THO. L. CHAFFELLE, Esq., is removing to the handsome and commodious store in Monaghan's building, Queen Street, next to M. McDonald's.

PENNSYLVANIA has a minister by the name of Hornblower, and although his congregation have offered to pay the expense of a change of name, he insists that the old one is all right.

The Directors of the Citizen's Skating Rink will hold a grand Fancy Dress Carnival, on the 31st inst., or on the 1st of February. We learn that it will be the most successful carnival ever held in the city. At the present time there are thirty ladies and as many gentlemen who have offered to take part.

How to get to Cape Traverse? That's the first question. As it is in this weather better to drive twelve miles than thirty miles, it is better to go by rail to County Line, and cross the country from that point. The Messrs. Hughes, of County Line, keep good teams, and make the drive over as fast and as comfortable as it can be in the biting frost, and over the crooked winter roads.

MR. PRESCOTT'S class of Telegraphy is now in full blast. A large number of our young men are availing themselves of the chance thus afforded to learn this important branch of business. They are so far succeeding well. Mr. Prescott is proving himself to be an excellent tutor, and he is ably assisted by Mr. A. E. Morrison. There are yet five vacancies in the class. Thus a few more of our young men are afforded an opportunity to learn the electric art.

"Why do you remind me of the lamp?" inquired the young and pretty Haligonian, as the long hand was hastening to overtake the short one at the most northern extremity of the clock. "Because I'm pretty bright!" he cried, modestly hanging his head. "Oh, dear, no," was the decisive reply. "Well, then, I give it up." "Because," she answered softly, "it's quite time to turn you out." He saved her the trouble instantly.

An accident, fortunately unattended by fatal results, occurred on the Windsor and Annapolis Railway on Saturday night. Shortly after the train from Annapolis had passed Mount Ure station it jumped the track owing to misplaced rail. After leaving the track it ran about fifty feet, when the engine toppled over. There were some twenty passengers on board, all of whom were badly knocked about. Father Driscoll who had just recovered from a serious illness was injured in the chest; a brakeman was struck on the head and remained insensible until brought out from the bottom of the second class car, and some of the lady passengers were slightly burned. All the cars were more or less wrecked.

Bank Meeting.

At the adjourned meeting of the Creditors the following suggested compromise was submitted by the committee, appointed at the previous meeting, for the consideration of the meeting:

- 1. That in addition to the payment of their double liability upon their shares, the directors withdraw all claims to dividends upon the $48,666 paid by them on their guarantee to the Union Bank of London, so that this $48,666 be paid absolutely to the Bank.
2. That the Directors refund the amount of the commissions received by them on the guarantees given by them while Directors, amounting to about $3,000, more or less.
3. That the Directors provide for the refunding or repayment of the Bank of P. E. Island by the Bank of Montreal of the sum of $1,700, paid the latter Bank since the suspension of the Bank of P. E. Island.

This compromise was intelligently discussed by many creditors present, and upon a vote being taken, creditors representing $249,636, voted in favor of its acceptance; the eight creditors representing only 23,050.23

The liquidators, in our opinion, with this large vote should not delay a settlement of this much discussed matter. These terms appear to us reasonable. It is now the interests of all parties that the business of the liquidators to wind up as speedily as possible. With this an unsettled liability on the part of the Directors, this cannot be done, and we think creditors, generally, will hesitate before launching themselves in endless litigation, with not much prospect of enforcing payment against men whose present circumstances afford no guarantee of their ability to pay.—Com.

Although Mr. Fawcett, the Postmaster General of England, is close upon fifty years of age, his parents are still alive, and celebrated their golden wedding at his house a few days ago. At dinner on that occasion part of the fare consisted of a fine salmon caught by their blind son. The old lady and gentleman sat down to whist afterwards without the aid of spectacles; and when one of the company produced a reprint of an old number of the Times containing an account of the battle of Waterloo, old Mr. Fawcett related how he was in the "Ma ket" place at Salisbury when the London coach arrived bringing the glorious news, and how he was hoisted on top of the coach to read aloud to the crowd the famous despatch of Wellington giving details of his great achievement.
