Labor Union Leader Suggests Basis For Wage Demands

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Unions will eventually base their wage demands on the national growth in Canadian productivity not on increases in output in individual industries, a national trade union leader forecast here.

Donald Secord, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC), made the prediction in a speech to the Western Ontario District Education Council.

"We have always approached the problems of collective bargaining in the good old free enterprise way of hard bargaining and figurative club - waving—fighting for all we could get on each occasion, without regard for the economic position of either the employer or the country as a whole," he said.

"I believe that as we become more mature in our outlook and begin to realize that the actions of one section of our economy have an effect on other sections, we will begin to adopt a more intelligent approach to satisfying the natural desire for a higher standard of living.

"The fact is that there is just so much in the pot and some day we will control the avaricious, whether it be an employer or a union, to the degree necessary to ensure a reasonably fair share for everyone."

Text of his remarks was released to the press in advance of delivery.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
3♠	Dble.	Pass	4♠
Pass	6♠

Opening lead—king of diamonds.

Good defense is mostly a matter of good logic. Granted that a defender sees only a portion of his side's cards, he should still be able to figure out the best defense practically all the time.

For example, look at this hand played in a team match. At the first table the bidding went as shown.

It is hard to justify South's last bid. It would seem that he had given his all when he opened the bidding, and that once his partner indicated a willingness to stop under game, South, having nothing to add to his original pronouncement, should have passed.

West led the king of diamonds and declarer let him hold the trick. Declarer hoped West would continue with a diamond or make a neutral lead that would permit South to take a diamond finesse and get rid of a spade loser.

West shifted to the eight of clubs, which East took with the ace. East now decided that West's club was a singleton, so he returned a club and that was the end of that. South romped home with eleven tricks.

East could have defeated the contract by returning a spade instead of a club, but this play, it must be granted, is easier to make when you see 52 cards instead of just 26. The main fault in the defense is rather attributable to West's play at trick two.

At the second table, the proper defense was found. There the bidding went:

The king of diamonds was led and ducked, as at the first table.

But West shifted to the ace of spades at trick two. He knew that East had to have two defensive tricks for the contract to be defeated. He intended to be guided by East's play on the ace of spades.

He was vindicated when East signaled with the eight. The spade continuation, followed by the ace of clubs, quickly settled declarer's hash.

West really had nothing to lose by cashing the ace of spades. If East had played low on the ace, denying the king, West could then shift to a club.
