GRAND JURY Five Days Left REPORT AT GEORGETOWN August 1st Is Fateful Day — Indications Are Third Period Will Show Greatest Vote Total Increase.

Following is the text of the report of the Grand Jury submitted at the recent term of the Supreme Court in Georgetown: "To Mr. Justice Saunders of the Supreme Court of Prince Edward Island. "May it please your Lordship to accept our report, as follows: "Acting under your instructions, we have inspected the King's County Jail and rooms adjoining, and beg to report as follows: "Jail: We find the kitchen well equipped with first class range, the bath room and toilet fixtures appear to be adequate, the walls and ceiling of jail are in a deplorable condition, the plaster being broken and discolored, and impossible to keep clean and in a sanitary condition. "We would therefore recommend that the walls and ceiling of same should be thoroughly cleaned, and finished throughout with steel sheathing, after plaster has been repaired. "Sleeping Quarters: This room contains twelve cots, which is apparently satisfactory. The plaster on walls and ceiling of this room is in very poor condition. "We would recommend that the interior be repaired and painted. "Jailer's Room: The situation of this room is not satisfactory in our opinion, there being five doors between it and sleeping quarters of prisoners, making it almost impossible for any alarm given by prisoners in case of emergency to be heard by Jailer. We would therefore recommend that a room now used as storeroom and adjoining sleeping quarters of prisoners be converted into quarters for Jailer. "We would also recommend that an enclosure should be made at rear and north side of Jail building, to prevent intercourse between prisoners and friends outside, also for recreation grounds in place of lawn in front of court house as at present. "Motor Traffic: We view with alarm the increasing number of fatal and other accidents caused by motor vehicles. "We would recommend that the law in regard to motor traffic be more strictly enforced, especially in case of drunken drivers, and those driving with defective brakes and improper lights. "We congratulate your Lordship on the interest you are taking in the welfare of the farmers of Prince Edward Island, particularly in establishing our native sons on the land, and equipping them with necessary stock and machinery to make a proper start in this age old profession. "In our opinion this is a recommendation that is worthy of our deepest consideration. This would help farmers to establish their sons in homes of their own, and alleviate to a great extent the unemployment situation. "All of which is respectfully submitted. "(Sgd.) E. B. McLAUREN "For seif and others."

Time is speeding. Only five days remain of the big third period in the $3,000 Guardian "Weekly Payroll" subscription campaign and a like number of days to turn in subscriptions on the special cash prizes offered, for best cash reports. Saturday until ten o'clock p.m.

TIME DOES NOT WAIT Time waits for no one. Every day and every hour lost this third period until 10 p.m. Saturday which might otherwise be devoted to enhancing vote scores are days and hours lost, days and hours gone beyond recall. While one candidate sleeps another is active, piling up votes. Readers and others are ready to give their subscription, but workers generally have to go after them.

"Hobbies" Subject At Rotary

The southerners have always been noted for their hospitality, but in this respect they are outdone by the people of Prince Edward Island, was the compliment paid the Province by Mr. Howard S. Hadden, of South Carolina, $25.00 in cash offered for the best cash report will result in a surprisingly large number of subscriptions being written up between now and the final hour at 10 p.m. August 1st.

MAKE STRENUOUS CAMPAIGN That candidates generally realize the speed the race has attained and the vitalness of these present days in the job of winning is well demonstrated by the activities of certain contenders. One has arranged to have every day off between now and Saturday night. The woman, a housewife, who is going to fast pace, has made arrangements whereby she will have the week in order to devote as nearly full time as possible to her campaign these next five days. In another instance an entire family has joined the forces of its candidate member and from here on it will be a case of "one for all and all for one." So it goes, the real candidates are working as never before. No stone is being left unturned which can possibly conceal winning votes.

Someone went to another contender and said, "Ha, don't you know you can't win anything. So-and-so and so-and-so will put it all over you," and more to this effect. The reaction was contrary to expectations, however, for this candidate got "peevy" and is now and to show "the world" that this candidate can "make the grade." While some are making a race that surprises even themselves, there are others who seem to have slowed up, who dilly-dally along, lament their inability to "hit" cry about the other candidate getting business away from them and dependent upon "Old Man Alibi" to compensate them for a lack of subscriptions which make votes and win cars and cash. Time is speeding, whether a candidate is active or not. Those who make the most of the next five days will go a long way toward obtaining their big objective.

