HAPPENINGS

Mr. David Andrew, of the firm of Barrow, Nicollet and Co., Halifax, arrived Thursday to spend the festive season with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Blois Andrew.

Mr. Wayne Crockett, Belvedere Avenue, left yesterday by plane for Dartmouth, N.S., where he will spend the holidays, the guest of Dr. and Mrs. A.E.C. MacRae and family, and Mr. and Mrs. H.E. Power, also of Dartmouth.

Mrs. Leo Bradley received a cablegram on Thursday from her son-in-law, Peter MacLeod, Queensland, Australia, sending Yuletide greetings and announcing the arrival of a son of Christmas Eve.

Mrs. Lewis Moase, New Annan has returned to her home after spending the past month visiting friends in Hartford, Conn., and Boston, Mass.

Mr. David McQuarrie, Brewer, Maine, spent the week-end visiting his sister, Mrs. Lewis Moase, New Annan, and friends in Charlottetown.

Mrs. Alfred MacLeod, Great George Street, was pleasantly remembered last Tuesday evening by Miss Suzanne MacKinnon, leader of the Girl Guides at Zion Church, who called with a number of the Guides and entertained Mrs. MacLeod by singing Christmas carols. The group presented her with a lovely Christmas gift.

The regular meeting of the Ladies Social Club of the Church of Christ was held at the home of Mrs. Pearl Methersall, Dec. 17.

The Devotional leader for the evening, Mrs. MacKay, gave a timely message entitled "The Heart of Christmas" and then recited the touching poem "Little Joe's Christmas".

Several business matters were discussed and a "Welcome Home" was extended to Mrs. Beecher Best. Roll call was answered by 19 members and three visitors. A delicious lunch was served by the hostess and the lunch committee.

Mrs. George Vickerson, Charlottetown, and Mrs. Morris Casley, Kelvin, left Saturday morning for Montreal, enroute to the West Indies. In Montreal they will visit with Mr. Vickerson's daughter, Mrs. L.A. Hewitt, Mr. Hewitt and family. During their stay in Trinidad they will visit with Mrs. Vickerson's sister, Mrs. R.L. Getty and Mrs. Getty.

A very impressive service was put on by the Young People's Society of St. John's Presbyterian church on Sunday evening, Dec. 6.

The call to worship was given by Donald MacKay who conducted the service followed by scripture reading by Linda Bernard.

Prayer was offered by David Morrison and a solo by Joyce Murray. The superintendent of the Sunday school, George P. MacLeod, then presented twenty-one pins to the various classes for perfect attendance and certificates to Marlene Brown, Joyce Murray, Jean MacKay and Fay Henderson; also to Mrs. K.R. MacKay and Mrs. Ellis Burgoyne. The offering was taken with offertory prayer given by Isobel Campbell.

Miss Ann MacLeod gave a talk basing our thoughts on "Let us be in church on Sunday if we want true rest," followed by talk by Miss Ruth MacEwen taking as her subject The Ten Commandments.

Petite French Star Helped By Poor Following Accident

By BERNARD GAVZER

NEW YORK (AP) — Ginette Marguerite Auger is a petite Frenchwoman with an extraordinary poise. There are relatively few people who know her as Miss Auger, but as Genevieve she is immediately familiar as the one-time singing owner of a small Parisian restaurant and for the last three years a regular on the Jack Paar television show.

Last September it seemed her rising career might suddenly end. She was the star of a touring company of Can Can. One night in Toronto the actor carrying her to her dressing room because she was unable to manoeuvre in her tight sheath dress, tripped and fell on her. Her right leg broken in three places, there was the immediate gloomy certainty that plans for a Broadway musical would have to be abandoned; that night club work and personal appearances were out; that she would have to disappear from television. Doctors said she would be out of action six months.

With her leg encased in a plaster cast from toe to thigh, Genevieve is far from depressed. She credits Paar with helping her frame of mind.

