SEVERAL WEATHER SIGNS.

Hoar frost is a sign of rain.

Cold autumn, a short winter.

If rats and mice be restless, rain.

Trees grow dark before a storm.

It will surely rain if moles cast up hills.

The more snow the healthier the season.

Bearded frost is a forerunner of snow.

A clear autumn brings a windy winter.

Expect fair weather from one night's ice.

A green Christmas makes a white Easter.

A rain in February indicates a frost in May.

Rain is frequently augured by bearded frost.

If it rains after twelve at noon it will rain next day.

If it rains before sunrise expect a fair afternoon.

A green Christmas makes a full churchyard.

Three white frosts will bring a storm every time.

Rain long foretold, long past; short notice, soon past.

If gnats are plentiful in spring expect a fine autumn.

A rainbow in the morning is the shepherd's warning.

When wrens are seen in winter expect a fine autumn.

If October is warm the following February will be cold.

Much rain in October indicates much wind in December.

If a cock crows more than usual and earlier expect rain.

If it rains when the sun shines it will rain the next day.

Nests of hornets hung near the ground mean cold weather.

When the rain comes from the west it will not continue long.

If cats clean their bodies and wash their faces expect rain.

Early frosts are usually followed by a long, hard winter.

Fluttering bats and flying beetles forecast fine weather.

Heavy white frost is a sign that warmer weather is coming.

Black frost is a forerunner of a spell of dry, cold weather.

Look out for cold weather if the woodpecker disappears in the fall.

If birds in the autumn grow tame the winter will be too cold for game.

Expect cold and hard times if squirrels lay in great supplies of nuts.

When wild ducks fly to the south it is a sign that winter is coming.

Scarcity of squirrels in autumn indicates the approach of a cold winter.

The first three days in January indicate that of the coming three months.

No falling stars on a bright evening mean a continuance of bright weather.

If ice will bear a man before Christmas it will not bear a mouse afterward.

Look out for rain if sea birds fly toward land and land birds fly toward sea.

FOUND IN NATURE.

The lightest known wood is that of the anona palustris of Brazil, which is much lighter than cork. The heaviest is the iron bark of Australia, which weighs nearly 100 pounds to the cubic foot.

The Niagara River just under the Suspension Bridge is said to be the deepest running river in the world.

The timber wealth of the United States gives a yearly product of over $1,000,000,000, or more than twice the value of the output of the mines.

Vesuvius, the famous Italian volcano, is 3,932 feet high.

The leaf of the cocoanut tree is nearly 30 feet long. A single leaf of the parasol magnolia of Ceylon affords shelter for from 15 to 20 persons.

The synapta, a water insect, is provided with an anchor the exact shape of those used by ships. By means of it the insect can hold itself in any position it desires.

The River Tinto in Spain possesses extraordinary qualities. It hardens and petrifies the sand of its bed and if a stone falls in the stream upon another in a few months the two will be solidified together.

AMUSEMENTS OF KINGS.

Louis XVI. made locks.

Napoleon III. wrote a life of Cæsar that ranks very high.

Richelieu, who was a king in all but name, took to playwriting.

Frederick the Great played the flute and composed music and did both well.

The present emperor of Austria is above all else an ardent sportsman and has few indoor amusements.

Louis III. took to amateur barbering, and the courtiers had to suffer in consequence.

Peter the Great, carpenter, shipwright and what more no one knows, took to amateur dentistry to amuse himself.

The present czar cultivates his tenor voice when he has time; his father played the trombone and his great-grandfather whistled.

—The Philadelphia Ledger says the Canadian Government will send agents to Washington within a week to consult with the Republican leaders on the question of reciprocity. Under ordinary circumstances as the Montreal Gazette remarks, it would be surprising to receive such information about a Canadian government's intentions from a foreign paper; but under Mr. Laurier it is regular. He chose another United States journal, the Chicago Record, as a vehicle for conveying to the Canadian people his tariff intentions; and he may as well speak to us of his reciprocity views through a Philadelphia organ.

What is Cheapness?

Ceapness is not peculiar to prices. Goods are often cheaper than the prices; particurlaly is this true when the purchaser feels that the goods are bought with a certain amount of uncertainty and unreliability We have no cheap goods although no one disputes the cheapness os our prices.

A TALE OF HEROISM.

Two Miners Perish While Attempting to Rescue Their Companions.

