ADAM BEDE.

CHAPTER V.
THE RECTOR.

BEFORE twelve o'clock there had been some heavy storms of rain, and the water lay in deep gutters on the sides of the great walks in the Exton Parsonage; the great Provence roses had been cruelly tossed by the wind and beaten by the rain, and all the delicate-stemmed border-flowers had been dashed down and stained with the wet soil. A melancholy morning—because it was nearly time hay harvest should begin, and instead of that the meadows were likely to be flooded.
But people who have pleasant homes get in-door enjoyments that they would never think of but for the rain. If it had not been a wet morning Mr.
Irvine would not have been in the dining-room playing chess with his mother, and he loves both his mother and chess quite well enough to pass some cloudy hours very easily by their help.

Let me take you into that dining-room, and show you the Rev. Adolphus Irvine, Rector of Broxton, Vicar of Hayslope, and Vicar of Blythe, a pluralist at whom the severest Church-reformer would have found it difficult to look sour. We will enter very softly, and stand still in the open doorway, without awaking the glossy brown setter who is stretched across the hearth, with her two puppies beside her; or the pug, who is dozing with his black muzzle aloft, like a sleepy president.
The room is a large and lofty one, with an ample millioned oriel window at one end, the walls, you see, are new and not yet painted; but the furniture, though originally of an expensive sort, is old and scanty, and there is no drape over the window. The crimson cloth over the large dining-table is very threadbare, though it contrasts pleasantly enough with the dead hue of the plaster on the walls; but on the cloth there is a massive silver water with a decanter of water on it, of the same pattern as the two larger ones that are propped up on the sideboard with a coat of arms conspicuous in their center. You suspect at once that the inhabitants of this room have inherited more blood than wealth, and would not be surprised to find that Mr. Irvine has a finely-cut nostril and upper lip; but at present we can only see that he has a broad flat back and an abundance of powdered hair; all thrown backward and tied behind with a black ribbon—a bit of conservatism in costume which tells you he is not a young man. He will perhaps turn round by-and-by, and in the meantime we can look at that stately old lady, his mother, a beautiful aged brunet, whose rich-toned complexion is well set off by the complex wrappings of pure white cambric and lace about her head and neck. She is as erect in her comely embonpoint as a statue of Ceres, and her dark face, with its delicate aquiline nose, firm proud mouth, and small intense black eye, is so keen and sarcastic in its expression that you instinctively substitute a pack of cards for the chess-men, and imagine her telling your fortune. The small brown hand with which she is lifting her queen is laden with pearls, diamonds and turquoise; and a large black veil is very carefully adjusted over the crown of her cap, and falls in sharp contrast on the white folds about her neck. It must take a long time to dress that old lady in the morning! But it seems a law of nature that she should be dressed so; she is clearly one of those children of loyalty who have never doubted their right divine, and never met with any one so absurd as to question it.

"There, Dauphin, tell me what that is!"
says this magnificent old lady, as she deposits her queen very quietly and folds her arms. "I should be sorry to utter a word disagreeable to your feelings."
"Ah! you witch-mother, you sorceress!
How is a Christian man to win a game of you? I should have sprinkled the board with holy water before we began. You've not won that game by fair means, now, so don't pretend it."
"Yes, yes, that's what the beaten have always said of great conquerors. But see, there's the sunshine falling on that board, to show you more clearly what a foolish move you made with that pawn. Come, shall I give you another chance?" "No, mother, I shall leave you to your own conscience, now it's clearing up. We must go and splash up the mud a little, mustn't we, Juno?" This was addressed to the brown setter; who had jumped up at the sound of the voices, and laid her nose in an insinuating way on her master's leg.
"But I must go up stairs first and see Anne. I was called away to Tholer's funeral just when I was going before."
"It's of no use, child; she can't speak to you. Kate says she has one of her worst headaches this morning."
"Oh, she likes me to go and see her just the same; she's never too ill to care about that."
If you know how much of human speech is mere purposeless impulse or habit, you will not wonder when I tell you that this identical objection had been made, and had received the same kind of answer, many hundred times in the course of the fifteen years that Mr. Irvine's sister Anne had been an invalid. Splendid old ladies, who take a long time to dress in the mornings, have often slight sympathy with sickly daughters.

