S.D.U. Student Reports On I.S.S. Summer Seminar

On Wednesday evening, September 27, Mr. Mark MacGuigan gave a report to the students and faculty of St. Dunstan's on his trip to Europe to attend the third International Student Service Summer Seminar, which took place at Poutigny in central France. This Seminar was financed by the Canadian Council for Reconstruction through UNESCO, and was run entirely by Canadians. Mr. MacGuigan as representative of St. Dunstan's, was one of 40 young Canadians who had the opportunity of taking part in this Seminar.

The Canadian group, of which he was a member, came together in New York on June 22, intending to embark immediately, along with 500 American students, for Rotterdam; but the American Coast Guard did not approve the ship that they had scheduled, and this caused a delay of five days while another ship was obtained, so that they did not reach Rotterdam until July 6. From Rotterdam the Canadians went on to their Seminar site at Poutigny, where they remained from July 6 to August 12, except for weekend trips through France. After the Seminar ended, Mr. MacGuigan spent five days in Rome, where he had an audience with the Holy Father, four days in the northern Italian cities of Florence, Venice, and Milan, and the rest of his time in France, England, and the Netherlands. The group left Rotterdam on the return voyage to New York on August 31, and Mr. MacGuigan arrived back in Charlottetown on September 11.

The following is a brief paragraph from Mark's speech: "The word 'seminar' itself means simply a group of students engaged in research. We were not this summer engaged in research of the ordinary kind, but, one might say, they were doing research of a very special type — research in human nature. They were not there primarily for an academic or scholastic purpose. We did not even study, but we did learn. We got to know the thoughts and ideals of 71 students of sixteen other nationalities."

The daily program began with two lectures in the morning, each of an hour's duration. In the afternoon, there were organized discussions in smaller groups; these would last about an hour and a half. In the evening, there were usually debates or discussions organized by the students themselves. The rest of the time was free, and was spent in various games, in singing, and in dancing (for 34 of the 120 delegates were girls).

For the academic program of the Seminar, the theme chosen was the "Crisis in Western Culture" and each professor lectured on the crisis as it was manifested in his field. All of the regular professors were Canadians, with the exception of one from Britain. In addition to this staff there were five guest speakers. The first was the Canadian ambassador to France, Mr. Vanier. Then there were Dr. Brock Chisholm, now head of the World Health Organization, Dr. Ritter from Germany, a famous historian and Dr. Jammes from the Sorbonne, a French economist. Finally, and most illustrious of all, was the world-renowned French philosopher, Etienne Gilson.

The Seminar achieved two great results. First of all, it became, as had been intended, a truly international community, in which the students in their constant contact forgot national backgrounds and considered only the personality of their comrades. Secondly, the Seminar was conducted in the democratic spirit of free discussion, with everyone encouraged to speak his mind, so that all might become acquainted with their fellows' ideals and their difficulties. Disregarding completely the lesser advantages these two benefits alone make the I.S.S. Summer Seminar a valuable contribution to international understanding and world peace.