Details of the burning to death of thirteen men in the Santa Gertrudes mine at Pacucho, state of Hidalgo, Mexico, on December 31, have been received at San Diego, Cal. The night shift was about to go off duty and a number of the men had already reached the cage when a terrific explosion occurred in one of the drifts Several men who were between the fire and the cage ran up and others could be heard shouting for help. Ned Richards, an Englishman, called two companions to his assistance and ran back, braving the smoke and flames, and saved a Mexican who was fainting. They dragged him to the cage, and then a number of others running up, it was thought all were accounted for, and the men all went to the top. The roaring of the fire could be heard in the lower levels, and a great volume of smoke began to fill the shaft. The foreman procured his book and checked off the names of the men. All answered to their names except eleven. Then, in face of the danger, Richards offered to be one to go below and get the missing men. The Mexicans volunteered to accompany him. They jumped into the cage and were lowered down. Two of them went to their death—Richards and an unknown Mexican.

The four men when they reached the level where the fire was raging got out and made a quick search for the missing men, but the fire, feeding on gas and released by the explosion, filled the empty spaces and forced the men back to the cage. Richards made a gallant attempt to penetrate into one of the drifts, and was overcome by gas and smoke. He failed to return and the unknown Mexican went after him. He found the Englishman unconscious and dragged him to the cage, but was in turn overcome. The others gave the signal and were hoisted up. Richards and the Mexican died within a few minutes after being raised to the surface.

NEWS NOTES

Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, first lord of the treasury and government leader in the house of commons, addressed his constituents at Manchester a few nights ago and in the course of his remarks strongly denied that Ireland was overtaxed. Ireland's only hope of solvency and prosperity was to maintain partnership with Great Britain.

Gen. Inclan, while reconnoitering in the Lechuga hills, Cuba, dispersed a rebel party, killing fourteen. The troops destroyed 300 huts and plantations. Captain-General Weyler will entrust the military operations in the province of Pinar Del Rio to another commander. He himself will direct operations against the rebels in the Provinces of Havana and Matanzas. Gen. Weyler has given permission to sugar planters to resume work on their estates.

Delaware is threatened with two Legislatures, certain Republicans with a grievance against the election returns having organized a separate House of Representatives. New Jersey and Louisiana have in the past had a like affliction, and in the case of the latter state civil war was barely averted. In Delaware's case nothing very serious is likely to result, however. Only one Senate has been organized. It is in control of the Democrats, and will recognize the chamber that its friends control. The other will work its oratory without pay.

The Three Days of Grace.

"Bankers and business men generally," said the cashier of a Dearborn-street bank to a Chicago Times-Herald reporter, "will be glad when all the states enact legislation disposing of the survival of medieval business methods known as 'days of grace.' They have been abolished for some time in California, Oregon, Vermont, Wisconsin and recently New York has passed a similar law. Days of grace originated in times when means of communication were difficult and uncertain, and the latitude allowed to the debtor was reasonable; but in these days they are a nuisance, as they impose on those holding other people's paper the necessity of keeping in mind in what State the expression 'thirty days' means 'thirty-three.'"

THE MILLIONAIRES.

THE THING THE POSSESSOR OF MILLIONS CAN DO TO BE UNKNOWN.

The London Spectator's List of Obscure Millionaires and Some Pertinent Remarks for Consideration by All Those Who Haste to be Rich.

