THE HISTORY OF THE WATCH.

By OPIE READ.

[Copyright, 1899, by Opie Read.]

Broomberry was on his way down town, intending to get off at the Van Buren street station. Just before reaching that point an acquaintance sat down beside him and began to talk about a murder that had been committed just a year before on the North Side, Chicago. Being a city hall man, Broomberry's acquaintance knew a great deal about the murder. He knew old Kloptock, the victim, and in an exceedingly discreet and unkened voiced manner he intimated to Broomberry that he had a pretty shrewd idea as to who committed the deed.

By this time the train had passed the Van Buren street station—was just pulling out, in fact—and Broomberry, determined not to miss an appointment, jumped off the train. He looked at his watch a minute later and found that in jumping off he had broken the crystal. He kept his appointment and then stepped into a jeweler's to get a new crystal.

"Where did you get it?" the jeweler asked when, after completing his work, he handed the watch to Broomberry.

"I got it from a friend of mine. Why?"

"Nothing. Only you've got a rare watch, not in value, but as to number. About 80 years ago a company of men built a factory at a little town called Romney, in Massachusetts, and began to manufacture watches; but, as some sort of disaster befell the concern, only three watches were ever completed, and this is one of them."

"You don't say so!" exclaimed Broomberry. "Well, well, and I should not have known of the rarity of my property if I hadn't broken the crystal in jumping off a train this morning! Do you know what I'm going to do? I'm going to trace this watch back to the factory if I can, and I'm going to write a description of the hands through which it has passed and make a book of it. Won't that be an odd little volume, 'The History of the Watch'?"

"I am much obliged to you, sir. You've given me an idea, and, to a man who is so unfortunate as to be compelled to make his living by thinking, an idea is almost a necessity. Ah, but pardon me for not answering your question! I got the watch from Henry Lucas; gave him $45 for it about two months ago. If the history should be interesting enough to print, I'll give you a copy of it. Good day!"

Broomberry called on Henry Lucas. He found his friend absorbed in the work of "running up" figures in an immense book.

"Ah, Broomberry! Sit down!"

"No. I haven't time. Say, where did you get this watch? Only three of them made and all that sort of thing. Just want to get the history of it, you know."

"I bought it from a fellow named Martin Kelly."

"Where do you suppose I can find him?"

"He works in the postoffice."

Broomberry went to the postoffice. He had struck a new line of work and was delighted. Mr. Kelly was easily found.

"I got it from Mark Hammonds," said he.

"The deuce you did!" Broomberry exclaimed. "Why, he was the cause of my breaking the crystal this morning. I was talking to him and passed my station and then had to jump off. I'll go right down to the city hall and see him."

"Where did I get it?" Hammonds replied in a careless sort of way. "Well, let me see. I got it from J. H. McPeal, a big furniture dealer on the West Side."

"All right. I'll go over there and see him."

The great furniture dealer—a smooth, well fed, baldheaded man—was busy in his office when Broomberry entered.

"Well, sir, what can I do for you?"

"I came to ask you about this," said Broomberry, taking out the watch.

"Don't know anything about it, sir. Good day!"

"Excuse me," said Broomberry, "but my friend, Mark Hammonds of the city hall, told me that he got it from you."

"Ah! Let me see it. Yes, that's so," he added, when Broomberry had handed him the watch, and then, with an air of business, as though he had been rather lax with the ethics of trade and must now, as a recovery of principle, make a show of briskness, he asked,

"But what about it, sir—what about it?"

"Nothing. Only I should like to know where you got it."

"Yes, but I am very busy today—exceedingly busy, sir. Can't you call some other time?"

"Oh, of course! But it won't take a minute to tell me where you got it if you know."

"Yes, yes, that's so. But I'm extremely busy. Let me see. We took it in part payment on a lot of furniture—from, let me see—Stevens," he called. A man entered and said, "Yes, sir."

"What's the name of that boarding house woman that couldn't, or rather wouldn't, pay for her furniture in money, and we had to take a watch? What is her name? Quick; I'm busy."

"Mrs. Caddo, sir; 742 Limbill street."

"Yes, that's correct. Good day, sir!" Broomberry hastened to the boarding house of Mrs. Caddo. She would have talked an hour about the watch, or by it either. She would have told of the myriad of trials that came to the widowed keeper of a boarding house, and she did tell of a certain harness maker named Sam Haines, who had boarded with her, who was drunk nearly all the time, who positively refused indeed in a most insulting manner to pay his board, but who, after being threatened by the law, and by a certain enormous policeman who knew the widow quite well, consented to give her his watch. This Mr. Sam Haines could be found in Madison street, near Robey.

Broomberry found the harness maker drunk and communicative. He got the watch of a certain pawnbroker, and would neglect his work to go and show Broomberry the place.

"Oh, no! I can find it easily enough," said the visitor, taking down the number.

