Kennedy Optimistic As 2nd Year Begins

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Kennedy enters his second year in office with cautious optimism.

The 44-year-old Boston Irishman has come a long way on the road of experience from that blustery winter day in 1961 when he stood hatless before a Jan. 20 inauguration audience and called for American belt-tightening and sacrifices.

He has been gratified by the resurgence of economic recovery at home but not satisfied. He can draw satisfaction from some increases in North Atlantic military strength, but these were far short of the accomplishments he had in mind.

His first encounter with Soviet Premier Khrushchev was discouraging. Communism was unyielding. Even among Kennedy's own allies overseas, there was a jarring note of disharmony. Then came that crashing blow in Cuba where the Kennedy-approved rebel invasion was stopped on the beaches by Fidel Castro's forces.

CASTRO UNMOVED

Kennedy spoke at the year-end of success in exposing and isolating the "blight of communism" in Latin America but Castro was unmoved, declaring himself a Marxist and increasing his links with the Kremlin.

At home the American people moved at their own pace, instead of the faster one advocated by Kennedy. They showed increasing admiration for the youthful president who described his win over Republican Richard Nixon as victory by a "gnat's eyelash." But organized labor refused to abide by Kennedy's appeal for a truce in demands for higher wages. And the Republican opposition grew more belligerent in criticism of Kennedy's foreign policy.

HOWLAN

Mrs. Anthony Finnan was hostess on Tuesday evening, Jan. 9 to 16 members of the Howlan St. Anne's group for their monthly meeting. It was decided to give the 500 kneelers for the church. Reports from committee chairman were heard and new committees were appointed. Mrs. Henry Gallant is to be the February hostess. Following the meeting bingo and lunch were enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Arsenault and son, Bernard, motored to Charlottetown on Tuesday.

Opening lead — queen of hearts.

The more chances the declarer is given to make a mistake, the more mistakes he is bound to make. Here is a case where West made a fine defensive play that caused declarer to go down.

West led a heart. East took the king with the ace and returned a heart. West won with the ten and shifted to the jack of clubs.

Declarer took it in dummy and led a spade, East showing out. The king lost to the ace and West returned the ten of clubs. Declarer won the trick in dummy, and all he had to do was come safely to his hand to draw trumps and take the rest of the tricks.

He had to choose between ruffing a club at once or first playing the ace of diamonds and then ruffing a diamond.

South realized that if he led a club and it turned out that West had only two clubs originally, he would be defeated when he ruffed the club. He therefore led the ace of diamonds, intending to ruff a diamond next and thus make the hand if West followed suit.

But on the ace of diamonds West played the king! West knew South's problem and wanted to persuade him that the king was a singleton and that another diamond lead would subject him to an overruff.

So South, rightly or not, tried to get to his hand by ruffing a club. As a result, he went down one, West scoring a second trump trick.

South had a difficult guess once West falsecarded the king of diamonds. If West had made the normal play of a low diamond on the ace, it is likely that declarer would have ruffed a diamond and made the contract. But the falsecard created a problem that gave South a chance to go wrong.

It is interesting to note that West could afford to drop the king of diamonds, since South's hand at this point was known to consist only of trumps. The king of diamonds had no more value than a deuce.

Yesterday's Answer

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