"Jacques, he is my very best friend in the whole world," she says. "He call me after the accident and he say to me, 'Darling, we don't care if you have one leg or two legs or no legs, we love you and need you.' Imagine that, he does not care if I am able only to sit, he promises me I can be with him on the show. This is very good for me."

MOBILITY LIMITED
With her mobility limited, she spends a lot of time sitting, and this leads to considerable introversion.

"While I cannot say this was good," she says, pointing to her leg, "it has been good for me because I have the excellent occasion to realize I was a woman and not the machine. When this happen, I was busy, busy, busy, always here or there, like the machine, no? I learn now that in the future I will take the time to live a little bit. I will travel for my own pleasure and I will spend more time with the people I love."

Enforced leisure also gives her time to polish her English. Paar frequently had good-natured fun with her on his show because of her mispronunciations. She is convinced that her French accent is slowly disappearing, although she keeps running into trouble with

ORWELL COVE W.I.
Mrs. Walter MacLeod was hostess to the Orwell Cove Women's Institute, Dec. 9.

After the opening exercises, roll call was answered by an exchange of Christmas gifts and a collection for the two orphans.

The bill for the painting of the outside of the school house was presented and voted to be paid. A $5.00 donation was voted for the TB League and a $1.00 membership fee to the C.A.C.

words spelled the same in English and French. She does needlepoint work as she talks, comments, "I like very much this needlepoint."

MOTHERS STRAYS
When she is able to get away from her attractive three-room penthouse apartment in Manhattan, she goes off to the countryside where she invariably becomes involved with animals. She has a French poodle upon which she lavishes attention, but she is ready to mother any homeless cat or dog. Once, she inherited a litter of kittens and went on a door-knocking tour to get them homes "but I had no luck because it is very difficult to give cats away in the country."

Instead, she mentioned her problem on Paar's show and was delighted by people who volunteered their homes. Then she went about investigating the people to make sure they could provide proper care.

She can give a more graphic example of the power of the Paar show from her standpoint.

"When I first come on the show three years ago I received $600 a week for three shows a night in the night clubs. One year later, for just one show a night, I receive $6,900."

MAKING HEADWAY
Making so much money sometimes mystifies her. But to Genevieve, the best proof that she is making headway is in recognizing a change that has come over her in her buying habits.

"In France, when a woman buys a dress, no matter how rich she is, she feels the material to see how good it is for she is figuring to wear this dress two, three years. Now, I buy a dress so quick as the secretaries for Jack Paar, they are so smart and chic looking. Two, three months and they give the dress away. It's only here people do such things. It's wonderful."

HOUSEHOLD HINT
Sea shells make useful ashtrays and ornaments for the home. When clean and dry, spray them with shellac from an aerosol can to preserve them.

Before serving home-canned fruits and vegetables, check them to make sure the liquid is clear. Cloudy liquid often indicates spoilage, which can cause violent illness.

Save time when shopping for groceries by picking your time carefully, by different neighborhoods, the busy hours vary, so experiment with your store until you know when it's least apt to be busy and do your shopping then.

MacLaren-Dunfield Ceremony Solemnized At Petitcodiac

A pretty wedding was solemnized recently in the United Baptist Church, Petitcodiac, N.B., when Rev. Carl Bainbridge united in marriage, in a double ring ceremony, Marjorie Ethel, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Dunfield, Petitcodiac, N.B., and Earl Meredith, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Simeon MacLaren, St. Peter's Bay, P.E.I.

Nuptial music was played by Avard Newcombe. Miss Georgia MacLaren, sister of the groom, was the guest soloist.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attended by Mrs. Reece Dunfield, as matron of honor. The bride wore a ballerina length gown of maroon blue velvet, pink feather hat and gloves of corresponding colour. Her bouquet was of pink carnations and forget-me-nots.

Eugene MacLaren, brother of the groom, was the best man. The ushers were Kenneth and Reece Dunfield, brothers of the bride.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride for about forty guests.

