Changes Seen in Making For Chinese Leadership

By ADAM KELLETT-LONG PEKING (Reuters) — A new reeducation campaign apparently under way in China's 17,000,000 Communist party members may lead to a large-scale replacement of senior party functionaries in the near future, political observers here say.

A major editorial in the main party newspaper Tuesday called for "re-education of functionaries and re-adjustment in revolutionary ranks."

The editorial was splashed over the front pages of all other Chinese newspapers Tuesday and was regularly broadcast by Peking radio.

The aging Chinese leaders—the 19-man policy-making polit-buro now has an average age of about 60 years—have made known for some time that their main concern is to educate new generations of leaders who will follow their policy of austerity and hard work for several decades. They see their policy as a growing soft and "bourgeois" advance to a powerful, industrialized nation.

Mao Tse-tung, 70-year-old party chairman, has personally led his successors against following the footsteps of the Soviet Communist party which he sees as growing soft and "bourgeois" under Premier Khrushchev's "revisionist leadership."

Mao also has repeatedly drawn attention to the orphrepsy of the late U.S. secretary of state, John Foster Dulles, that the third or fourth generation of Chinese leaders would be more amenable to dealings with the West, which would mean "betray the revolution" in Chinese Communist eyes.

The most important, certainly the most publicized, internal political event here so far this year was the ninth congress of the Communist Youth League in June. It was attended by nearly all the top party leaders.

"Therefore the broadening and deepening of the revolutionary call for the re-education of functionaries and the readjustment in revolutionary ranks, which we cannot rest content with the fact that the nucleus of party leadership at all levels was good in the past nor that it is good at present."

There has been speculation among diplomatic analysts here that the forthcoming session of the new National People's Congress (parliament) and the possibility of a new and long overdue Communist party congress could be the occasion for a PC Member critical of New Gov's Dept.

OTTAWA (CP) — Alfred D. Hales, Conservative MP for Wellington South, said in the Commons here that the new department of industry is responsible for costly duplication and inefficiency.

The department, established nearly a year ago by the Liberal government, was overlapping functions of the trade and defence production department.

For instance, all three departments had sections for chemical and defence production, duplicating functions of the trade and defence production department.

Both had declined somewhat but the decline was greater in the electrical industry than in the shipbuilding industry.

to the proposition of doing the best he can. At trick one he is ready to make a great deal about the adverse hands because a sure West shows up with a nine-card suit.

He ruffs the spade at trick two with the ace of hearts and leads another heart. East follows with the king. South finesesses the nine, the finesse being clearly justified by West's exceptional opening bid.

South then draws two more rounds of trumps and cashes for all the king of spades to bring about this position:
