AN APPEAL FOR AID.

...Y DOES THE CLOVER

Clover is one of the most valuable crops grown on the farm. An acre of clover affords twice as much feed as an acre of timothy, more than twice as much as an acre of oats, straw and grain, twice as much as an acre of potatoes, two-thirds as much as an acre of turnips, and as much as an acre of corn fodder. Considering the small amount of labor required for its growth and harvesting, it is not remarkable that we hear farmers lament the failure of this valuable crop. Years ago when the land was newly cleared, we grew crops of clover that could scarcely be saved on the ground where it grew. The rich blooming plants grew so thickly together that when the scythe of the mower went through them they could not fall, but stood in their natural position till wilted and shrivelled in drying. What a contrast to the poor, thin, winter-killed crops which we have now-a-days, where mouse-ear, stellaria and daisies make a more important part of the growth than the sweet-blossomed fodder plant itself.

Those thick crops of former days gave the weeds no chance to grow. Daisies hid their diminished heads, and the minor weeds were simply smothered in the dark, rich herbage. But what is it makes the clover fail? We grow as much timothy, more grain and better turnips than we used to. Why has the clover gone back on us? Our land, on the whole, is richer and more productive. Why does it not suit the clover? The want of shelter, in some cases, may be the cause of the winter-killing, but the principal reason is the weakly condition of the plants themselves.

Clover requires twice as much nitrogen as any other crop for its growth. This nitrogen can only be supplied by nitrates in the soil. Now these nitrates have to be prepared by bacteria from manure, or from decaying organic matter in the soil. When land is much worked before the clover is grown, as for potatoes and then grain, the soluble nitrates are abstracted from it, so that the clover cannot get any benefit from them, and the crop is thin and weak. When short manure is applied to roots it leaves the clover especially poor. Fertilizers on grain are but little help. But a large amount of fresh stable manure incorporated with the soil, either for roots or grain, will produce abundance of clover as a following crop. An abundance of decaying manure in the soil forms a basis for the regular formation of nitrates that nothing else affords, and thus gives the very best condition for the growth of clover. A dressing of phosphate at the same time will be a great help to a luxuriant crop, as there will be more nitrogen than phosphates in such a soil.

Heavy dressings of manure are expensive but in this case they will not be lost. A heavy crop of clover, followed by abundant timothy and rich pasture, is one of the best rewards that a farmer can claim. The farmer who aims at and secures a good crop of clover, will have every other crop good, and a solid foundation for prosperity laid at once in his business.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—The following extract from a letter written by Longfellow during his l fetime to Mrs. Caroline H. Dall is especially interesting to all who love Evangeline, and who does not? Teachers will do well to tell this incident to their pupils. Hawthorne would have been happy indeed had he known, when he called on Longfellow, how many thousands of children would have read with delight the poem which was to grow out of his generous offer to Longfellow:

"Some time before I wrote 'Evangeline,' Hawthorne and Sumner were dining with me, and I think there must have been others present. After dinner, Hawthorne told us that he had lately become interested in the exile of the Acadian. It excited his imagination. He fancied two lovers, widely separated and wandering for years, meeting only to die, and wished to make a novel of it. He, however, thought the subject too difficult, and fancied he would have to give it up. I waited a while, heard nothing more about the novel, and finally asked Hawthorn if he were willing that I should make the story the subject of a poem. He consented, and was one of the first to congratulate me on its popularity."