George Myles poured. Miss Doris MacLaren served the bride's table and friends of the bride served the guests. The guest book was circulated by Mrs. Mabel Durkee. After a brief honeymoon spent at interesting points in the Maritimes, the bride and groom have since taken up residence in Moncton.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was guest of honour at several social functions, where she received many useful gifts.

Out of town guests at the wedding were from Springhill, N.S., St. Peter's Bay, P.E.I. Moncton, N.B. and Fredericton, N.B.

MARY HAWORTH

Wife Sides With Children Rather Than With Husband

Dear Mary Haworth: For the past three or four years I have been a ranting, raving man, at odds with my family over things that come up, which I disapprove. But my family doesn't seem to care about correcting their faults. I am expected to give in all the time.

I have been married over 20 years and have three children, the youngest a senior in school. Now, to climax a series of conflicts, my daughter, 18, is going to marry a boy of another faith. I have done all in my power to make her realize that mixed marriage is no good, especially when religion will be an issue in the children's rearing.

I have been sending her to school and now she has left home and renounced her education—which I believe it is my duty to give her. I have always loved my wife and children and they've always come first. But I know I don't have their love and respect.

It's possible I need outside advice, but I wouldn't know where to go. My wife has been a wonderful mother all these years and I've never been unfaithful to her; but she sees the children's views and none of mine. Please tell me what to do. S.L.

VERSION OF CANUTE?

Dear S.L.: Plainly you are a pretty shoo-pp man since your daughter left home, or you would not be on our knees (figuratively), asking guidance, and suffering from a cloudy sense of being all wrong, though meaning well.

As I get the pitch, you are an old-style heavy parent, who, like King Canute, has tried to command the waves on the shore to stand still.

Well, you just can't enforce that much authority over nature. Your children are growing up and you can't stop it, much as you might wish to turn back the clock, and start again, to try to get better acquainted with them, before they go.

CLASSIC CRISIS
You are having great difficulty coming to terms with the fact that hardy, healthy young people pass from their parents' control in time. The beginning of that crisis in family relations makes itself felt in the children's latter teens, as they press irresistibly to find their place in the world outside, amongst new interests shared with other persons newly important to them, though scarcely known by the parents perhaps.

I figure that's why you've been on the war path at home, the last three or four years, "over things that came up" of which you disapprove. Your narrative squares with that deduction. You have been married over 20 years you say; and the youngest child is a senior in high school (the 18-year-old engaged girl, I take it). No doubt the two older children were wanting more freedom, appropriate to their age, than you were willing to concede, when the fight began.

I can imagine that their mother has made sense in siding with them, and that she was trying to deliver them whole, as it were, into adult society; rather than let you grind them down into broken, submissive, more or less puppet characters. Thus the family rift developed and widened, as you found fault with their healthy initiative, instead of giving it judicious assistance.

DESIRE FOR HELP

It is unfortunate that you've forfeited influence with your daughter and that she seems headed for a problem marriage, when too young for marriage in any case. The one bad result is linked to the other, no doubt; so don't blame her so much as yourself, if she plunges into difficulties beyond her depth.

I am glad you hint for help in getting your bearings. It suggests there is hope that you may wake up, cast off your mistaken views, and rebuild companionship with your wife, at least. To track down a suitable counselling service, inquire of the Family Service Unit (affiliated with the Travelers Aid) in the town through which you write. Or ask the director of the (City) Child Guidance Center for steering information. M.H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of this newspaper.

HONORED ON BIRTHDAY

Mrs. John N. MacDonald of Whim Road, who last week was honored with a surprise dinner party on the occasion of her 79th birthday.

The party was held at the home of her nephew, W.D. Fraser. Thirty-five guests were present, and although Mrs. MacDonald was completely taken by surprise, she very graciously thanked everyone for a most exciting day.

Mrs. MacDonald was born in Lower Montague, but moved to Whim Road at the time of her marriage and has since resided in that community. She is active in every way and takes part in community life.

St. Andrew's WMS Packs Box For Port Worker At Halifax

MONTAGUE — The December meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Montague, was held at the home of Mrs. W. A. Johnstone with 18 members present.

