

VERTEBRATES

MAMMALS	BIRDS	REPTILES & AMPHIBIANS	FISH
Vancouver Island marmot	Eastern peregrine falcon	Timber rattlesnake*	Longjaw cisco
Black-tailed prairie dog*	Arctic peregrine falcon	Blue racer *	Atlantic whitefish
Eastern cougar	Whooping crane	Lake Erie water snake	Silver chub*
Black-footed ferret	Eskimo curlew	Pacific gopher snake*	Gravel chub*
Sea otter	Greater prairie chicken	Pigmy short-horned lizards*	Pugnose minnow*
Northern kit fox		Eastern tiger salamander*	Banff longnose dace
Northern Rocky Mountain Wolf		Small-mouthed salamander*	Black redhorse*
Wood bison
Blue whale		Blanchard's cricket frog*	Shorthead sculpin
Humpback whale			Aurora brook trout
Right whale
Grey whale

INVERTEBRATES (Incomplete)

MOLLUSCS

Yellow lamp mussel*	Tan blossom pearly mussel*
Gatineau tadpole snail	Laird Hot Springs physa
Mud puppy mussel*	Bean villosa*
Banff Springs physa

* Peripheral - rare, threatened or endangered within most or all of its Canadian range, although not in its range as a whole.

LONESOME GEORGE

Consider the plight of Lonesome George, the Pinta Island tortoise who probably is the world's loneliest creature. Lonesome George is the last known member of his subspecies, the last to carry the traits peculiar to his breed. There are no known females of this particular giant Galapagos Island tortoise.

And Lonesome George is expected to live another century!