The R. C. A. F. announced last night that at least one man died when a Dakota plane from Summerside station crashed in the Labrador wilderness last Monday.

The announcement followed an intensive air search, leading to the discovery of the plane's wreckage 130 miles southwest of Goose Bay Saturday.

A land party fording streams and hacking through underbrush made its way to the crash scene and found the body of Flying Officer Owen Foster, 23, of North Vancouver. He was the co-pilot.

Air Force officials declined to speculate on the fate of the other three crew members of the Dakota. Bad weather yesterday hampered efforts to conduct a complete investigation.

Two Canos from Greenwood, N. S., air station landed on a nearby lake shortly after the wreckage was sighted. Ground parties then proceeded to the scene. Later a report was given out that the wreckage was strewn over a large area and that there was no sign of life.

Yesterday they were due to return and a U. S. helicopter was to hover overhead and do some low level looking around. However weather prevented the putting into effect of these plans.

TUESDAY

The newly formed Prince of Wales College Alumni tendered a banquet to the 1951 graduating class of P. W. C. at the Charlottetown last night.

The Royal Canadian Air Force announced early this morning that the bodies of three crew members of the Dakota from Summerside air station which crashed in the Labrador wilds May 14 had been recovered.

The bodies located yesterday were those of the pilot, F. O. Joseph J. L. E. Rodier, 25, of Montreal; Flight Cadet Gerald Michael Higgins, 21, of Gatineau Point, Quebec; and F. O. Cadet Frank Wilfred Smith, 24, of Shelburne, N. S.

The last three bodies were in marshy ground which hindered the search, the Air Force said. All the next of kin have been notified. The bodies will be brought back to Goose Bay and will be taken out for burial.

The cause of the crash, which occurred during a routine training flight, is still unknown but an investigation is continuing. Faint hope that there would be survivors faded yesterday when the Air Force announced that three unopened parachutes had been found in the crash area.

A spectacular fire, the smoke and flames of which were easily visible in the city, broke out late yesterday afternoon on the farm of Mr. Harry Wood, Bunbury. The farm of Mr. Wood adjoins that of Premier J. Walter Jones where the valuable Holstein herd of the Abegweit are quartered.

Firefighting equipment from the city, including the big machine and the pumper, went to the scene under direction of Deputy Fire Chief James Walker. Although they were successful in preventing the spread of the flames to the farm home of Mr. Wood and other outbuildings, they could not save eight buildings which were razed by the flames.

The fire was first noticed in the southwest corner of the straw barn by Mr. Wood's 8-year-old son, David, who was coming home from Premier Jones' farm around four o'clock. During the fire the wind was blowing in an easterly direction and carried large pieces of shingles to the farm of the Premier where they set fire to two of the outbuildings.

Terrific heat hampered the efforts of firefighters as the wooden structures burned fiercely and prevented people from getting too handy. The city firefighters laid two lines of hose from a stream about a quarter-mile away.

At the time of the outbreak Mr. Wood was assisting his son Winston at the latter's farm as Herbert and has no idea how the fire could have started where it did. He stated there were no wires in that end of the building which is the one nearest the farm of Premier Jones. When young David first noticed the blaze he ran for his mother and they tried to put it out with a few buckets of water. However, seeing that it was getting out of control, they telephoned for help.

City firemen were away slightly more than three hours on the call. The fire damage, which will run into several thousands of dollars, is partly covered by insurance.
