LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Recantation.

SIR.—When a prominent man changes his political opinions and withdraws his support from a political party, it is proper that he should inform the public of his reasons for so doing. It is well known in this Province that communally since Confederation and for years previously to that event, I have been a consistent and somewhat leading supporter of what is termed the Liberal or Reform party.

In justice to myself I beg to preface this recantation by stating that I am not a disappointed office seeker. I never sought office or political preferment of any kind; nor would I now except either. I have a good and profitable business of my own which requires all my attention.

With your permission I shall now, Mr. Editor, proceed briefly to state a few of the reasons which have constrained me to peremptorily secede from the Liberal party. First, the imbecility and hypocrisy displayed by the Liberals in reference to the Pacific Railway, commencing with the letter stealing, the Fort Francis Locke, and the Neelburg Hotel. The terms upon which they invited capitalists to build the road. The bogus syndicate got up with a view of thwarting the present syndicate, and finally their want of patriotism when the contract was let to Messrs. Stephens, McIntyre, and other Canadians, upon terms fully twenty per cent better than those offered by themselves; in slandering the Company, belittling the country, charging the Government with fraud and corruption, representing that the work over the easy part of the road was being built in a flimsy, unworkmanlike and scandalous manner; that the syndicate would draw their full mileage pay on this easy part of the job but would never attempt to complete the heavy work in the mountains—in fact they said that the whole revenue of Great Britain would be found inadequate to the task. What do we find now? That the road is virtually completed and we have no less a personage than the Hon. Alexander McKenzie, who made a personal inspection of the track, that the work is well and faithfully performed.

Taking the information from the leaders of my party, I regret to say that I have myself given currency to these scandals. Nothing would now give me greater satisfaction than to meet this syndicate in my office and apologize to them personally for the abuse that I have heaped upon them, and say to them that I believe them to be enterprising honest men that they have faithfully fulfilled their engagements, that they are a credit to any country, and that as a Canadian I am proud of them.

Again, in the matter of the trade policy of the country, the Liberals are undoubtedly in the wrong; and as financiers they are in fact mere bunglers. Compare the loans effected by the great mixer and muddler with those made by the Conservative party! Nothing appears to be too absurd for the Grits as a party cry. Since 1878 until the present year, the Liberal Conservatives have annually announced a surplus of receipts over expenditure. The cry was then, and the changes rung upon it in every conceivable way, that the country was going to ruin with surplus. Now, owing mainly to the Northwest Rebellion, (which I regret to say was urged on and encouraged by a portion of the Liberal press, as well as by leading members of that party) a deficit is shown in the public accounts. The tune is changed forthwith, and the country is to be ruined by deficits. I watched the course of the rebellion with more than ordinary solicitude. I had friends residing in the Northwest. I could not help. But no intelligent man could fail to commend the coolness, ability and dignity with which Sir John Macdonald treated that unfortunate uprising, surrounded as he was with so many difficulties, having to contend with traitors, murderers and savage debauchees in the Northwest, and traitors nearer home. He met the difficulty squarely and with the sympathies and support of all right-thinking men he put down the rebellion and hanged the leading traitor, Riel, than whom no man ever more justly merited his fate. This man who murdered Scott, incited and caused the murder of clergymen, and encouraged ignorant half-breeds and painted savages to commit rapine and murder upon the innocent and unprotected! Does the Liberal party commend this execution, this righteous act of justice? No! Basely hoping through it to attain place and power, they form an unholy alliance with a misguided section of the Conservative party to defeat the Government. Had Riel not been hanged, it is well known to prominent men of the Grit party that they would have been as loud in their denunciations against the Government for not doing the very thing that has been done. This is a well known fact, and of itself should be sufficient to alienate from them the support of every independent man. I would like, Mr. Editor, to deal with this question in a broad and statesmanlike manner, but I cannot resist taking a look nearer home; and I ask what has the Island to expect from the Liberal Party? A few years ago when the question of building a Branch Railway to Cape Traverse was before the House, the Hon. Alexander McKenzie, the then leader, opposed it, stating that "the Dominion had done very well for the Island." On another occasion, the present leader, the Hon. Edward Blake, was loud in his complaints of the Island costing more than it was worth. The smaller fry of the party miss no opportunity of expressing themselves in the same manner. On the other hand, the Conservative Party attend to our demands with ordinary courtesy, and I verily believe that whatever chance there may be of having our terms of Confederation fulfilled, and of obtaining steam communication winter and summer, it is by retaining in power Sir John A. Macdonald and his great Liberal-Conservative party.

