AN INTENSE discussion—perhaps centered around the trials and glories of show business—is seen taking place here between "Charlie the Chamberlain" and Nina Keough, a member of a team of marinettes performing at the Confederation Centre's Lecture Theatre. The show opened yesterday afternoon and will run for the next five weeks.

Puppet Theatre Performance Draws Gales Of Laughter

Gales of laughter from an audience of small fry greeted the opening show yesterday of the Canadian Puppet Theatre in the Lecture Theatre, Confederation Centre.

Master of Ceremonies, Howard the Turtle, star of television's Hazle Duzle, introduced a line-up of rollicking acts which delighted both children and adults in the audience.

Farces on performers from The Beatles to Glenn Gould were included in the program, which also featured a "grin" fairy tale—an updated version of Rumpelstiltskin—and a thrilling but fight complete with fearless matador and stomping, wild-eyed bull.

One of the most successful numbers was a Can-Can performed by a chorus line of saucy French poodles.

Alex Edliff, part of the five-member troupe which puts on the show, entertained the audience in a sketch with a repertoire of folk-songs.

FOR ALL AGES
Other cast members are John and Linda Keough and their children, Nina, 17, and Peter, 15. They will be performing 14 times a week for the next five weeks at Confederation Centre. The show scheduled for Friday night, described by Mr. Keough as a "Spring 'thaw in miniature" is aimed at an adult audience.

Each of the shows, however, is written to reach all age levels.

Around 70 puppets, which include marionettes, hand puppets and blackout limbo puppets, are used here in the performances.

Rotary Breaker Tells Criticism in Poise

Commissioner George B. McClellan, RCMP, was a guest speaker at the weekly luncheon meeting of Rotary held at the Charlottetown hotel yesterday presided over by Rotarian Stirling McNeil, superintendent of the RCMP.

Speaking on "Criticism of Police", the commissioner dealt with the many and varied situations which confront the men under his command which require the use of a delicate touch which are expected to stand up to every kind of a "crazy" investigation. He cited several experiences, some of a minor nature, and some of extreme gravity.

"This is one of the biggest years in your history and you expect to be courteous and helpful. All our men ask for is a decent salary as real working Canadians and above all your trust and support," the Commissioner said.

It is well to recall that there is no five day week in the service, but rather 10 and a half hours of alert service in the interest of law and order on behalf of the decorative part of Canada," he said.

In expressing the thanks of the club to the Commissioner, Justice G. J. Tweedy said "It is a delightful human and moral adventure to have your contribution on behalf of the RCMP most interesting."

Commissioner McClellan was born in Moose Jaw, Sask., and received his education mainly in British Columbia and at the Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont. He is head of the security and intelligence branches during the war and was awarded the "King of the Medal" and star by the King of Norway.

Commissioner McClellan joined the RCMP at Vancouver in 1932 and his steady advancement and experience brought him to his present position last November.

Sinatra Tries Hand At Directing Picture

BY JAMES BACON
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Fearless Frank Sinatra is directing his first movie—although directors who have directed him might argue the point.

But officially, Frank is director of None But the Brave, which was filmed here, and his behavior is adding one more chapter in the life story of this most complex Hollywood star.

Sinatra the actor is a "one take" specialist, impatient with actors who renege on their word.

Sinatra the director is the opposite. A young actor hired for a bit part in the film all of 10 seconds on the screen spoke his line and made a fast exit.

"Happy," said Sinatra, who calls everybody Charlie, including girls. "You make an exit like that and you walk right on of the picture business. There's nothing more important in show business than getting off stage."

Then for 15 minutes, he patiently taught the younger help how to exit at the right camera angle.

TOBACCO SALES UP
Yugoslavian tobacco manufacturers report January to June tobacco sales up by 20 per cent over figures for the first five months of last year.

DEADLY DEER
A 1500 IN PICTURE
Fearless Frank—so called because of the only movie director who would stand with a camera that mostly doesn't speak English—also acts in the picture.

But he doesn't have the big role. These go to Clint Walker, television's Cheyenne, and Tatsuya Mihashi, a top Japanese actor.

Walker is thought the singer is the most relaxed director he has worked for.

"Frank knows I'm not used to acting without a horse under me," says his Clint. "He's very tolerant about that."

Comments Frank: "I still consider myself a singer. I still remember the first time I ever acted without the help of Co. Porter lyrics. I guess, in a way, it's the same with Clint and his horse."

Ten other key roles are played by Japanese actors who don't understand English. An assistant director interprets for Sinatra's commands.

REAL CHALLENGE
"I first felt the urge to direct five years ago," says Sinatra. "Directing is the real challenge of this business. Movies are a dirt money racket."

"Spontaneity is my style. I don't consider myself a director. I don't like to write a script 50 times. It is that wretched script 50 times. It is that wretched script 50 times."

Stanley Kramer directed him in Spain in The Pride and the Passion some years back. Kramer, who had his differences with Frank, recalls:

"He'd take quick look at the script and say: 'Let's get this circuit on the road.'"

"He wanted no rehearsals or run throughs. 'Keep the cameras turning,' he would say."

There would be one take.

SCENE CAME ALIVE
"But I realized that with that idea he had made the scene come alive—as if he had been rehearsing it a week. It could not be improved on and it Frank had done it any other way, he wouldn't be Sinatra. He is the master of naturalness in acting, much as I hate to concede it."

Another director who has made several pictures with Sinatra refuses to call this picture Sinatra's debut as a director.

"I'm just pleased that Frank never let me down. He never even pleaded on how a scene should be shot. But he often scolded me for renegeing."

"A Sinatra suggestion is more than a suggestion. It's an implied command."

Don't touch Daddy's paper

Every mother raises her children to respect the importance of today's newspaper. It goes with him Dad... having the whole family yield the daily paper until Dad himself has finished with it. And when he has finished with it, Mom and the children will take their turn at their favorite parts of the paper. None of your new-fangled inventions have eaten into the position the daily newspaper holds. A well-known study of the TV audience shows that "newspaper reading is the only form of mass communication which showed no reaction when TV sets were purchased." Whereas, the same study found, radio-listening, magazine reading and movie attendance went down when TV sets were purchased.
