Kingston Notes.

The flourishing village of Kingston still keeps abreast with the times especially in the construction of buildings. Messrs James Beer and John Scott have each erected a grist mill. Mr. Scott is beginning to build a rotary to be run by steam; Mr. John Macdougall is putting a piece to his dwelling house, which will not only tend to make himself comfortable but add to the already attractive appearance of the corner. A public hall is now being constructed which by the appearance of the moving spirits will soon be fit for its intended purposes. The people are highly pleased with the gifts received from our representatives in parliament towards the construction of this much needed building.

Many of the farmers having finished their hay, are making good headway at the harvest, which is considered to be a very good crop. Rust paid it a visit in many fields.

Kingston has reason to be proud of its fine horses. They won prizes at the Ch'town exhibitions time and again. Some having been sent to St. John's exhibition about two falls ago won prizes and were sold for handsome sums. Not only are they noted for winning prizes but they always command a large sum of money when sold. Several have been purchased this year by eminent buyers who said they were the best they had bought. Our horses are expected to carry off the prizes this year, as the farmers are continually striving to bring them up to the standard of perfection, and have succeeded so far that they have them now by far superior to those of previous years. Mr. M. Dixon has some very fine ones, especially a blood horse which is noted as being an excellent driver and possessed of great speed. Dr. John Henderson, a native of this place, is ever ready to offer advice to any one who may need it concerning the equine race.

Miss Beatrice Newson, having lately commenced to float on the limpid waves of matrimony, having as her partner Mr. Frost, is here visiting her friends whom she left some years ago when she journeyed to the States where she had the good fortune to fall in with the above named citizen of the great republic. Besides Mr. & Mrs. Frost, there are many other citizens of the Stars and Stripes here at present and more expected.

Last Wednesday Mr. Jas. McGregor was taken with a severe attack of English Cholera. We now learn the painful news that he has succumbed to the disease and passed from time to eternity.—Com.