—That Prof. Tyndall died of an overdose of chloral taken to lessen suffering from insomnia and indigestion is a melancholy illustration of the one-sideness that may accompany culture—a one-sideness which cultivates the brain at the expense of the body. Here, an American paper cogently remarks, was a leader of science with one of the finest minds of the century, a keen and indefatigueable searcher for the facts of nature, a master of analysis and a clear and cogent reasoner, who either did not know or wholly neglected the ordinary laws of health and life. He climbed the Alps to dig out the secrets of the glaciers. He discovered and explained the subtle relations of heat and motion. He analyzed the chemical properties of matter. But he apparently paid no attention to the facts of his own nature and despised the simple knowledge and care necessary to prevent the impairment of his fine powers by easily avoidable complaints. Is not college football, for instance, truer wisdom than Prof. Tyndall's? It may run to extremes, but the spirit is right. Prof. Tyndall certainly knew that health was the essential basis not merely of common happiness and content, but particularly of that absording labor which was his chief happiness. He must have known that all human energy depends upon digestion and that the neglected body incapacitates the mind. He need not have given his own time and labor to investigate this subject, but could safely have guided his conduct by the conclusions of others. Yet this strong and wise teacher of men in many branches of knowledge was weak and foolish in his vital point.

—We most heartily congratulate our talented young friend, Dr. McPhail, upon the interesting event, particulars of which will be found elsewhere in to-day's issue of The Examiner, and wish himself and Mrs. McPhail every happiness in life.

The Sheriff of Queen's County to-day opened the packets of special votes cast in Queen's County at the late election. Italy is the poorest power in Europe, yet King Humbert draws $3,000,000 a year from the public treasury, half a million more than Emperor William of Germany, and a million more than Queen Victoria.

The Emperor William is reported to have said, on receiving the news of the explosion in the French Chamber of Deputies: "Such an infamous crime is too dreadful for words. We have no longer to do with men, but wild beasts, who ought to be stamped out without pity."

An interesting ruling in a divorce case has been made by a Cincinnati judge. A woman who had secured a divorce applied to the court to restore her maiden name, but was refused on the ground that there were children. The court held that it was the common law that the children should be protected in their name.

A big delegation waited recently upon Hon. G. E. Foster and Mr. John F. Wood. The delegation represented the brewers of the Dominion, and asked that the duty on Malt be decreased. The brewers do not expect to get the reduction asked for, but think it the best way of keeping the Government from increasing the rate.

As the man of pleasure, by a vain attempt to be more happy than any man can be, is often more miserable than most men are, so the skeptic, in a vain attempt to be wise beyond what is permitted to man, plunges into a darkness more deplorable and a blindness more incurable than that of the common herd, whom he despises and would fain instruct.—Colton.

Miss Mary Frizzles, who teaches school in Adams county, near Twin Creek, Ohio, whipped one of her pupils. On Saturday as she was going to her home at Buena Vista the entire family of the child set upon her and beat her fearfully with clubs and stones. Great excitement prevailed.

Eugene Kelly, the New York banker, has decided to wind up his business and retire. He is 80 years of age, and worth ten million dollars. Mr. Kelly has always been a deep sympathiser with Irish Home Rule. On one occasion, when it was decided to try to raise $150,000 for the cause of Home Rule, during the Parliamentary elections, he subscribed $20,000, and, it is said, cabled privately to John Dillon that he might be drawn upon for the entire $150,000 if necessary. Mr. Kelly was born in County Tyrone, and came to America when 20 years of age, landing with $3 in his pocket. He was a dry goods clerk for a time, and drifted to San Francisco, where he soon commenced to make money, and went into the banking business.

The announcement that the Nabob of Rampur, one of the princes of India, is visiting Berlin and other European capitals reminds us of the fact that an unusually large number of natives of British India have visited America and Europe via the Canadian Pacific Railway this year. They had sailed the eastern seas and crossed the Pacific ocean without being out of sight of the British flag, and after traversing much of the Canadian section of the American continent, still under British rule, they were wont to enquire at the Canadian Pacific Railway stations in the Northwest how much further they were to travel before they would be out of British territory? They were learning for the first time the extent of the British empire, of which their native country formed no insignificant part. Most of these interesting travellers wore their native dress, spoke good English, and were exceedingly intelligent gentlemen, who were as inquisitive as any Yankee that ever lived. The more of these educated Indians who travel and become informed of the extent and resources of the old empire, the better for British interests in the East.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

THE LIQUOR EVIL.

