

SOURIS SCHOOL DISTRICT No. 141. All Taxes due to Souris School District No. 141 are to be paid on or before May 25th, 1954.

JUNIOR CHOIR HEARD - The junior choir of Trinity United Church, Montague, was heard at the Mother's Day service on Sunday morning.

TWO ARRESTED - Two residents of Georgetown were arrested and placed in custody on a charge of breaking and entry and theft at the home of John Malcolm MacKenzie, Cardigan North, and it is understood that a search is being conducted for a third party, also from Georgetown, on the same charge.

Mother's Day Service Held At Georgetown

Special Mother's Day service was observed on the morning of Sunday, May 9 at St. David's United Church, Georgetown. There was an excellent family representation at this service, mothers, fathers and children attending in goodly numbers.

The day was also memorable for the first appearance of the Junior Choir, its members drawn from the ranks of the Sunday-school. As the 15 girls and boys filed from the vestry all gowned alike in snow-white surplices, to take their places in the choir, the congregation must indeed have felt a justifiable pride and thankfulness in and for these little ones.

During the course of the service, Charles Hansen, a member of the newly-formed choir read a story for children. A quartette of little girls sang, "We love you, Mother," and following the offering the entire choir sang "O Father, Thou who givest All."

Miss Janie Llewellyn and Mrs. H. Larsen who trained these young singers are to be highly commended for the quality of tone and even blending of voices which distinguished their initial performance. It is with pleasure that we learn that the Junior Choir will lead the Sunday morning monthly services throughout the summer.

Rev. W. Patterson gave a rousing address on the theme of the sanctity and high vocation of motherhood. The beautiful tawny and velvet chrysanthemums on the Communion table were a Mother's Day gift to Mrs. William Hobbs from her children and grandchildren. Mrs. E. Easton was the organist.

Also greatly appreciated was the help of those ladies who undertook the making of the choir surplices after the kind donation of material from the W. A. They are Miss Llewellyn, Mrs. Larsen, Mrs. A. H. Stewart, Mrs. N. Hansen, and Mrs. C. Lelacheur.

Continued from page 1

Cape Breton Commons outside Canada and 1,214 in Canada.

URGENT COMMITTEE Mr. Gillis, Col. Brooks and Ray Thomas (SC-Wetaskiwin) all urged the government to establish a permanent Commons committee on veterans affairs with power to review all veterans problems.

Mr. Gillis said that until a few years ago the seasonal committees on veterans affairs always had been considered non-partisan and divorced from politics. They had had the power to study veterans' problems generally and initiate legislation of its own.

In the last few years, however, they had been restricted to examining government legislation. Thus the government was forcing committee members to take sides politically.

"Let's not continue to develop political decisions on veterans' problems," he said. There should be a standing committee on veterans affairs which could make regular examinations of veterans legislation rather than having to wait for the government to decide when and what the committee should consider.

Mr. Gillis also criticized the government's action in cutting off active service benefits to soldiers serving in Korea after the armistice.

The move had placed service men in Korea in the same position as those now in Germany, although conditions were far different. Veterans organizations had described it as "complete, rank discrimination."

The two bills to be referred to the committee cover amendments to a number of separate acts. Among other things, they extend the deadline for applying for war services gratuities to the end of this year, and the deadline for applying for re-establishment credits to Jan. 1, 1960, or 15 years after discharge, whichever is the longer period.

At present, Second World War veterans can apply up until the end of this year or 10 years after discharge. At June 30 of last year, 187,000 veterans still had not applied for re-establishment credits valued at more than $37,000,000. Another proposed change will provide rehabilitation benefits to 22,000 members of the regular forces who left Canada for Korea before July 27, 1953, the date of the armistice.

Drive out ACHES

MINARD'S LINIMENT

GIRL GUIDES MEET - The regular meeting of the First Montague Girl Guides was held last evening in the Legion Hall under the direction of Guide Anna MacLaren. The major part of the evening was spent in the study of the semaphore, after which a period of games was enjoyed. The meeting closed with Taps.

Personals Mr. Robert Mosher, Dartmouth, N.S., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Mosher, Montague.