But while Mr. Irvine was still seated, leaning back in his chair and stroking Juno's head, the servant came to the door and said, "If you please, sir, Joshua Rann wishes to speak with you, if you're at liberty."
"Let him be shown in here," said Mrs.
Irvine, taking up her knitting. "I always like to hear what Mr. Rann has got to say.
His shoes will be dirty, but see that he wipes them, Carrol!"
In two minutes Mr. Rann appeared at the door with very deferential bows, which, however, were far from conciliating Pug, who gave a sharp bark, and ran across the room to reconnoiter the stranger's legs; while the two puppies, regarding Mr.
Rann's prominent calf and ribbed worsted stockings from a mere suspicious point of view, plunged and growled over them in great enjoyment. Meantime, Mr. Irvine turned round his chair and said, "Well, Joshua, any thing the matter at Hayslope, that you've come over this morning? Sit down, sit down. Never mind the dogs; give them a friendly kick. Here, Pug, you rascal!"

CURRENT NOTES.
The Democrats fought the campaign on $330,000.
In the province of Naples 7,576 persons died from cholera.
Mrs. Hulekamp-Morisini has made her debut in New York.
Trouble is not anticipated over the payment of Mexico's debt.
A Norwegian bark with a cargo of lumber is frozen in at Saguenay.
Mr. John Ogilvie gives very flattering reports of affairs in Manitoba.
Mr. Moylan says Quebec lunatic asylums are not the worst in the Dominion.
There is good sleighing in New York State and no snow in Charlottetown.
The Cuban deficit for the current half year is estimated at nine to ten millions.
The British cabinet is said to be divided as to the course to be pursued in Egyptian affairs.
Prof. Kellogg, of the Pittsburg Presbyterian seminary, has been teaching the doctrine of evolution.
Gen. Diaz thinks there will be no serious trouble in Mexico over the settlement of the English debt.
The German social democrats declare their intention of waging a war of fierce opposition to Bismarck.
Nova Scotia has just placed a 5 per cent loan of $400,000 at prices ranging from 106 to 107, entirely within the province.
A proposal has been made in the Toronto School Board to allow ministers to address the children in the public schools.
Mr. Hendricks, in a speech at Brooklyn, said the recent elections had fully established that there must be revenue reform.
M. De Freycinet in the French Senate declared that France's position in Egypt was neither compromised nor lost by recent events there.
The German Reichstag was opened on Thursday, the imperial speech announcing that it was necessary to create new sources of revenue.
A large meeting of health officers and physicians was held at New York to discuss measures for keeping the cholera epidemic from gaining a footing on this continent.
A number of Madrid students recently made a riotous demonstration in the streets owing to the bishops having censured one of the university professors for having advocated liberty of education.
The popularity of Dickens in England is demonstrated by the fact that seven or eight barrows loaded with copies of a penny edition of "Sketches by Boz" were disposed of in one street alone in London in a few hours.
The reciprocity treaty between Spain and the United States is most complete, providing for mutual special privileges to vessels engaged in the trade with Cuba and Porto Rico, and for special privileges for commercial travellers.
Title of prince, 75,000 francs; duke, 50,000 francs; count, 25,000 francs; baron, 20,000 francs. All warranted and in good form. So runs an Italian circular which is being largely put about in the right direction. American buyers are especially sought.
Colonel A. Ragsdale, of Meriden, Eng., in order to prevent the marriage of his daughter with a young man who was objectionable to him, had her placed in a private insane asylum. With the assistance of legal ability the young man had her released and they married at once.
At the Federal bank meeting on Thursday, the general manager's report, which was adopted, recommended the writing off of nearly three million dollars to provide for bad and doubtful debts, the cancellation of five thousand shares of stock, and the reduction of the remainder by one-half, making the capital $1,250,000.—Montreal Gazette.
The Winnipeg Free Press says—"The last shipment of Montana cattle for Chicago passed through the city on Thursday. The Canadian Pacific railway this year carried 5,400 head of cattle from Maple Creek eastward, and it is expected that next year, through the efforts of Mr. W. E. Belcher, and the satisfaction given by the company to the stockmen, about 15,000 head will be transported over the line." Judge Weatherly intends to erect a handsome residence on his property, Grand Pre, the coming spring. Stone has been quarried at Blue Beach, and is now being lightered to Walbrook for the purpose of laying the foundation. Besides other improvements, Judge Weatherly intends to spray out quite a sum in the draining in the spring. The large and commodious barn which he has erected this past summer, and the large orchard now in a forward state, will make this farm one of the most valuable in the section of the county.—