New York - Paris Flight Projected By Clyde Pangborn

NEW YORK, July 26 — Clyde Pangborn established himself here today and began the final phase of preparations for what he hopes will be the first successful "payload" crossing of the North Atlantic by a heavier-than-air flying craft. Arriving today at the Keyport, N. J. airport, he left his novel plane there for final repairs in preparation for the projected flight from New York to Paris which, he said today, he expected to start by the middle of next month.

Pangborn, who with Hugh Herndon, Jr. made the first non-stop flight by airplane across the Pacific Ocean, will have as co-pilot on this trip Marion Grevenberg, a friend and flying companion since his Great War days. The plane, designed by the late Claire Vance of Oakland, Calif., has no fuselage but consists of a huge wing containing pilots' quarters, fuel tanks and baggage compartments, joined to the tail surface by slender booms. With a gasoline capacity of 1,156 gallons, the single-engine craft is designed to carry an additional payload of 1,000 pounds and has claimed for it a non-stop flying range of 8,000 miles. Pangborn's plan, as outlined today by his manager, is to take off from Floyd Bennett Airport, New York, and fly non-stop to Paris. His return trip is scheduled to be from Paris to either Dallas, Texas, or Los Angeles, Calif., in an effort to establish a non-stop distance record for a point-to-point flight. Both letter mail and parcel post will be carried as the "payload" for the flight each way.

ENJOYABLE LUNCHEON.—Messrs. A. E. Arscott, Toronto, Assistant General Manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce in charge of Ontario, Quebec, Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland branches, and W. V. Gordon, Halifax, superintendent of Maritime branches, Canadian Bank of Commerce, were guests at an informal luncheon yesterday in the Canadian National Hotel. There was a large and representative attendance of citizens present. Mr. Scarth, local branch manager, presided and introduced the guests, who were tendered a cordial civic welcome by His Worship Mayor Turner. His Worship paid tribute to the banking system in Canada and to the many outstanding bankers which the Maritimes have produced. Incidentally he mentioned the fact that Prince Edward Island last year produced in the vicinity of $23,000,000, which meant a per capita production of $230 or an income of about $1500 per average family. Mr. Arscott spoke briefly in reply. He referred to the system of low rates which the bank is introducing with a view to meeting present requirements, and which is resulting in a considerably increased demand for bank loans. He also spoke enthusiastically of his impressions of Prince Edward Island. His present visit was an official one but he hoped shortly to come on a holiday to this "paradise of the Dominion." Messrs. Arscott and Gordon left yesterday by the Hochelaga for Truro and Halifax.

There were present eleven members and four visitors. Instead of the regular program, a short business meeting was carried out. Minutes of last regular meeting were read and approved. Miss Belle Nicholson, who is taking up her duties in another district, resigned from being secretary of the Institute. Miss Christine McPherson was appointed to take this office for the remaining part of the year. The retiring secretary-Treasurer gave the amount of $11.12c over as balance on hand. The sick committee reported having visited and sent fruit to three patients in Hospital and one in the district. A bill of $12.21 was paid for fruit given to sick New Scotland members for next month: Mrs. Bismarck Cousins and Miss Annie MacDonald. Program Committee was re-elected: Mrs. A. C. MacDonald and Miss Christine McPherson. The meeting closed by repeating "A Club Woman's Creed."

At the close of the meeting an address was read on behalf of the Institute by Miss Christine McPherson, and a gift presented by Miss Margaret MacDonald to Miss Belle Nicholson. Following is the address:— Bradalbane, P. E. I. Dear Belle:—We the members of the Bradalbane Rural Women's Institute feel it our duty tonight to express our feelings of gratitude to you, on the resigning of Secretary-Treasurer of our Institute in the past six months. In that time you have been our efficient school teacher also; and as you are taking up your duties in another district for the coming term, you feel it your duty to resign. In our Institute you always abided by the "Creed" in leaving out the fault finding. In always meeting the rest of the members calm, serene, and gentle, and also, a generous giver. You are indeed an example for the others to follow. We ask you now to please accept this small gift not as its intrinsic value but as a memento of the respect we hold for you. Signed on Behalf of the Bradalbane Rural Women's Institute. Geo Minard's for Stiff Joists