"But you can't find it as well as I went with you," the accommodating harness maker insisted. "You bet I'll go with you. Bet your life on that! You're my friend. Bet your life on that!"

Broomberry hastened away and heard something that sounded like: "You go to hades, then. Bet your life on that!" as he went out.

The pawnbroker remembered the watch and, turning to his books, said that it had been sold to him by one H. J. Miles, 426 Rockland street.

Broomberry started out to look for the street and soon discovered that there was no such place. He returned to the pawnshop.

"The fellow that sold you this watch must have come by it dishonestly," he said to the broker.

"Very likely, sir. We have no means of finding out, you know. All we can do is to take the name and address, or what we suppose to be such."

"Yes, that's true, I suppose. But do you think you'd know the man if you were to see him again?"

"Yes, I think so."

"Have you ever seen him since he sold you the watch?"

"No, I think not."

"I have," said a boy standing at the back end of the place.

"Good! But do you know where he can be found?"

"I don't know where he stays, but I have seen him go up into a gambling house."

"Well, now, if you will go with me and point him out I will pay you well for your trouble."

Every day for four days the boy went with Broomberry and stood near a narrow stairway on Clark street, and, just as they were about to leave the place on the evening of the fourth day, the boy clutched Broomberry's arm and said:

"That's him going up now."

berry, taking no notice of his ill humor, sat down.

"I am about to write a little history," said he, "and think you may be able to help me out on it. I have in my possession a watch which I have traced to you, and I should like to know where you got it."

The fellow jumped up, knocked Broomberry down and disappeared through a back door. When the historian got up and brushed himself, he was told that a policeman had caught the fellow—a singular outcome surely.

The fellow was brought back and then, together with Broomberry, was taken to a police station, where the historian related his story, and then there came a sensation. The watch had belonged to old Kloptock, and Broomberry had found the murderer.

They Were Poorly Raised.

In the train sat a queer old Quakeress. She wore a silver gray dress, snowy collar and such a sweet gray hat. She was a big, handsome woman, and her large, Madonna face beamed with benevolence and love. A ruby or a diamond ornament would have marred her beauty. Two smart commercial travelers stepped into the same carriage with the old lady. After they had discussed the spirit and tobacco trade awhile they looked around at the Quakeress. Then they looked at each other, smiled, and one remarked in an undertone, "Billy, I guess the old lady is inflated with Quaker yeast."

Without lifting her eyes the old lady remarked, so low that the passengers could not hear it, "If thy father and mother had consumed more sweet Quaker yeast and less bad beer and tobacco, thee would have been better raised and better bred." Then it was so still that you could hear the engine pump.—Christian Advocate.

Enjoying Warm Weather.

It can be enjoyed even in the heated city. Cool blood, an energetic system and perfect health which come with the daily use of make life enjoyable even on the hottest days. The constant user of Abbey's Effervescent Salt escapes the oppressive mugginess of the warm weather, and enjoys its pleasantness.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt may be taken at any time. It makes a refreshing drink, and invigorating, health-giving tonic.

I have duly analyzed and tested several samples of "Abbey's Effervescent Salt."

I find it to be of very uniform character and composition, and sold in packages well adapted to the preservation of the Salt. This compound contains saline bases which form "Fruit Salts" when water is added—and is then a very delightful aperient beverage, highly palatable and effective.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt contains no ingredient of an injurious or unwholesome character, and may be taken freely as a beverage.

Artificial Teeth on Metal Plates

A dentist who knows his business, and one that has any regard for his patients, will always advise them to have a metal plate.

In view of the vast amount of injury done to the mouths of wearers of rubber or vulcanite plates, by the retention of undue heat, owing to the non conductivity of rubber, and as aluminum is now so cheaply produced, and making as it does a rigid, light, clean, unobjectionable plate there seems no reason why any person should wear a rubber or vulcanite plate. Not only this, but better results in fit and adhesion are obtained in certain cases, than in the use of rubber.

The above quotations are from hundreds of eminent dentists whose close observation in many years experience in plate work has learned them the many advantages of metal over rubber.

Many persons who are compelled to wear artificial teeth on a plate find that the ordinary plate causes heating of the mouth, bad taste, shrinkage of the gums, etc., finally causing the plate to get loose, sometimes sore lips, sore mouths and sore throats, and caused directly from the wearing of an ordinary plate.

We recommend a metal plate either of Gold, Platinum, Aluminum.

It is a conductor of heat and cold, it is non-irritating, and is thinner, lighter, and stronger than any other plate.

We have testimonials from persons for whom we have made metal plates—not one would wear an ordinary plate a day. You can have your impression taken, and a metal plate made same day, fully guaranteed because we make them ourselves, and know all about the material used. Call and see specimens of our work.

Every piece of work done by us must give entire satisfaction to the patient, else we will not allow it to leave our office.