Not cause any difference in the social or business relations between myself and those with whom I have hitherto acted, I beg to subscribe myself a supporter of the Liberal-Conservative party in Dominion politics.
Your obedient servant,
JOHN MCKENZIE,
Summerside, 24th March, 1886.

Notes from Souris.

The southerly wind of the past few days has filled Souris harbor with ice which had been previously as clear as it would be in mid-summer. The snow is fast leaving us, and the roads in this section are breaking up and will soon be unfit for travelling.

There are sounds of activity in the air. The lobster packers are busy preparing for the season's work, and the fishermen are overhauling their nets.

Capt. Thomas Kickham has a vessel on the stocks, and Capt. Joseph Campbell will soon have out a frame.

Our genial friend, Mr. Frederick Morrow, has sold his property on Lobster Point to Capt. Wm. McDonald, and will live in part of the Bay View Hotel until he builds next summer.

Messrs. Stewart Bros. have purchased a lot on Main Street and intend erecting a store upon it. It is also reported that our respected townsman, Mr. Geo. B. McEachern, intends building the coming summer.

Mr. Owen Connolly's large trade sale which was postponed last week, was resumed to-day. It is largely attended by the farmers and small traders, many of whom have obtained good bargains in special lines.

The Rev. Job Shenton lectured on Monday evening to a fair audience in the Methodist Church on "Wanted."—The most wanted thing in Souris is a building for a Post Office and Custom House. None would ever imagine that the Custom House was kept in the building used at present for that purpose. If it stands till summer I think it will be found to contain more cobwebs and black beetles than Pip saw in the room where Miss Havisham's wedding breakfast was laid. It has one advantage, however, and that is, every man over five feet six who enters is obliged to salute the officer on duty. Mr. Foley can, therefore, when seated at his desk, easily guess the height of his clients by the curvature of their spines. The Post Office is a little better than the Custom House, but certainly not what it should be in a village as large as Souris.

There has been a Debating Club and Literary Society in full operation here during the past winter, and last night the members decided by a large majority that the franchise should be extended to women. Politicians may, therefore, read the signs of the times, and govern themselves accordingly.
Yours truly,
HAMBLER,
Souris East, March 24th, 1886.

Killed in a Steam Saw Mill.

SUDDEN DEATH TO A MAN WHO WAS TO BE MARRIED IN A FORTNIGHT.
A sad accident took place in J. E. Taylor & Co.'s steam saw mill, Wittenburg, Lower Stewiacke, N. S., on Friday afternoon, which resulted fatally. Daniel Mitchell, aged about 40, belonging to Bridgewater, was engaged at the circular saw, passing through a maple stick about twelve feet long. It caught on the back of the saw, was whizzed back with great force and struck Mitchell a violent blow in the abdomen. He was removed to his boarding house, where Dr. Morris was immediately in attendance. But he became worse, suffered great agony on Saturday, and Dr. McLean was summoned. He arrived just as the poor fellow died. Mitchell had been working at and for the mill since the first of the year. He was an industrious, sober man and highly respected, but said very little about himself. However, it was found out that he was to be married to a Bridgewater lady in about two weeks, and a despatch was sent her saying Mitchell had been injured. She wired back that she would immediately come on to nurse him. A subsequent despatch was sent saying he was dead. All arrangements had been made for the funeral, and a number of persons assembled. But she telegraphed that she would come on, and out of respect to her the funeral was postponed till her arrival.
