FOAMTREADS
KAUFMAN

A man's foot just sink right down into these foam rubber soles and every little muscle relaxes. Foamtreads are light, flexible. Soles are welded to uppers, and cannot come loose. And when Foamtreads get soaked, just toss 'em in the washer.

Your dad a handyman? hardware!

Lives there a dad with soul as dead who never to himself has said, 'I sure could use a bit o' tool!' Most dads are firmly established as the family handyman and their equipment varies from the apartment dweller's compact tool chest to the basement or attic workshop of the home owner.

In either case, it's a certain that there are some special pieces of hardware or hand or power tools that will ease his tasks and give his work that real professional look.

Starting with the basic hand tools, he may need a new hammer, a set of screwdrivers, a plane, a carpenter's square, pliers, wrenches or saws and a chisel.

Getting into the power tool group, no handyman can afford to be without an electric drill. Once he has the power drill he will want the attachments and accessories made for his particular make.

As he progresses and tackles major jobs and furniture making, he will delight in a radial saw with its potential conversion into a planer, sander, sander or lathe.

Or perhaps he prefers the table saw with daddy attachments and gadgets that run it into a drill press.

Electric sanders will save dad a lot of enervating arm work, and the router performs miracles in decorating and carving.

The hand power saw makes those true cuts square and fast. They zip through a rugged two-by-four in a matter of seconds.

For metal work he will need several types of tin snips, ball-peen hammers, a good vice, soldering equipment and files.

A sturdy work bench, well illuminated and with plenty of drawer and storage space is a boon, no matter what his "specialty" may be.

Then, of course, there are many manuals and "how to" books on home craftsmanships that will teach him the tricks of the trade.

DOES HE JET AROUND?
For those short business trips, your Dad will enjoy one of the new compact airplane bags that hold an amazing amount in a kit to fit under his plane seat.

FOR THE FISHERMAN
Fishing Dads go for the new fiber glass rods that are made for either fresh water or deep sea angling. Spinning reels, lures, waders, ball boxes, fishing line, dry flies and new lures make great Father's Day presents, too.

Outboard motors, ship-to-shore radios, navigation instruments, foul weather gear to protect him from the rain or spray, deck shoes or, perhaps, a yachting cap may fill the bill.

FOR THE SKIN-DIVER
Skin-diving Dads have a very special set of needs. They range from "wet suits" to spear guns, and include underwater watches to time their air supply, fins, breathing equipment and a 4 underwater cameras and lights.

Dads with sports cars dot on the exotic accessories for their prized chariots and would welcome such gifts.

Court Supports Verdict
OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada has rejected an application by the attorney-general of Quebec for leave to appeal the acquittal of Dr. J. Conrad Simard of Hull, Que., on a charge of criminal negligence. The court's decision was announced Monday.

Dr. Simard was charged following the death in May, 1962, of a three-day-old baby. He was convicted by a jury of criminal negligence in the death and sentenced to a year in jail.

However, the Quebec Court of Queen's Bench set aside the verdict May 4 and ordered Simard's acquittal.

In asking for leave to appeal, the Crown said that the jury's verdict was not unreasonable and was supported by evidence.

It also said that the verdict was set aside solely because the Court of Queen's Bench came to a different conclusion on facts proved, and that the Court of Queen's Bench assumed facts that were not proved.
