Guest Speaker and their elected representatives. Dealing with the reports on the consumption of food by farm households in the three Maritime Provinces, the speaker described the close alliance between the National Health and Welfare Dept. and that of Agriculture. Copies of these reports are available, Dr. Abell said, and added "here is basic material which may be utilized by all of you in understanding the food habits in the Maritimes and in redirecting your efforts to bring about needed nutritional improvements. These improvements might be increased educational emphasis on the value of certain foods, in an increase in the attention to home canning and preserving of foods and an increased awareness of the influence of age, income and education on food habits."

The speaker explained a study made of 800 young Canadians in Alberta, Ontario and Quebec who were taking Agricultural courses and their plans for the future. The study revealed that for every four young men who planned to take up farming as their future occupation, one young woman planned to return to the farm. "For those of you who are interested in home economic extension work it helps to explain why it is so difficult to conduct courses with young rural women—they aren't remaining in rural areas," Dr. Abell said.

FARMER NEEDS A WIFE Courses in home economics should encourage rural girls to return to their communities to marry a man with a similar background and values and to settle down to enjoy and contribute to rural life. The farmer needs a wife "one of the surest ways of getting young men off the farm is to get young women off first," the speaker said. Dr. Abell gave an interesting review of her recent visit to many European countries and compared the routine of home economic and agriculture studies with the practice in Canada. The outstanding feature was the age of the girls. In Canada they are usually 17 or over when they first enrol, while in Europe many of them were about 15. This difference in age simply means that the Canadian rural girl is ready to start a career after her economic training while the European girls are not yet mature enough to leave their parents' home. The training in Canada is also different. Here the training emphasizes the science and theory as well as the practical aspects of home economics. This prepares our girls for a variety of jobs most of which are to be found in towns and cities. Dr. Abell said. The overwhelming emphasis in the European schools is on practical skills. "In one after another we were shown the kitchen, the dining room, laundry, poultry houses, cow stables, the rabbit hutch and the vegetable and flower gardens, in all of which the students spent the majority of their time. When they complete their training, they are ready to return to carry on similar practical work in their parents' (or other persons') house, until they marry and become the mistress of their own farm homes."

INTERESTING SURVEY Dr. Abell in her address also dealt briefly with "Human Relationships" and described an interesting survey made in Ottawa in which it was developed that several of the economics teachers recognized that their methods were almost completely authoritarian and that this might be the explanation for the lack of interest taken in certain class projects. Arrangements were made to plan and carry out a class project with the pupils, which proved highly successful. "Personally, I firmly believe that it is only by an awareness and appreciation of different human needs, values and expectations that we can hope to reach our maximum effectiveness as individuals, as home makers and as citizens," Dr. Abell concluded. Mrs. Michael Doyle, presided at the meeting and Mrs. Allison MacLeod introduced the speaker. A musical selection by the Central Royalty Glee Club under the direction of Mrs. Allison MacRae was splendidly rendered and enjoyed, as was also a musical selection by Mr. Robert Murray.

Largely Attended PRESIDENT'S REPORT The President, Mrs. Doyle in her report expressed the thanks of the Women's Institutes for the support given them by Mr. Baker and his department. She noted with deep regret the passing of Senator J. Walter Jones and paid tribute to his good farming practices and his wealth of sound ideas. Mrs. Doyle made reference to the A.C.W.W. convention which with Mrs. W. E. MacKinnon, health and social convener, she attended in Toronto last year. She also mentioned the Maritime tour of the A.C.W.W. at which the Prince Edward Island branches were hostesses. She was glad to note that a gracious and genuine welcome had been extended to the visitors at that time. The president was happy to report the success of the Music and Drama Festivals and noted that a keen interest is being taken in Farm Forum and Study Clubs. "Rural beautification," said Mrs. Doyle, "is siphoning its way into the remote areas of the Province. Mrs. Doyle told of the co-operation existing between Institute Branches and Home and School organizations, Civil Defence organizations and of the interest being shown in matters pertaining to Public Health by contributing to Red Cross, helping at Blood Donor clinics and procuring fish oil capsules."

Mrs. Doyle reported that the Handicraft Van with its efficient staff of teachers is proving very popular in rural areas. She expressed satisfaction with the co-operation received from the members of the executive and the former president, the supervisors and office staff.

AFTERNOON SESSION The afternoon session was presided over by Mrs. Murdoch McGowan, vice-president, from Killam. Reports were heard from the two Supervisors Miss Mary Robin and Mrs. Nell A. Matheson, convener of agriculture and by Mrs. C. H. MacGuigan, convener of citizenship. Miss Robin reported the organization, during the year, of three branches at Lower Newton, Peakes and Mount Herbert, bringing the total number on the Island to 323, with a membership of approximately 5,500. She noted that there were branches in all but 100 school districts and for this reason new branches might not be formed so rapidly. Prince County, it was noted, had 46 districts where there were no institute branches. Miss Robin recalled the visit of Institute members from all parts of the world to this Province last summer and gave a very interesting account of the impressions formed by some of the visitors, in letters they had written her. The extension service van, the European Disaster Fund, the Jubilee Endowment Scholarship and the Mysore project for the purchase of agricultural equipment for India were among the projects undertaken during the past year. "The problem of rural communities still occupy most of the Branch Institutes," said Miss Robin. She went on to point out that $19,148 had been spent on community projects during the past year. She observed that many Institute branches had for a number of years concentrated their efforts on the school and when that project had been fulfilled, felt that there was nothing further to undertake. This she felt was a mistake since a good hall and an active institute can do much to improve the social and cultural life of the community. "In the Kensington area," she observed, "several institutes were contributing to fire fighting equipment. Supervisor Robin noted an increased interest in Health and Welfare activities indicated by the amount of $2,783 contributed to Provincial Health and Welfare organizations, local hospitals and orphanages. She also reported that interest in cultural activities continued to grow as evidenced by the fact that $110 was spent on music, drama, libraries and other cultural enterprises as well as $2,547 on membership in the music and drama festivals. Boy Scouts and Girl Guides were substantially helped as well. "During the year 1953," Miss Robin reported, "374,364.18 had been raised by the institutes and had a capital of $23,979 to start their 1954 activities."

FOUR LEADERSHIP COURSES Miss Robin told the delegates that four leadership courses had been conducted during the year for Institute officers at Alberton, Parkdale, Montague and the Vo-