James Macdonald, Louis Don Johnston, Bryce Beck and Douglas Johnston, students at Mount Allison, have returned to their respective homes in Montague.

Friends of Mrs. Lemuel Hicken, Pembroke, are sorry to hear she is a patient in the King's County Hospital.

Mr. Willard Lank, Charlottetown, was a visitor to Montague yesterday.

Miss Selma Llewellyn, Halifax, N.S., spent the week-end in Montague, guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Lucas.

Miss Pearl McKenna of Halifax, N.S., has returned after spending the past few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward McKenna, St. Peter's Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Reid of Dartmouth, N.S., has returned home after spending the past few days with Mrs. Reid's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward McKenna, St. Peter's Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Garnham and daughter Judy, Charlottetown, were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. MacGregor, Montague, on Sunday. They were accompanied by Mrs. Roderick Agar, who leaves by train today on an extended trip to Western Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Bennett, Montague, are visiting in Alberton with Mrs. Bennett's mother, Mrs. H. J. Larkin. They plan on spending several days of their vacation in Chipman and Saint John, N.B., before returning to Montague where Mr. Bennett is the local manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Livestock

MONTREAL (CP)—Cattle prices were 80 cents higher in moderate-ly active trading on Montreal livestock markets Monday. No hog prices were established.

Receipts: 606 cattle, 380 calves, 85 sheep and lambs and 313 hogs. Medium to good steers brought 18-20, common 14-17, good cows 13-14, choice 15, medium 11.50-13, common 11-11.50, canners and cutters 8-9.50.

Good to choice vealers sold at 18-19, common to medium 13-17; drinkers 10-13. Sheep made 13-15.

ernment's action in cutting off active service benefits to soldiers serving in Korea after the armistice.

The move had placed service men in Korea in the same position as those now in Germany, although conditions were far different. Veterans organizations had described it as "complete, rank discrimination."

The two bills to be referred to the committee cover amendments to a number of separate acts. Among other things, they extend the deadline for applying for war services gratuities to the end of this year, and the deadline for applying for re-establishment credits to Jan. 1, 1960, or 15 years after discharge, whichever is the longer period.

At present, Second World War veterans can apply up until the end of this year or 10 years after discharge. At June 30 of last year, 187,000 veterans still had not applied for re-establishment credits valued at more than $37,000,000. Another proposed change will provide rehabilitation benefits to 22,000 members of the regular forces who left Canada for Korea before July 27, 1953, the date of the armistice.

Continued from page 1

Cape Breton Commons outside Canada and 1,214 in Canada.

URGENT COMMITTEE Mr. Gillis, Col. Brooks and Ray Thomas (SC-Wetaskiwin) all urged the government to establish a permanent Commons committee on veterans affairs with power to review all veterans problems.

Mr. Gillis said that until a few years ago the seasonal committees on veterans affairs always had been considered non-partisan and divorced from politics. They had had the power to study veterans' problems generally and initiate legislation of its own.

In the last few years, however, they had been restricted to examining government legislation. Thus the government was forcing committee members to take sides politically.

"Let's not continue to develop political decisions on veterans' problems," he said. There should be a standing committee on veterans affairs which could make regular examinations of veterans legislation rather than having to wait for the government to decide when and what the committee should consider.

Mr. Gillis also criticized the government's action in cutting off active service benefits to soldiers serving in Korea after the armistice.

The move had placed service men in Korea in the same position as those now in Germany, although conditions were far different. Veterans organizations had described it as "complete, rank discrimination."

The two bills to be referred to the committee cover amendments to a number of separate acts. Among other things, they extend the deadline for applying for war services gratuities to the end of this year, and the deadline for applying for re-establishment credits to Jan. 1, 1960, or 15 years after discharge, whichever is the longer period.

At present, Second World War veterans can apply up until the end of this year or 10 years after discharge. At June 30 of last year, 187,000 veterans still had not applied for re-establishment credits valued at more than $37,000,000. Another proposed change will provide rehabilitation benefits to 22,000 members of the regular forces who left Canada for Korea before July 27, 1953, the date of the armistice.