The devotional leader, Mrs. William MacEachern, opened the meeting with the call to worship, followed by prayer. The scripture lesson was read in unison, and the exposition on the theme "Emmanuel-God With Us," was read by the leader. A circle of prayer by the members closed with special prayer for two missionaries, Miss Mary Nichol of the Bhil Mission, India, and Miss Anna MacDonald, in British Guiana, by Mrs. Harry Miller and Mrs. Byron Stewart.

During the mission study, interesting papers were read by Mrs. Deane Blue and Mrs. Gavin Hicken and Mrs. A.D. MacLure. The business period was conducted by the president, Mrs. A. F. MacKenzie. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. Marion Hume and the financial report was presented by Mrs. H. E. Nelson.

A number of visits to sick and shut-ins were reported. Each member gave a gift towards the box which is to be forwarded to the port worker at Halifax, and a large assortment of useful articles were received.

At the close of the meeting, lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. MacEachern and Miss Catherine Currie.

Sea Food Recipes Hail Back To Days Of Sailing Ships

"At Mystic, Connecticut, I have read," observed the Chef, "that merchant ships built in the 19th century sailed from the ports of New England to the West Indies, Zanzibar, to India and to the farthest port of the rich East. 'What for?' In quest of spices!"

TOOK TWO YEARS
"These voyages took two years before the ships brought home nutmeg, ginger, cloves, cinnamon and—most precious of all—black pepper. Think of sailing two years to get a commodity now on sale in every grocery!"

The Marine Museum in Mystic is filled with romantic relics of the "Age of Sail," so it sparked the theme of the American Spice Trade Association's New England Shore dinner recently served to members of the Association, food editors and guests at the Hotel Astor in New York City.

Measurements are level; recipes for 6

New England Clam Bisque: Melt 1/2 c. butter or margarine in saucepan. Remove from heat; blend in 3 tsp. flour.

Stir in 1 2/3 c. whole milk and 2-3 c. light cream or undiluted evaporated milk. Cook-stir until medium-thick. Do not boil.

Remove necks from 1 pt. fresh clams. Put through coarse blade of food chopper. Then cook remaining clams below boiling point in their own juice 5 min. or until tender.

Just before serving add to sauce. Stir in 1/4 tsp. salt, 1 tsp. onion salt, 1/4 tsp. ground nutmeg, 1/4 tsp. ground white pepper and 1-16 tsp. garlic salt.

If bisque thickens while standing, thin as desired with a little hot water.

Garnish with parsley flakes. Pass pilot or New England "common crackers."

Baked Scallops Hors d'Oeuvre: Purchase 1 lb. bay scallops. Arrange 4 each in 6 buttered sea shells. Dust with a little salt.

Combine 1/2 tsp. dried parsley flakes, 1/2 tsp. instant minced onion, 1-16 tsp. each ground black pepper and garlic powder, 1 tsp. fresh lemon juice and 1/4 c. butter or margarine. Mix with fork until fluffy.

Place 2 tsp. over each serving. Bake 5 min. or until tender in mod. oven, 375 degrees F.

Garnish with fresh lemon slices.

CHEF'S TURKEY HASH
This appetizing dish is not made like the fried American corned beef hash, ah no! It is what is known among chefs as a moist hash.

For 6 persons, enough odds-ends of turkey are chopped, not very fine, to make 3 c. Add 1 1/4 c. half-and-half milk and cream. Simmer-heat 1-3 c. evaporated milk.

Add 1 tsp. salt and 1/4 tsp. white pepper. Stir in 1 tsp. flour blended with 1/4 tsp. butter and 1 tsp. milk. Simmer 3 min.

Transfer to low baking dish. Lightly cover with grated Parmesan or Swiss cheese; brown under broiler. Serve with triangles of hot buttered toast.

This chef often arranges heated asparagus tips like the spokes of a wheel atop the turkey hash after baking, with a ripe olive in the center.
