ELLEN'S DIARY

Pleasant Night Is Edged With Faint Touch Of Frost

"James, Ja-me!" we called merrily, but the sound of my voice only seemed to wake the room as flower buds in the rooms of this old house. Now where can he be we wondered. Perhaps he was already gone down some lane of dream-land, where we suspect, he is at lovely sunset and perfume fields neatly fenced with pasturing animals, sleek and contentedly munching. I think, a remembered mare, a white horse, a black and white one, or maybe he was driving off into the moonlight, after his horse, a brown and white one, and a shining first buggy, a brown haired lad, to some high adventure, before he was seen again, and best cap and jacket are missing. As too is the 11 lb. brick from the chimney, and a mouse excursion, it is likely, with the younger farmer, from the house across the street, off on some quest of the farming.

The night is pleasant. Edged with an invigorating frost, it is calm and still. There was a silver sheen on the stream, and water was reflected.

MARY HAWORTH

'Student 'In Trouble' Asks About Personal Conflicts

Dear Mary Haworth: I am a college student "in trouble". The girl whom I have been dating for three months asks me to have a baby. We are very compatible and I love her very much. But ever since I was a little boy I have wanted more than anything to be a doctor. I understand this and urge me not to wreck my life by giving in to her demands. I don't know what to do.

Naturally I am very confused. Although I love her very much I can't help thinking of all the good I might do as a doctor. I would like to be a doctor, but the fact that Jean really accepts the burden of the child makes me feel that I am really working towards my career goal.

What do you advise me to do? I am really well with doubts about this course of action. What shall I do? This is the greatest good?—B.D.

PRESENTATION IS MADE

Members teenagers stage weekly "rally" parties.

Possibly you might qualify as a neighborhood house staff and in the time you have to offer to explore the idea, ask a local Family Service Agency counsellor for information on where to apply.

Another suggestion: the board of managers of the materials home for colored girls in your town is promoting an accredited tutoring program for girls in school age (with the help of volunteer teachers). To keep their program from withdrawing from school, here also are the provisions for sketching, painting, hearing good music and the like. Plus, in at least one such neighborhood house, a club room of sizeable proportions.