Continued from page 1

Cape Breton Commons outside Canada and 1,214 in Canada.

URGENT COMMITTEE

Mr. Gillis, Col. Brooks and Ray Thomas (SC-Wetaskiwin) all urged the government to establish a permanent Commons committee on veterans affairs with power to review all veterans problems.

Mr. Gillis said that until a few years ago the seasonal committees on veterans affairs always had been considered non-partisan and divorced from politics. They had had the power to study veterans' problems generally and initiate legislation of its own.

In the last few years, however, they had been restricted to examining government legislation. Thus the government was forcing committee members to take sides politically.

"Let's not continue to develop political decisions on veterans' problems," he said. There should be a standing committee on veterans affairs which could make regular examinations of veterans legislation rather than having to wait for the government to decide when and what the committee should consider.

Mr. Gillis also criticized the government's action in cutting off active service benefits to soldiers serving in Korea after the armistice.

The move had placed service men in Korea in the same position as those now in Germany, although conditions were far different. Veterans organizations had described it as "complete, rank discrimination."

The two bills to be referred to the committee cover amendments to a number of separate acts. Among other things, they extend the deadline for applying for war services gratuities to the end of this year, and the deadline for applying for re-establishment credits to Jan. 1, 1960, or 15 years after discharge, whichever is the longer period.

At present, Second World War veterans can apply up until the end of this year or 10 years after discharge. At June 30 of last year, 187,000 veterans still had not applied for re-establishment credits valued at more than $37,000,000. Another proposed change will provide rehabilitation benefits to 22,000 members of the regular forces who left Canada for Korea before July 27, 1953, the date of the armistice.

Continued from page 1

Cape Breton Commons outside Canada and 1,214 in Canada.

URGENT COMMITTEE

Mr. Gillis, Col. Brooks and Ray Thomas (SC-Wetaskiwin) all urged the government to establish a permanent Commons committee on veterans affairs with power to review all veterans problems.

Mr. Gillis said that until a few years ago the seasonal committees on veterans affairs always had been considered non-partisan and divorced from politics. They had had the power to study veterans' problems generally and initiate legislation of its own.

In the last few years, however, they had been restricted to examining government legislation. Thus the government was forcing committee members to take sides politically.

"Let's not continue to develop political decisions on veterans' problems," he said. There should be a standing committee on veterans affairs which could make regular examinations of veterans legislation rather than having to wait for the government to decide when and what the committee should consider.

Mr. Gillis also criticized the government's action in cutting off active service benefits to soldiers serving in Korea after the armistice.

The move had placed service men in Korea in the same position as those now in Germany, although conditions were far different. Veterans organizations had described it as "complete, rank discrimination."

The two bills to be referred to the committee cover amendments to a number of separate acts. Among other things, they extend the deadline for applying for war services gratuities to the end of this year, and the deadline for applying for re-establishment credits to Jan. 1, 1960, or 15 years after discharge, whichever is the longer period.

At present, Second World War veterans can apply up until the end of this year or 10 years after discharge. At June 30 of last year, 187,000 veterans still had not applied for re-establishment credits valued at more than $37,000,000. Another proposed change will provide rehabilitation benefits to 22,000 members of the regular forces who left Canada for Korea before July 27, 1953, the date of the armistice.

Continued from page 1

Cape Breton Commons outside Canada and 1,214 in Canada.

URGENT COMMITTEE

Mr. Gillis, Col. Brooks and Ray Thomas (SC-Wetaskiwin) all urged the government to establish a permanent Commons committee on veterans affairs with power to review all veterans problems.

Mr. Gillis said that until a few years ago the seasonal committees on veterans affairs always had been considered non-partisan and divorced from politics. They had had the power to study veterans' problems generally and initiate legislation of its own.

In the last few years, however, they had been restricted to examining government legislation. Thus the government was forcing committee members to take sides politically.

"Let's not continue to develop political decisions on veterans' problems," he said. There should be a standing committee on veterans affairs which could make regular examinations of veterans legislation rather than having to wait for the government to decide when and what the committee should consider.

