

MR. AND MRS. RODERICK MacLEAN

Bride's Uncle Is Soloist At Jay-MacLean Wedding

An early autumn wedding was solemnized in St. John's United Church, Mount Stewart, on Saturday, September 18th, when Miriam Edith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland L. Jay, Mount Stewart and Roderick Everett, son of Mr. and Mrs. James O. MacLean, Charlottetown, were united in marriage by Rev. D.L. MacLennan.

The organist, Merrill Nicholson of Parkdale, accompanied the soloist, Harold Coffin, uncle of the bride, as he sang "The Lord's Prayer" prior to the ceremony and "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a sheath style slipper length gown of white peau de soie featuring an overskirt which fell to a train in the back, long sleeves and a scooped neckline accented with tiny seed pearls. A pearl crown held her shoulder length veil of tulle illusion, and she carried a cascade of tulle roses.

The maid of honor, Judy Lea, Charlottetown, was in a street length dress of Nile green brocade with peau de soie, made on empire lines, with short sleeves and a back panel which was held by a large, satin bow. Her headpiece was a satin bow, with a veil of tulle illusion, and she carried a basket of white, gold and bronze baby mums.

The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake, topped with bells and doves bearing wedding rings. Wayne Hamby read the congratulatory telegram. Mr. MacLennan proposed the toast to the bride, which was responded to by the groom, and the best man gave the toast to the bride attendants. Lawson Drake, brother-in-law of the bride, made a short address to the bride and groom.

The guest book was circulated by Mrs. Wayne Hamby, cousin of the bride.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. MacLean left for Niagara Falls and Kensington, Ont., the bride travelling in a two piece dress of blue wool. She wore black and white accessories and a corsage of white sweetheart roses.

Out of province guests included:

Abegweit IODE Makes Plans For Semi-Annual Meeting

Abegweit Chapter of the IODE held their opening meeting for the season at the home of Mrs. Arthur Allen on Thursday evening with the request, Mrs. C.D. Ives, presiding.

Mrs. Lewis, educational secretary, reported bursary payments amounting to $325.00 presented to four high school graduates, now attending university. Arrangements were made for Sobey's Consumer Meat School to be held on November 2nd in the Civic Auditorium, proceeds in aid of the Hospital Extension Fund. Plans were also made for the provincial semi-annual meeting of the IODE to be held in Summerside on October 30th.

Reports were given by the committees in charge for the "Red Clover Revue" to be held in the Civic Auditorium on October 21st in which several Summerside residents will be playing leading parts.

Mrs. Walker, services at home and abroad secretary reported that a box of knitted articles, new and used clothing is being prepared for shipment overseas. The final report of the flower show was given by the treasurer, Mrs. D.O. Stewart. The request stated that a wreath would be placed at the Cenotaph on Remembrance Day.

Wanda Wyatt read a citation for loyalty and work well done to Mrs. F.J.E. Wright, who was also presented with a 25-year membership pin.

Still The Land Is Lovely As Autumn Lingers On

And then at Alderlea on the heels of the Harvest Home came the plowing. At the other farm it was, as it happened, there in that field by the roadside, which in this and recent Summers has given ideal pasture to the flock of sheep.

"And how did it go?" James inquired later of Mack. "Now, not the best" he replied, "the land is still dry."

We suspect that in years to come, as when with James to we determined the age of one born in "that dry summer of '21", so many happenings will be recalled by the uninitiated, by dry season just past. Once upon a time too, James could place definitely some such event by foals born to this farm. "It was the very spring the young mare was foaled" or "That June that horse we sold to... came."

However with horses giving over precedence to machines on farms, time gone can now only rarely be measured this way.

It was Mack who went today, the plow duly serviced, and equipped with new shares against the wear and tear of soil and stubble, to the plowing. "There's little value now to a dollar" we overheard an old-timer of farmer comment rather sadly when James mentioned to him the current prices of shares. "Why, in my day I've bought a whole plow—and a good one too, for a few dollars more!"

And James recalled the marvel of machine that was his first gang-plow, and the relative of Mr. and Mrs. A.R. Jay, with sons Craig and Curtis of Sydney, N.S.; Mrs. Byrno, Thurn family, Kingston, N.S.; Mr. Duane Frerich, Argenteia, Nfld.; Mr. and Mrs. Art LeLacheur, Sackville, N.B., and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hawkins, Sussex, N.B.

Mr. and Mrs. MacLean are presently residing at 109 Pleasant Ave., Sussex, N.B., where the groom is employed in the office of Sussex Poultry, a branch of Canada Packers. (Photo by R.B. Hamby).