NO MORE ASKING HUBBY ABOUT HAT (Canadian Press) LONDON, July 27—Miss Viola Sheriff, style expert from the United States on holidays here, created a little fuss recently when she said English wives were afraid to buy hats for their husbands might not like. Comparing the Englishwoman to the American, Miss Sheriff said "The Englishwoman's first thought in choosing a hat is 'will John like it?' The American woman buys a hat, tells her husband how smart it is—and leaves him to pay the bill."

Mme. Chameau, well-known milliner, hotly contested this view, saying: "It may have been true a few years ago, but the Englishwoman today has much more confidence in her own taste. She chooses what she thinks will suit her."

Hazel Grove and Vicinity

Rev A. N. and Mrs. Simpson of Norwalk, Iowa, were recent visitors to Hazel Grove, guests of their niece Mrs. Ellsworth Bagnall.

Miss Beatrice Stevenson has been engaged for another year to teach in Hazel Grove school.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Bagnall from Flatbush, New York, are spending their holidays on the Island, and were recent guests of the former's brother, Mr. Pope Bagnall.

Mrs. Annie McEachern has returned home from a visit to Brackley.

Dr. and Mrs. William Silliphant and daughter, Boston, Mass., have returned home after spending their holidays at Hunter River.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Bagnall, Hazel Grove, were very pleasantly surprised on the evening of July 10th when a large number of friends from Hunter River and surrounding districts assembled at their spacious home to tender the newlyweds felicitations, etc. The principle event of the evening was a nicely worded address and presentation of a well-filled purse to Mr. and Mrs. Bagnall. Mr. Bagnall replied very fittingly to the address by thanking the donors and wishing them a pleasant evening on behalf of Mrs. Bagnall and himself.

A very dainty lunch was then served. Dancing and cards was the entertainment of the evening. Very fine music was furnished by Messrs. Harry Craswell and Robt. Weeks, accompanied by Miss Stevenson and Mrs. Bertram. Following is the address:—

Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Bagnall, Hunter River. Dear Ellsworth and Mrs. Bagnall: We, your friends and neighbors assemble here this evening to convey to you and your bride our hearty wishes for a happy and prosperous wedded life.

To you Mrs. Bagnall, we are pleased to welcome you in our midst, and although now a stranger to most of us, we hope as the days go by that many links will be added to your chain of friendship.

To you Mrs. Ellsworth, we who have known you ever since childhood, are glad to greet you with you from youth to manhood, we could not allow this opportunity to pass without expressing to you something of the spirit which prompted our meeting with you tonight.

We now ask you to accept this gift, not for its intrinsic value, but as a token of our friendship for you both.

Signed on behalf of the neighbors and friends of Hunter River and vicinity.

Would Develop Pacific Coast River Systems

OTTAWA, July 27.—(CP)—The entire Columbia River system on the Pacific Coast may be harnessed for the creation of industrial power in the next few years.

Publication of the report of the International Joint Commission on river power and drainage uses in the Kootenay Valley in the neighborhood of the international boundary, has drawn attention to certain curious geographical features of the Kootenay River and the Columbia River system of which it forms a part.

These rivers, although they ultimately empty into the Pacific Ocean, travel for the most part up and down long, narrow valleys running north and south. The Kootenay rises in the Rockies only a few miles from the source of the Columbia, and the former flows south into Idaho, then turns and flows north into Kootenay Lake in British Columbia, emptying into the Columbia some distance south of the city of Nelson. Meanwhile the Columbia has travelled north from its source in the Rockies, around the northern end of the Selkirk mountains, and south to the international boundary, into the State of Washington, and finally to the Pacific.

The Pend d'Oreille, another tributary of the Columbia, comes up to the boundary from Idaho, and discharges into the main stream after a course of a few miles in Canada. Farther West the Okanagan, rising in British Columbia, flows south across the boundary to the Columbia. And on these various streams, particularly on the British Columbia side, are long, narrow but very deep lakes, filling gorges between the various mountain chains; Kootenay lake, the Arrow lakes, Okanagan lake, Solcan lake.