Mr. Gillis also criticized the government's action in cutting off active service benefits to soldiers serving in Korea after the armistice.

The move had placed service men in Korea in the same position as those now in Germany, although conditions were far different. Veterans organizations had described it as "complete, rank discrimination."

The two bills to be referred to the committee cover amendments to a number of separate acts. Among other things, they extend the deadline for applying for war services gratuities to the end of this year, and the deadline for applying for re-establishment credits to Jan. 1, 1960, or 15 years after discharge, whichever is the longer period.

At present, Second World War veterans can apply up until the end of this year or 10 years after discharge. At June 30 of last year, 187,000 veterans still had not applied for re-establishment credits valued at more than $37,000,000. Another proposed change will provide rehabilitation benefits to 22,000 members of the regular forces who left Canada for Korea before July 27, 1953, the date of the armistice.

Continued from page 1

Cape Breton Commons outside Canada and 1,214 in Canada.

URGENT COMMITTEE

Mr. Gillis, Col. Brooks and Ray Thomas (SC-Wetaskiwin) all urged the government to establish a permanent Commons committee on veterans affairs with power to review all veterans problems.

Mr. Gillis said that until a few years ago the seasonal committees on veterans affairs always had been considered non-partisan and divorced from politics. They had had the power to study veterans' problems generally and initiate legislation of its own.

In the last few years, however, they had been restricted to examining government legislation. Thus the government was forcing committee members to take sides politically.

"Let's not continue to develop political decisions on veterans' problems," he said. There should be a standing committee on veterans affairs which could make regular examinations of veterans legislation rather than having to wait for the government to decide when and what the committee should consider.

Mr. Gillis also criticized the government's action in cutting off active service benefits to soldiers serving in Korea after the armistice.

The move had placed service men in Korea in the same position as those now in Germany, although conditions were far different. Veterans organizations had described it as "complete, rank discrimination."

The two bills to be referred to the committee cover amendments to a number of separate acts. Among other things, they extend the deadline for applying for war services gratuities to the end of this year, and the deadline for applying for re-establishment credits to Jan. 1, 1960, or 15 years after discharge, whichever is the longer period.

At present, Second World War veterans can apply up until the end of this year or 10 years after discharge. At June 30 of last year, 187,000 veterans still had not applied for re-establishment credits valued at more than $37,000,000. Another proposed change will provide rehabilitation benefits to 22,000 members of the regular forces who left Canada for Korea before July 27, 1953, the date of the armistice.

Continued from page 1

Cape Breton Commons outside Canada and 1,214 in Canada.

URGENT COMMITTEE

Mr. Gillis, Col. Brooks and Ray Thomas (SC-Wetaskiwin) all urged the government to establish a permanent Commons committee on veterans affairs with power to review all veterans problems.

Mr. Gillis said that until a few years ago the seasonal committees on veterans affairs always had been considered non-partisan and divorced from politics. They had had the power to study veterans' problems generally and initiate legislation of its own.

In the last few years, however, they had been restricted to examining government legislation. Thus the government was forcing committee members to take sides politically.

"Let's not continue to develop political decisions on veterans' problems," he said. There should be a standing committee on veterans affairs which could make regular examinations of veterans legislation rather than having to wait for the government to decide when and what the committee should consider.

Mr. Gillis also criticized the government's action in cutting off active service benefits to soldiers serving in Korea after the armistice.

The move had placed service men in Korea in the same position as those now in Germany, although conditions were far different. Veterans organizations had described it as "complete, rank discrimination."

The two bills to be referred to the committee cover amendments to a number of separate acts. Among other things, they extend the deadline for applying for war services gratuities to the end of this year, and the deadline for applying for re-establishment credits to Jan. 1, 1960, or 15 years after discharge, whichever is the longer period.

At present, Second World War veterans can apply up until the end of this year or 10 years after discharge. At June 30 of last year, 187,000 veterans still had not applied for re-establishment credits valued at more than $37,000,000. Another proposed change will provide rehabilitation benefits to 22,000 members of the regular forces who left Canada for Korea before July 27, 1953, the date of the armistice.

