SALLY DOWS,

An After War Romance of the South.

With the view of that fateful spot which he had not seen since his last meeting there with Sally Dows, a flood of recollection rushed upon him. In the white mist that hung low along the further edge of the swamp he fancied he could see again the battery smoke through which the ghostly figure of the dead rider had charged his gun three years before; in the bending white plume of a funeral plant in the long avenue, he thought he saw once more the light figure of Miss Sally of only yesterday. In another moment, in his already dazed condition, he might have succumbed to some sensuous memory of her former fascinations, but he threw it off savagely now, with a quick and bitter recalling of her deceit and his own weakness. Turning his back upon the scene, with a half superstitious tremor, he plunged once more into the trackless covert. But he was conscious that his eyesight was gradually growing dim and his strength failing. He was obliged from time to time to stop and rally his sluggish senses that seemed to grow heavier under some deadly exhalation that flowed around him. He even seemed to hear familiar voices—but that must be delusion! At last he stumbled. Throwing out an arm to protect himself he came heavily down upon the ooze, striking a dull half-elastic root that seemed—it must have been another delusion—to move beneath him, and evkn—so confused was his senses now—to strike back angrily upon his prostrate form. A sharp pain ran from his elbow to his shoulder and for a moment stung him to full consciousness again. There were voices surely—the voices of their former pursuers! If they were seeking to revenge themselves upon him for Cato's escape, he was ready for them!

HE FELT HIMSELF LAID UPON THE GROUND.

He cocked his revolver and stood erect. A torch flashed through the wood. But even at that moment a film came over his eyes; he staggered and fell.

An interval of helpless, semi-consciousness ensued. He felt himself lifted by strong arms and carried forward, his arm hanging uselessly at his side. The dank odor of the wood was presently exchanged for the free air of the open field; the flaming pine knot torches were extinguished in the bright moonlight. People pressed around him, but so indistinctly he could not recognize them. All his consciousness seemed centered in the burning, throbbing pain of his arm. He felt himself laid upon the gravel; the sleeve cut from his shoulder; the cool sensation of the hot and bursting skin bared to the night air, and then a soft and indescribable pressure upon a wound he had not felt before. A voice followed—high, lazily petulant, and familiar to him, and yet one he strove in vain to recall.

"De Lawdy-Gawd save us, Miss Sally! Wot yo' doin' dah? Chile! Chile! yo'll kill you'self, shuah!"

The pressure continued—strange and potent even through his pain—and was then withdrawn. And a voice that thrilled him said:

"It's the only thing to save him! Hush, yo' chattering black crow! Say anything about this to a living soul, and I'll have you flogged. Now trot out the whisky bottle and pour it down him!"

CHAPTER VII.

WHEN Courtland's eyes opened again he was in bed in his own room at Redlands, with the vivid morning sun occasionally lighting up the wall whenever the closely-drawn curtains were lightly blown aside by the freshening breeze. The whole events of the night might have been a dream, but for the unsupportable languor which numbed his senses, and the torpor of his arm that swollen and discolored lay outside the coverlid on a pillow before him. Cloths that had been wrung out in iced water were replaced upon it from time to time, by Sophy, Miss Dows' housekeeper, who seated by his bedside was lazily fanning him. Their eyes met.

"Broken?" he said interrogatively with a faint return of his old deliberate manner, glancing at his helpless arm.

"Deedy no! co'nnle. Snake bite!" responded the negress.

"Snake bite!" repeated Courtland with languid interest, "what snake?"

"Moccasin o' copperhead—if yo' doun know yo'self which," she replied. "But it's all right now, honey. De pizen's draw'd out, and clean, done gone. Wot yer feels now is de whisky. De whisky stays, sah. It gets into de lubrications of de skin, sah, and has to be absobed."

Some faint chord of memory was touched by the girl's peculiar vocabulary.

"Ah," said Courtland, quickly, "you're Miss Dows' Sophy. Then you can tell me—"

"Nuffin! sah! absomlutely nuffin!" interrupted the girl shaking her head with impressive official dignity. "It's done gone fo'bid by de doctor! Yo're to lie dar and shut yo're eye, honey—" she added, for the moment reverting unconsciously to the native maternal tenderness of her race, "and you're not to bodder yo'self ef school keeps o' not. De medical man say distinctly, sah," she concluded, sternly, realizing her duty again, "no conversation wid de patient."

But Courtland had winning ways with all dependents. "But you will answer me one question, Sophy, and I'll not ask another. Has—" he hesitated in his still uncertainty as to the actuality of his experience and its probable extent—"has—Cato—escaped?"

"If yo' mean dat sassy, bull-nigger oberseer ob yo'se, con'nle, he's safe, yo' bet!" returned Sophy, sharply. "Safe in his own quo'tahs night afo' las', after braggin' about de bloodhaowns he killed; and safe ober de county line yes'day moanin', after kickin' up all dis rumpus. If dar is a sassy, high-falutin nigger I jiss 'spises—it's dat black nigger Cato o' yo'se! Now," relenting, "yo' jiss wink yo' eye, honey, and don't excite yo'self about sech black trash; drap off to sleep comfor'ble. Fo' yo' doan' get annuder word out o' Sophy, shuah."

A Brockville Druggist's Case.

BROCKVILLE, April 24th.—The popular impression is that doctors and druggists seldom take their own medicine. This is no doubt true, but when a doctor takes ill he generally calls in one of his own profession, in whose skill he has every confidence, or when a druggist is in a similar situation, he often puts his faith in the preparations of some other chemist which he knows give good results. Both the doctors and druggists in such cases show their good sense. A case in point happened in this town a short time ago. Mr. F. M. Turner, the well known and popular druggist, who is now travelling for Parke, Davies & Co., has for a long time been a sufferer from congestion and inflammation of the kidneys. He tried a great many remedies, but without results. His patrons, however, spoke so highly of Dodd's Kidney Pills that he was induced to try them. He now states that he is completely cured, and to your correspondent he said that as a rule he had very little faith in patent medicines, but that for the cure of kidney troubles, rheumatism, backache, etc., he does not know of any remedy that is giving such good results as Dodd's Kidney Pills. ..

P. E. ISLAND.

PARTIES using the Telephones would find talking much more satisfactory if they would observe the following rules:—

1st. Speak with the mouth about four inches from the transmitter.

2nd. Speak in a moderate tone of voice, not too loud, and distinctly.

3rd. Place the telephone so as to cover the ear, just as if you wished to shut out all other sounds. Do not press too hard on the ear.

It is possible to talk and be heard when standing back two or three feet from the transmitter, if you shout loud enough, but it is not a pleasant mode of conversation, is entirely unnecessary, and is a useless waste of wind and lungs, besides being very annoying to all within range of your voice.
