

Beautiful New Structure Is Ready For Parishioners

with architectural lines that are as beautiful as the interior. The church of the Most Holy Redeemer, situated on Spring Park Road, Charlottetown, will be blessed this afternoon by Most Rev. Malcolm A. MacEachern, bishop of Charlottetown.

The new Church of the Most Holy Redeemer offers a concept in religion so old as to be modern: a concept architecturally based on "gather ye round me".

As a result of this searching back into the beginning days of Christianity the church altar is the focal point of everything. On it, where the Mass is celebrated and where Christ is present, the only visible light shines; around it sits the worshippers; to it all building lines lead. The tremendously sweeping and far-reaching aspect of the concept truly brings religion back to and in the midst of the faithful followers of The Church.

In the beginning there was no pre-conceived plan for an exterior and architect Alfred Hennessey, who designed the new church, said it simply developed as a result of the interior based on the concept of His hearers gathering round Him when He was here.

Perhaps it is because of this, rather than in spite of it, that the new church has become one of the few really beautiful pieces of modern architecture. That the exterior is striking cannot be argued; but that is only because of its structure and not due to any incongruity in form.

That concept of starting at the beginning is seen in every step of its building and design. Immediately on entering the church the worshipper is in the baptistry — just as the first step in entering Christianity is through baptism. And the theme of the architecture, the paralling of belief, is carried either. The exterior is of special brick of a pleasing appearance. It is surrounded by this beautiful grove.

The church itself is so built as to follow the contours of the ground and take advantage of them. Numbers of beautiful trees were saved in carving the site out of a "wilderness" and thus the landscaping has a 40-year head-start on similar developments. It is surrounded by this beautiful grove.

Behind the church is the two-storey rectory, connected by a delightful passageway, to bring the priests and brothers directly to the scene of their labors. The rectory provides a complete home for them with its accommodations for eight as well as housing the church of social Hennessey's belief that library and kitchen as well as a private chapel.

A special feature which will please parishioners — and city police — is provision of a large paved parking lot in back.

In accomplishing his desire he has given Charlottetown a structure of which it can be truly proud.

CLOSE BORDELLO
COLOGNE (AP) — Cologne's city fathers took a step Friday to make this Rhine city more beautiful. They closed a bordello section and announced they would make it a park. Police closed 14 old houses and told 50 girls — one of them 50 years old — they would have to find other quarters.

SINATRA BARRED
REHUT (AP) — Actor-singer Frank Sinatra has been barred from entering Lebanon because of his moral and material support of Israel, the daily newspaper L'Orient said Friday. The newspaper said the council of ministers also voted Wednesday to ban Sinatra's movies and records.

THE RECTOR

Rev. Joseph McCreel C.S.R. built the first Church of the Most Holy Redeemer and Rev. Frank Maloney C.S.R. the present rector, was the guiding hand in the latest model. Faithful Maloney above is a native of Peterborough, Ont., and has been rector at Holy Redeemer since 1962.

partures from tradition is seen in the placing of the church choir. Directly in back of the altar is an arrangement of slatted blocks, beautifully designed to provide an arc, and behind this arc will be the choir. They will not be visible to the congregation, but yet will have a clear view of the altar through the angled slats.

While the altar is a thing of beautiful simplicity it is the overhead design which produces an almost eerie effect of the Light itself shining directly down.

A circular design, it presented an engineering problem in that it had to be so constructed that there would be no columns in front — there are none at all visible to interfere with the congregation's view of the altar. This meant creating a cantilevered steel ring supported by columns only on the rear wall.

It is through this form of construction that the light which literally floods the altar comes from windows not visible to the congregation. They are so placed that the light gives the impression of coming from behind the congregation as it is reflected down and out by a back wall of deflecting plaster.

Because the church ceiling is relatively low — only 12 feet high at the rear — the roof 'ribs' were integrated into the roof structure to visually raise the roof and permit secondary sources of light through special windows and again emphasize the direction of all elements towards the altar.

FOR LIFETIME
The floor is of terrazzo blocks: "It is not extravagant; in the end the saving will be tremendous because there will be no constant cleaning, polishing and replacing. It is there for the life of the church," Mr. Hennessey said. He also noted there would be no great financial outlays for future painting

Stanley Bridge Area Has New Water Sport

Tourists to the Stanley Bridge area of the North Shore of the island this summer are being given the opportunity to engage in a new type of watersport, one that is heavily engaged in elsewhere but is getting its introduction this summer to Island beaches.

The sport is known as "Aquacycling" and can be engaged in on either calm waters or for the more venturesome in the surf or rollers.

This new sport is being introduced here by Bob and Bette Wyzant, a retired couple from the mainland who settled in this province to spend their retirement and to operate the new business.

In the sport the water vehicle consists of a pair of twin floats set about four or five feet apart and which carry a frame bearing two bucket type seats for the riders who operate foot pedals which are connected to paddlebeats which provide the motive power.

The Wyzants in introducing the new sport feel quite confident that it will eventually prove to be a big drawing card among the activities for both tourists and Islanders alike.

COURT FREES COUPLE

TORONTO (CP) — A test case involving a Toronto couple, charged with leaving their two-year-old child unattended on a street for an unreasonable length of time, was dismissed Thursday for lack of evidence. Mr. and Mrs. Allan Mitchell had been charged under the child welfare act last month after their daughter Shirley was struck and injured by a car outside their home.