Sir,—I have read with pleasure the article in your issue of the 16th, regarding the present liquor evil.

It is beyond question that in this town and vicinity it has become a most intolerable nuisance, more particularly since the opening of the late election campaign. Men who would talk temperance on the street and shout prohibition from the platform, have of late aided and abetted by scattering whiskey broadcast over the district, thereby debauching the electors for the purpose of securing votes for what they are pleased to call a temperance party and prohibition Government. The saloon have been running full blast almost night and day, under their very eyes, and they have made no effort to put the slightest check on the traffic. And perhaps the very worst feature of all is the fact that the Government vendor, who is supposed to sell according to law, has been dealing it out by the glass like the rest. What a nice state of things. This is a fact well known to the temperance body and goes to show but too plainly that the temperance cry, the Prohibition cry, and the Plebiscite, are only used for political purposes and to suit a present urgent case. Men could be seen and heard the last two or three weeks working for and shouting temperance, and then going to the polls on Wednesday last and voting for a party who had in the late House of Assembly, and probably will have in the new House, as supporters, as large a proportion, if not larger, of whiskey drinkers than any that have preceded them for years—while at the same time they and their friends were flooding the district with intoxicating liquors, not to mention the several other means used by such purists to debauch the electors.

At a mass Prohibition meeting held in the Market Hall on Sunday evening last, instead of being present to uphold and further the cause they so loudly professed to favor, not a grit candidate put in an appearance, fearing, no doubt, if they did it might offend some of their whiskey dealing friends; but all the same, clergymen and laymen or the greater part of them who spoke at the meeting, voted for those very candidates who were afraid to put in an appearance at the meeting.

Is it any wonder Mr. Editor that the temperance movement is looked upon by a majority of the people of this Province as a huge farce, used only as a means to further political ends. They can clearly see that from the tactics of the so-called temperance reformers. It is too much to expect that they will ever be true to the principles they profess to maintain, and it is also more than can be expected that the cause of temperance will ever prosper or Prohibition be ever obtained by such hypocritical promoters. Yours truly,

Prohibition.

ALBERTON NOTES.

Our harbor has been frozen over since the 14th inst.,—much earlier than usual. There were five schooners frozen in; but yesterday a number of men succeeded in breaking the ice and getting them into open water. Two of them sailed last evening and the remaining three this morning. They are out of danger now although there is a great quantity of ice in the Gulf. The following memo will show by whom they are loaded: Schr. Osprey, oats, potatoes, poultry, meat, &c., B. Rogers; Maud Carter, oats and potatoes, by B. Rogers; Comrad, potatoes, by Wilkinson & Cunningham; G. S. Foote, oats, by Woodman Bros.; W. D. Richards, potatoes, by Birch & Dyer.

Several schooners chartered for this port failed in getting—one for John T. Weeks, Esq., and one for B. Rogers, Esq.

The funeral of Miss Eliza Weeks (sister of John T. Weeks, Esq.,) took place Wednesday at 10 a. m., her sister, Mrs. Knight, having arrived from New Brunswick on Saturday evening.

A deep gloom was cast over this village this morning when a telegram was received telling of the total loss of the Grace Parker at St. Pierre, Miq., on Saturday evening last, and the crew of seven men all perished. They all belonged here and left seven families, one being a widower. I understand there was no insurance on either schooner or cargo.

Weather to-night clear and cold. Harbor all frozen over out to the light house. Good sleighing and fine driving on the ice in the rivers.

CURE FOR DIPHTHERIA.

