closely. Cover with cheese slices. Put remaining slices of bread on top. Beat eggs well, combine with milk, pour over bread and cheese. Let stand 1 hour.

Bake in slow oven 325 degrees for 40 minutes. Serve plain or with jelly.

The mixture must be set, like custard, and knife when inserted, comes out clean.

Parkdale W. I.