At these rivers and lakes form one complete water system, and very definitely an international water system, involving more or less interlocking interests in the States of Washington and Idaho and the Province of British Columbia, and to some extent a conflict, on both sides of the boundary, between water power interests and use of drainage. This system is year by year coming more and more into the picture as a source of power for industrial, irrigation and other purposes.

Developments have already been carried out by the West Kootenay Power and Light Co. of the Kootenay River in British Columbia. The United States government has spent millions on a huge dam at the Grand Coulee on the Columbia in Washington; and it is understood contemplates spending many more millions both here and at other power sites lower down the Columbia.

It was brought out at one of the hearings before the International Joint Commission, in the testimony of a Washington engineer, that to get the maximum benefit from the Columbia system in terms of water power, on both sides of the international boundary, and particularly in the State of Washington, it would be necessary to arrange for storage in the Kootenay, Arrow and Okanagan lakes. To do this would involve a reference of the whole matter to the International Joint Commission for investigation and report, under Article IX of the Treaty of 1908, under which the Commission operates.

Why the Girl Pat went on her rambling voyage down the west coast of Europe and Africa and across the South Atlantic to South America, has not yet been learned. Grimly friends of Captain Osborne have said they understood he had planned to search for treasure reported buried in the Salvage Islands by Captain Kidd. Others said he had expressed a desire "to live the life of Robinson Crusoe."

The launch returned to Georgetown and the government communicated with London authorities, meantime keeping the anchored trawler under surveillance. The Pomeroy's expedition was a result of instructions from the Imperial Government.

Evidence did not disclose why the men were not placed under arrest after the vessel's capture. On arrival in Georgetown they were taken immediately to jail, but police officials announced they were not being "deported" but only held for their own "protection."

Later they were discharged from the jail and made arrangements to return home, just a day before the two Osbornes were to have taken an airplane for New York they were arrested. The other members of the crew were not held.

Tells How Girl Pat Captured

GEORGETOWN, July 27.—(CP) Cable)—The official tale of the run-away British trawler Girl Pat's capture was heard to the first time today in a tiny colonial police court here.

Appearing at the hearing of Captain George Black Osborne, skipper of the fishing boat that eluded capture on both sides of the Atlantic for three months, and his brother Jim, Detective Inspector Captain C. O. Murland told a stirring tale of how the government cutter Pomeroy forced the Girl Pat's crew to "give in" off the mouth of the Demerara River.

Following Captain Murland's evidence the Osborne brothers were remanded again to jail for 15 days to await transportation to England where they will stand trial on charges of larceny.

On June 19, the Detective Inspector told the court in crisp official style, the government transport cutter Pomeroy approached the Girl Pat at the mouth of the Demerara River.

The trawler was hailed and told the police and customs wanted to board. Instantly the little fishing vessel hoisted anchor and sails and started to move off.

For more than half an hour the Pomeroy tried to haul up alongside the elusive trawler but the Girl Pat was too quick. Then skipper Osborne yelled: "We've only 15 minutes' oil left. We give in," and allowed a towline to be thrown aboard.

All members of the crew of the captured vessel admitted frankly and freely she was the missing Girl Pat which left Grimby in April suddenly on a routine fishing expedition but never returned, Inspector Murland said.

Immediately after the Girl Pat's capture, the Inspector testified, Captain Osborne asked repeatedly to see the Lloyd's agent here and when the vessel was tied up to a Georgetown dock, Hugh Cameron, the agent, was allowed aboard. He had a "long talk" with Osborne.

The Girl Pat had stayed off Georgetown more than 24 hours before her capture. The day before a launch had approached the craft with police, Lloyd's agents, government officials and newspapermen aboard.

"Who are you?" the launch hailed. "We're outside the three-mile limit. Get out or we'll sink you!" a member of the Girl Pat's crew yelled back.

The launch returned to Georgetown and the government communicated with London authorities, meantime keeping the anchored trawler under surveillance. The Pomeroy's expedition was a result of instructions from the Imperial Government.

Evidence did not disclose why the men were not placed under arrest after the vessel's capture. On arrival in Georgetown they were taken immediately to jail, but police officials announced they were not being "deported" but only held for their own "protection."