The following cure for diphtheria, recommended in the New York Independent is worthy of preservation, as it may be of service some time. The cure has been successfully employed in France for the cure of true diphtheria. It consists simply in applying with a camel's hair brush or throat swab a small quantity of coal oil to the white spots on the throat. The oil seem to destroy the bacterial growth at once. The article reads as follows: The membrane of diphtheria consists of a most rapidly growing plant, and among the other elements in petroleum is a large amount of sulphur, which is very inimical to diphtheria membrane. At once the membrane seems to become thinner, that is, ceases to grow, and that which has attained its growth breaks down under the softening of the oil, and eventually disappears. The person applying the oil should be careful to stand a little to one side, so that should the patient cough no particle of the expectorated material can get into the eye of the operator, as the human eye is of all culture mediums for diphtheria baccili about the most favorable. There should not be an excess of material on the brush, as a drop too much might strangle in the disabled condition of the throat and larynx." This is probably a familiar cure to the medical profession, but it may be of service where professional help cannot be at once obtained.

A BRILLIANT SOCIETY EVENT.

Over Three Hundred Guests Present—The Wedding Tour.

Montreal, Dec. 20.

One of the principal functions in Montreal society this season was the marriage of Dr. J. A. McPhail (formerly of Prince Edward Island,) to Miss Burland, youngest daughter of G. B. Burland, the millionaire President of the British American Bank Note Co. The ceremony was performed last night by Rev. J. Edgar Hill, of St. Andrew's Church of Scotland, and Rev. J. B. Silcox, of Emanuel Church. Dr. McPhail was attended by Lieut.-Col. Burland, of the Sixth Fusiliers, and Mr. Richard Lea, of McGill University; the bridesmaids being Miss McPhail and Miss McGarry, of Belfast, Ireland. The bride wore a costume of Irish poplin with diamond ornaments. There were present over three hundred guests, including many of the professors of McGill University and of the University of Bishop's College, in which Dr. McPhail occupies a chair. The presents were of great number and value. A reception was held from half-past six to eight, when Dr. and Mrs. McPhail left in a special car for New York, and will leave for the Mediterranean early in the New Year. Miss. Burland is one of the best-known of Montreal's society ladies, one of her sisters being married to Dr. Ami, of the Geological Survey, and another to Dr. Stephen, of London, England, and nephew of Lord Mount Stephen.

SAD DROWNING ACCIDENT.

Four Lives Lost While Skating.

Halifax, Dec. 20.

A terrible drowning accident occurred at Chocolate Lake, three miles from here, yesterday, by which four lives were lost. Three children of Peter Doyle, who resides near the lake, viz., Mary, aged 20 years; James, aged 13; John, aged 12; and a boy named Charles Neal, aged 14, an inmate of the industrial School, while skating went through the ice, and all were drowned.

The New Brunswick Lieutenant-Governorship.

Ottawa, Dec. 20.

There seems to be good grounds for the statement that Judge Fraser, of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick, will be appointed successor to the late John Boyd. It is thought that in the event of a vacancy thereby being created on the bench, that Dr. Barker will get the vacant judgship. The announcement that these appointments were made yesterday is erroneous.

London, December 18.—The arrivals of apples from Canada are utterly insufficient to meet the Christmas demand. Most of the apples that arrived last week were from Canada, and as a result there was keen competition, prices advancing from three to four shillings per barrel. This advance will, in all probabilty, be maintained for this week's arrival.

Chicago, Ill., December 18.—Mayor Swift to-day issued a proclamation declaring that hunger, want and destitution prevails to such an extent that great numbers of men and women are suffering for the common necessaries of life. He appeals to the citizens for free, cheerful and generous contribution in money to relieve the wants of the distressed and needy.

Montreal, Dec. 18.—There is good news for pensioners. Mr. W. B. Walker, advocate, who has been acting for a number of United States pensioners in this city, received word this morning from Washington that the United States Senate has repealed the clause in the pension act of March, 1893, which forbids the payment of pensions to persons residing in foreign countries. The law has been found to work a great deal of hardship to innocent persons, and the promptness with which it has been repealed indicates that it will go through the House of Representatives with equal ease.