The London Spectator once published a list of those it called "obscure millionaires," who had died within the previous 10 years. The list was a rather long one. It sets one considering. The age is a shopkeeping age, it is true. It is apt, we say, to value men according to their property. Great wealth gives great consideration, and yet, notwithstanding the exaggerated importance of money and money getting, it appears that wealth in the largest measure redeems no man from obscurity; that money, in itself, by its mere possession, confers no distinction which even this age values. It's use, and not its possession, is all that can make it a matter of distinction. In our own country, even more than in Europe, wealth exaggerates its own consequence. It is natural that it should, for here, more than there, it is a personal matter. The American millionaire has "made," as he says, his own millions. They represent his own shrewdness, industry, tact, perseverance, or "good luck." He is fond, it may be, of reminding us all that it is so. He is a "self-made man," and recurs to the time when he was a barefoot boy, or a penniless youth, with some pride, as a proof of how bright a man he is in having changed by his own powers the early poverty for the present wealth. He feels in his heart he has done a noble work, and that he deserves the commendation of mankind for doing it. He is liable to disappointment, as we all know, and it is somewhat strange that, shrewd as he is in money matters, he is so blind in others. For the rest of the world is very busy and has little time to trouble itself about his success or his failure. Neither can other people see on exactly what grounds a man can claim its applause only for having taken good care of his own interests. The consideration given to him for his money is given only to his face by those who expect to get something by it. The community would look complacently upon the matter if a sudden revulsion should set him to sweeping the streets to-morrow, would consider him indeed quite as important in the last occupation as in that of raking his heaps higher. In other words, it is the wealth itself that is important, if there is any importance in the case. The man who owns it may be very unimportant; in fact, if he is content to be merely its owner, is sure to be so. The only way to create distinction with wealth is by its use. What a man does with what he has determines the question of his obscurity. The world is very just, and forgets all but its benefactors. The millionaire who uses his millions for his own benefit is like the officeholder who uses his office for his own benefit, or the man of genius who exhausts his genius for his own selfish ends, or indeed like any man who, endowed with a trust, uses the trust for his own exclusive use and behoof. Men possessed of other trusts are not as apt to make this mistake as the men possessed of money. Genius, intellectual power, high spiritual gifts, we are all loud to claim are conferred for the good of humanity. We stand ready to condemn relentlessly the men who endowed with such gifts use them mainly for their own advantage. But great wealth, especially if a man has himself won it, is less apt to be considered a trust. The greed for it is great. It is often sought not for itself, but for the supposed distinction it confers. When the young man of energy and ambition looks forward to the attainment of it as the end of his endeavors, he is not led by and miserly desire for money in itself, He has rather the noble desire of winning distinction and importance by its possession. It is a means and not an end. Pity be should in the years of his pursuit so often change his notion. For his first opinion is right. Wealth can confer distinction. It can bring honor and high consideration. It can make a man's memory fragrant for centuries. But to do all this it must be used. There are millionaires in our own country who will neither be remembered nor cared for 30 days after their costly funerals. Their passages from among living men will leave no void, for the stocks and bonds and shares which alone gave them their consequence remain. Mankind has lost nothing, misses nothing. There are others who will be missed in a thousand places and by thousands of hearts, for though the millions remain, the heart that made the missions a blessing is gone. The man in this case is lost to us, and he was more than his money. There are again some few who so dispose of their thousands that their names and memories are linked for years, for centuries, to the monuments of beneficence they leave behind them, famous the land over not for their wealth, but for the good deeds their wealth was used for. The millionaire is nothing, his importance nothing, his consequence nothing. We want to know what he does with his millions before we care to remember his name. As a millionaire merely, he is like the great poet who never writes, the great orator who has never made a speech, the great inventor who has never invented anything. He had grand opportunities. He could have done so much with his money. He did nothing. He "died worth so many millions." That is all. We stand by his grave, and think, "what a fool he was!" Another "obscure millionaire."

A Queer Expression.

Last summer we heard on the Maine coast the following phrase: "Come, now, don't peeve!" meaning, "Don't be peevish," or "Don't fret." Has any reader in New Hampshire or Vermont heard this verb in familiar use? We do not find it in the English dialect dictionaries that are at hand, nor is it in the pamphlets of the American dialect society. Ray says "peevish" in the north country dialect means "witty, subtle," and in certain English countries "peevish" means "foolish, trifling."—Boston Journal.

China Closets.

China closets in the dining room are no longer confined to corner cupboards. They are frequently built in the wall, and have wide doors with tiny leaded panes ...

— Mistakes are not to be worried over when they are once made. Mistakes already committed are to be recognized, so as to be repaired if possible, and their repetition avoided; but lamentation over them is worse than useless, it only makes matters worse by crippling energy for future success. It has been truly said, "He is not the best general who makes the fewest false steps. He is the best who wins the most splendid victories by the retrieval of mistakes." The practical question in view of a manifest mistake is not "How could I have done that?" but "What can I now do to correct that mistake, or to make it tell to advantage?"

That Tired Feel-

Extreme tired feeling afflicts nearly everybody at this season. The hustlers cease to push, the tireless grow weary, the energetic become enervated. You know just what we mean. Some men and women endeavor temporarily to overcome that Feeling by great force of will. But this is unsafe, as it pulls powerfully upon the nervous system, which will not long stand such strain. Too many people "work on their nerves," and the result is seen in unfortunate wrecks marked "nervous prostration," in every direction. That tired Feeling is a positive proof of thin, weak, impure blood; for, if the blood is rich, red, vitalized and vigorous, it imparts life and energy to every nerve, organ and tissue of the body. The necessity of taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for that tired feeling is, therefore, apparent to every one, and the good it will do you is equally beyond question. Remember that

Estimates more than Realized

WILLIAM McCABE, ESQ., Managing Director North American Life Assurance Company, Toronto.

Dear Sir,—

I have to-day received from your inspector, Mr Charles S. Everett, your Company's cheque for $1,031 66, which is the cash value of my Policy number 417. This result is certainly very gratifying, and is $20 in excess of the company's estimate of a like Policy. My Policy was on the 20-year Endowment plan, with a 15 year investment period and the amount received is the cash value at the end of the investment period. The result is all the more gratifying from the fact that agents of other Companies have been most persistent in stating that the North American Life Company's estimates we entirely too high and would not be realized, and so impressed was I with what had been said that I did not expect that they would, but the best indication of the North American Life Assurance Company's estimates are the results which I am privileged to enjoy to-day.

Yours truly,