Continued from page 1

Cape Breton Commons outside Canada and 1,214 in Canada.

URGENT COMMITTEE

Mr. Gillis, Col. Brooks and Ray Thomas (SC-Wetaskiwin) all urged the government to establish a permanent Commons committee on veterans affairs with power to review all veterans problems.

Mr. Gillis said that until a few years ago the seasonal committees on veterans affairs always had been considered non-partisan and divorced from politics. They had had the power to study veterans' problems generally and initiate legislation of its own.

In the last few years, however, they had been restricted to examining government legislation. Thus the government was forcing committee members to take sides politically.

"Let's not continue to develop political decisions on veterans' problems," he said. There should be a standing committee on veterans affairs which could make regular examinations of veterans legislation rather than having to wait for the government to decide when and what the committee should consider.

Mr. Gillis also criticized the government's action in cutting off active service benefits to soldiers serving in Korea after the armistice.

The move had placed service men in Korea in the same position as those now in Germany, although conditions were far different. Veterans organizations had described it as "complete, rank discrimination."

The two bills to be referred to the committee cover amendments to a number of separate acts. Among other things, they extend the deadline for applying for war services gratuities to the end of this year, and the deadline for applying for re-establishment credits to Jan. 1, 1960, or 15 years after discharge, whichever is the longer period.

At present, Second World War veterans can apply up until the end of this year or 10 years after discharge. At June 30 of last year, 187,000 veterans still had not applied for re-establishment credits valued at more than $37,000,000. Another proposed change will provide rehabilitation benefits to 22,000 members of the regular forces who left Canada for Korea before July 27, 1953, the date of the armistice.

Continued from page 1

Cape Breton Commons outside Canada and 1,214 in Canada.

URGENT COMMITTEE

Mr. Gillis, Col. Brooks and Ray Thomas (SC-Wetaskiwin) all urged the government to establish a permanent Commons committee on veterans affairs with power to review all veterans problems.

Mr. Gillis said that until a few years ago the seasonal committees on veterans affairs always had been considered non-partisan and divorced from politics. They had had the power to study veterans' problems generally and initiate legislation of its own.

In the last few years, however, they had been restricted to examining government legislation. Thus the government was forcing committee members to take sides politically.

"Let's not continue to develop political decisions on veterans' problems," he said. There should be a standing committee on veterans affairs which could make regular examinations of veterans legislation rather than having to wait for the government to decide when and what the committee should consider.

Mr. Gillis also criticized the government's action in cutting off active service benefits to soldiers serving in Korea after the armistice.

The move had placed service men in Korea in the same position as those now in Germany, although conditions were far different. Veterans organizations had described it as "complete, rank discrimination."

The two bills to be referred to the committee cover amendments to a number of separate acts. Among other things, they extend the deadline for applying for war services gratuities to the end of this year, and the deadline for applying for re-establishment credits to Jan. 1, 1960, or 15 years after discharge, whichever is the longer period.

At present, Second World War veterans can apply up until the end of this year or 10 years after discharge. At June 30 of last year, 187,000 veterans still had not applied for re-establishment credits valued at more than $37,000,000. Another proposed change will provide rehabilitation benefits to 22,000 members of the regular forces who left Canada for Korea before July 27, 1953, the date of the armistice.

Continued from page 1

Cape Breton Commons outside Canada and 1,214 in Canada.

URGENT COMMITTEE

Mr. Gillis, Col. Brooks and Ray Thomas (SC-Wetaskiwin) all urged the government to establish a permanent Commons committee on veterans affairs with power to review all veterans problems.

Mr. Gillis said that until a few years ago the seasonal committees on veterans affairs always had been considered non-partisan and divorced from politics. They had had the power to study veterans' problems generally and initiate legislation of its own.

In the last few years, however, they had been restricted to examining government legislation. Thus the government was forcing committee members to take sides politically.

"Let's not continue to develop political decisions on veterans' problems," he said. There should be a standing committee on veterans affairs which could make regular examinations of veterans legislation rather than having to wait for the government to decide when and what the committee should consider.

Mr. Gillis also criticized the government's action in cutting off active service benefits to soldiers serving in Korea after the armistice.