MARY HAWORTH Forewarned Of Problems, Girl Drops Mama's Boy

Dear Mary Haworth: Reading about DK's efforts to understand her husband, who "respects" his parents more than he cares for her, I was struck by the similarity to my own love problem.

Except that I took a stand in time, to spare myself a like history of marital heartache. I am 23, a government secretary and for several years was unofficially engaged, off and on, to Bob, who is 25, the youngest in a large family.

Spotted by his parents and brothers and sisters, Bob is emotionally unstable. He can't make any decision without consulting his mother first. And he certainly isn't ready to assume the responsibilities of married life, as I was to learn painfully.

All our conflicts were over his mother, as if I were forever competing with her. We broke up once and later tried again. He told me then that nobody could ever come before his mother. But I wasn't trying to outbid her. I, too, have a mother whom I love very much; but filial love is one thing, and mate-love another.

At first he was afraid to have me meet his mother, who had already selected a bride for him. He said he loved me truly and didn't love the girl, but I must be patient until he could win his mother to our side.

When I did meet her, finally, she treated me coldly, saying almost nothing during my visit. After a rift lasting weeks, Bob and I reconciled last Spring. We managed to get along quite well for about a month. Then I'd see him maybe once every two weeks, with a phone call once a week. He would break dates without calling to excuse himself. If I protested he would say we aren't married yet, consequently he didn't have to explain.

So in June I decided there was no reason on earth to continue, especially as we both were quite miserable in the situation. I loved him dearly and perhaps still do. But I'd had enough of letting the heart rule the head. I figured the present suffering was small compared to the suffering in store if I married him.

Therefore I sympathize deeply with DK's difficulties. I don't know how to help her, but I do know that if I hadn't thought things through, in another 13 years I might have been in her shoes. C.C.: I trust you won't mind my saying that as I see the picture, you drifted hopefully into an affair with Bob, on the naive assumption that he loved you truly, as you loved him (or thought you did). And it was the affair that undermined you in Bob's mind, principally due to his guilt feelings in respect to his mom, for being disloyal to her to that extent, in that particular fashion.

No doubt these guilt feelings, of a neurotic rather than bona-fide moral quality, set in motion a powerful tide of morbid self-condemnation in Bob's emotional constitution, which he never recognized as such, but rather construed to be secret distrustful disapproval of, and disappointment in you.

In short, if you share a weakening pattern of selfish misbehavior about which he feels guilty, thus identifying yourself with his ingrained sense of shame (a chronic disability of the neurotic character), you may be sure that he will involuntarily reject you as a distasteful influence. This is his unconscious way of trying, profoundly, to be rid of himself. I would suppose that in introducing you to his mom, Bob unconsciously had a terrified sense that he might be bringing himself, in his true colors, to her.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE CONDON

Lund-Condon Vows Pledged At Mt. Herbert Ceremony

White and yellow mums decorated Mt. Herbert United Church on September 18th at 2 p.m. when Eileen Gertrude Lund became the bride of George Hudson Condon. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Lund of Bethel and the groom is the son of Mrs. J.L. Condon of Kentville, N.S., and the late Mr. Condon.

Rev. J.G.E. Ball officiated at the ceremony and organist was Gloria Wood of Mt. Herbert. White satin bows and blue and white bachelorette buttons marked the pews.

The bride, who was presented for marriage by her father, was in a white tulle length gown with full bouffant skirt, long lily print sleeves and a bateau neckline, embroidered with lace. Her tiered veil of silk illusion was held in place by a headpiece of satin rosettes, and she carried a bouquet of red and white sweetheart roses.

The only attendant was her sister, Ruth of New York, wearing a sleeveless street length dress of blue linen, with white hat and a bouquet of white carnations with white streamers.

The groom's mother wore a jacket dress of rosewood crepe with a brown feathered hat and brown accessories. Her corsage was of gold colored mums.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, after which the couple left on a visit to the New York World's Fair and Toronto, Ont., the bride travelling in a green knitted suit with white hat and accessories.

The newlyweds are residing at 66 Prince St., Charlottetown. Out of province guests included Marie Condon, Dr. Garry and Mrs. Condon, and Mrs. Dot Denney, all of Kentville, N.S., and Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Hobbs of Wolfville, N.S. (Photo by Bill Taylor) attention. But whether that naked revelation of himself would be good or bad, if seen in the light of full understanding, is something Bob may never know. Indeed it never will occur to him even to wonder, unless and until he's been analyzed.

Bob's mother, in selecting a bride for him probably is aiming unconsciously at being present, by proxy, throughout the whole history of his married experience (if any). Hence, for her, a choice of his own, to be his bride, is a challenge she'll fight to the finish. P.S.: You did well to break off with them. M.H.