The move had placed service men in Korea in the same position as those now in Germany, although conditions were far different. Veterans organizations had described it as "complete, rank discrimination."

The two bills to be referred to the committee cover amendments to a number of separate acts. Among other things, they extend the deadline for applying for war services gratuities to the end of this year, and the deadline for applying for re-establishment credits to Jan. 1, 1960, or 15 years after discharge, whichever is the longer period.

At present, Second World War veterans can apply up until the end of this year or 10 years after discharge. At June 30 of last year, 187,000 veterans still had not applied for re-establishment credits valued at more than $37,000,000. Another proposed change will provide rehabilitation benefits to 22,000 members of the regular forces who left Canada for Korea before July 27, 1953, the date of the armistice.

Continued from page 1

Cape Breton Commons outside Canada and 1,214 in Canada.

URGENT COMMITTEE

Mr. Gillis, Col. Brooks and Ray Thomas (SC-Wetaskiwin) all urged the government to establish a permanent Commons committee on veterans affairs with power to review all veterans problems.

Mr. Gillis said that until a few years ago the seasonal committees on veterans affairs always had been considered non-partisan and divorced from politics. They had had the power to study veterans' problems generally and initiate legislation of its own.

In the last few years, however, they had been restricted to examining government legislation. Thus the government was forcing committee members to take sides politically.

"Let's not continue to develop political decisions on veterans' problems," he said. There should be a standing committee on veterans affairs which could make regular examinations of veterans legislation rather than having to wait for the government to decide when and what the committee should consider.

Mr. Gillis also criticized the government's action in cutting off active service benefits to soldiers serving in Korea after the armistice.

The move had placed service men in Korea in the same position as those now in Germany, although conditions were far different. Veterans organizations had described it as "complete, rank discrimination."

The two bills to be referred to the committee cover amendments to a number of separate acts. Among other things, they extend the deadline for applying for war services gratuities to the end of this year, and the deadline for applying for re-establishment credits to Jan. 1, 1960, or 15 years after discharge, whichever is the longer period.

At present, Second World War veterans can apply up until the end of this year or 10 years after discharge. At June 30 of last year, 187,000 veterans still had not applied for re-establishment credits valued at more than $37,000,000. Another proposed change will provide rehabilitation benefits to 22,000 members of the regular forces who left Canada for Korea before July 27, 1953, the date of the armistice.

Continued from page 1

Cape Breton Commons outside Canada and 1,214 in Canada.

URGENT COMMITTEE

Mr. Gillis, Col. Brooks and Ray Thomas (SC-Wetaskiwin) all urged the government to establish a permanent Commons committee on veterans affairs with power to review all veterans problems.

Mr. Gillis said that until a few years ago the seasonal committees on veterans affairs always had been considered non-partisan and divorced from politics. They had had the power to study veterans' problems generally and initiate legislation of its own.

In the last few years, however, they had been restricted to examining government legislation. Thus the government was forcing committee members to take sides politically.

"Let's not continue to develop political decisions on veterans' problems," he said. There should be a standing committee on veterans affairs which could make regular examinations of veterans legislation rather than having to wait for the government to decide when and what the committee should consider.

Mr. Gillis also criticized the government's action in cutting off active service benefits to soldiers serving in Korea after the armistice.

The move had placed service men in Korea in the same position as those now in Germany, although conditions were far different. Veterans organizations had described it as "complete, rank discrimination."

The two bills to be referred to the committee cover amendments to a number of separate acts. Among other things, they extend the deadline for applying for war services gratuities to the end of this year, and the deadline for applying for re-establishment credits to Jan. 1, 1960, or 15 years after discharge, whichever is the longer period.

At present, Second World War veterans can apply up until the end of this year or 10 years after discharge. At June 30 of last year, 187,000 veterans still had not applied for re-establishment credits valued at more than $37,000,000. Another proposed change will provide rehabilitation benefits to 22,000 members of the regular forces who left Canada for Korea before July 27, 1953, the date of the armistice.

Continued from page 1

Cape Breton Commons outside Canada and 1,214 in Canada.